LITTLE BITS MAKE BIG BITS

Like pigmies we do the limitless expanse of air and stars, pleading for single concessions. And the giant hills, built of little grains of sand and powdered matter; and the spreading sea, made up of little drops of water; and the blue sky, composed of atoms of ether; and the lives that stand out on the pages of Time, great because of their mastery of little things—all these point us back to the common road, whereon the patient multitude is climbing. To pick from another's doorstep a newspaper that has just been placed there by the carrier, may seem very trivial; to borrow one from a neighbor may be considered neighborly, and to carelessly pick one up, occasionally, off a library table or from those of the Y. M. C. A. rooms and stick it into one's pocket, may be thought nothing, but all these little things may lead to a disruption that may cause everlasting shame to come upon one.

It has been noticed that thoughtless or otherwise malicious persons have been invading the reading rooms of the Y. M. C. A., repeatedly, and appropriating to their own use items that interest them by clipping the same from various contributions, and thus rob from other readers matter of interest to them as well.

This is not all. The Intelligencer is sent to the Y. M. C. A. weekly; but, we are informed, is a hard paper to find there. Almost every week some person borrows it and neglects to return it.

We would kindly caution such persons, for ignorance of the consequences may lead to bad feelings some day when they are reminded of their little felonious tricks.

Furthermore, don't belittle yourself by borrowing your local paper, but support it with your subscription in advance. The Intelligencer far surpasses all other papers in this section, and costs no more. Think of it, we give two papers for a whole year for only $1.00.

CHATEAUBRIAND IN LONDON
A Picture of the English Capital of a Century.
"All the English are mad by nature or by fashion." Chateaubriand writes nonchalantly in the book of his embassy in London (1821), but he had a very gay time with the same lunatics. We hear of dinners, Almack's and la leu moude. "The day was thus distributed in London: At 6 o'clock in the morning one hastened to a party of pleasure, consisting of a breakfast in the country; one returned to lunch in London; one changed one's dress to walk in Bond Street or Hyde park; one dressed again to dine at 7:30; one dressed again for the opera; at midnight one dressed once more for an evening party or rout. What a life of enchantments! I should, a hundred times have preferred the galleys." One smiles and reads on. He found London full of recollections of Bonaparte. "The people had passed from the vilification of 'Nik' to a stupid enthusiasm. His colossal bust by Canova decorated the Duke of Wellington's staircase."
At an evening party at Lord London-derry's, the English premier, "I was presented by his majesty to a severe looking lady seventy-three years old. She was dressed in ermine, wore a black veil like a diadem on her white hair and resembled a queen who had abdicated her throne. She greeted me in a solemn voice with three mangled sentences from the 'Genevieve Christians'; then she said to me, with no less solemnity, 'I am Mrs. Siddons.' If she had said to me, 'I am Lady Macbeth,' I should have believed her."—John J. A Beckett in Catholic Quarterly Review.

Unfortunately Put.
"Uncle" said the impatient nephew, "you ought to go and see the new play. You would just like laughing."
The old man merely glared. In a few moments later there could be heard the sound of a scratching pen as he altered his will for the forty-fourth time.

Somewhat Mixed.
A young man who was about to be married was very nervous and while asking for information as to how he must set up the question, "Is it customary to kiss the bride?"—Brooklyn Life.

In Which are Recorded Some Happenings of the Recent Democratic State Convention

LIBERTY TONNISH, July 11, 1905.
DEAR EDITOR:
The other day Bill Giles, my neighbor, came down and sez, "Jerry, did you ever hear about that last Stat Convention which was held at 'Arca-burg' to nominate a State or Cor-t Judge? I tel you it was grate. You no Scot An'm was a candidat, and Horns Bloo called the Dimmyerat county Committe togther to elect a delegate to vot for Scot. They elected Cholly Chalfin delegat to vot for Scot, and sum feller by the name of Kiswill as an alternation. Well, Cholly Chalfin got a sore ton and coudn't ware his patent leather shoes, so he wad not go down and make the nunumshun speech and vot for Scot. Cholly is a particular kind of a chap that way and everything mus be rite up to the scratch. Kiswill he got loss sumwiler in the bushes and didn't shew up. Now Scot he needed vots as bad as ever my old wiskers needed trimmin, and he says to Sime Hufemen, you jes cum along and make the nunumshun speech and vot for me, and we will keep quite about it as it is a shtly unreglar peregudin, not strictly accordia to Hoil. Sime he says, by gum, I am your hukleberry. So Sime he went down to 'Arvrisburg' and made the nunumshun speech. I tell you Montour county had a rite to her representation, and sometimes you her to strain a point in politics, just like the ole women must straine the hare and corn kobs out of the milk, but them their feller in the las County Convention they strained the thing so god darn hard that wen they got throo they didn't hev any milk left in ther bucket. But I mus tel you about Sime's speech. He sez: me name is Nowal on the Grampion Hills, me fawther feds his sheep and rars his flock. I'm the riar raring ring-tailed smasher from Montour county, cum down to hev my say on dis ole occasion. I kin out-talk, out-jump, out-run, throw or wallop any other six-foot-ten of human nater in this here convention, if enny body hear dou belit jes tel him step up on the platform. I lumanat our Scot An'm for Suprem Jedge, an ennybody hear as sez he's not fit air a har an a thief to boot—Ber-r-r-r you yow chow! But that time sum feller up in the gallery boller, O, give us a rest. So Sime said he didn't no the rest and set down. I tel you Cholly Don'tly an his Fil-delphin crowd looked skeard. Jim Gavey lid in his closet and did the cum out until the nex day wen he sel dis id they tak that man. U-f-men away. This was tel Bill Giles, my nabor, tole me, an Bill he's a purty smart chap. He takes the Intelligencer an the Montour Dummymyrat both, an keeps red up on politics an the like.

Yours truly,
JEREMIAH GRIMES.
An Interesting Proposition.
In another column of this paper appears an advertisement directed to boys and girls who are ambitious to make their spare moments productive through clean, pleasant and remunerative enterprise. Adams's Magazine is a 32-page illustrated monthly magazine devoted to the home. It contains departments on fashions, embroidery, household hints, table dainties, flowers and plants, garden and farm. Beginning in the July number will be a serial story by one of the most noted and famous writers of romantic fiction in the world. The subscription price of the magazine is 10 cents a year, half of which is offered to the boys and girls who become subscribers. The publishers have set aside $65,000 in order to introduce the magazine in every locality in the United States, and it is by virtue of this appropriation that this liberal offer is made to young America.

RISE TABLE.
The Principal Dish at the Midday Meal in Java.
In Java, as in most really warm countries, it is customary to rise early and to take a cup of tea or coffee, together with a biscuit and some fruit, immediately on leaving one's bed. This is followed by a more substantial breakfast, but the first really serious meal is served at half past 12 o'clock and is the equivalent of the French "dejeuner a la fourchette" or the Anglo-Indian "briffin." This meal is called "risotto," "rystafel" from the principal dish, a very elaborate curry, in the preparation of which the Malay cooks are especially skillful.
The peculiarity of the rise table consists in the number and variety of dishes presented. From these dishes the guest has to select the materials which, together with the rice upon the soup plate before him, are to constitute his curry. It is also well to know beforehand that one is not required to lunch solely on curry, but that the rice table is succeeded by courses of ordinary luncheon dishes. It is a case, therefore, of "embarras de richesses."
The second danger is that of making up one's curry "not wisely, but too well," and leaving neither appetite nor capacity for the beefsteak or for any of the other solid dishes which subsequently appear and which under these circumstances only produce a feeling of mingled horror and consternation. It is then that one suddenly realizes that the rice table is merely a sort of tremendous "hors d'oeuvre."
There are two dangers to be avoided. In the first place, it is quite possible, in spite of the number of the dishes presented singly, to say nothing of an octagonal tray containing a separate chutney in each of its nine compartments, to get to lunch with no less solemnity, 'I am Mrs. Siddons.' If she had said to me, 'I am Lady Macbeth,' I should have believed her."—John J. A Beckett in Catholic Quarterly Review.

A LOVER OF SNUFF.
The Queer Will and Funeral of a Queer Englishwoman.
The will of Mrs. Margaret Thompson, which is preserved in the custody at Somerset House, England, is a tribute to the delights and consolations of snuff. The testatrix directed that in her coffin should be buried with her all her household articles and sundries of the Scotch snuff to cover her body, and this she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that precious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to bear the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, and at the door of the testatrix's house were to be placed two bushels of the same quality of snuff for gratuitous distribution. In order to avoid snuff being a mistake, there always is when I come in for anything good. The fact remains that the rest have gone and that I was told to wait for you.

THE PARSON BIRD.
The Tatt of New Zealand Can Talk, Crow and Whistle.
Among the feathered inhabitants of New Zealand there is a bird called the parson bird, or "tut." It is about the size and shape of a blackbird, but has a pair of delicate white tufts at its throat and is a glossy dark green overhead, which looks black in the sunshine. It can be taught to crow, to speak, to whistle tunes, and, besides these tricks, it has a repository which is not often equalled by any other feathered songster. At vespers it has a note like the toll of a bell or the clear, high note of an organ. It can imitate every bird in the bush to perfection. It will break off in the middle of an exquisite melody and indulge in a strange melody of sounds which are impossible to describe, but if you can imagine "the combination of a cough, a laugh, a sneeze, with the snoring of a name of glass," it will be some approach to the idea.
The "tut" nests twice or three a year and has large families. Like the other birds of New Zealand, it seems to be unconscious of danger from man. It is a pity that the birds of this island are becoming so scarce, for they speak to us of a time when nature was harmless, when the snakes, tigers and falcons did not exist.

The collision came. It was over in an instant. All he knew was the vivid sense of her arms clinging around his neck as he caught her up out of the seat and their lips had met for the first time with death three car lengths away.
He had left Rosewood that night. It was all he could do. He thought she would understand. If not, there was no longer but Mrs. Wilmington would enlighten her.
The Manubria business had been an opening held out by the old Darby Thornton for some time. It was a chance to make good by going out there and clearing up the old boy's mercantile interests before war broke out. He had stuck to it and made good, and the reward had come most unexpectedly when said old boy had taken a notion to die comfortably and opportunely and leave his accumulated possessions to the prodigal in the far land.
There had been no money during the year of work but of Gladys. He had left on the first boat for home to claim the promise of the tunnel kick and had found instead Estevan, a warranted imported antique, tall, suave and slightly grey, with an eye out for ready money.
The thought of it all made him desperate tonight. He put her from him almost roughly. In three weeks she would be the Countess Estevan, chateaufalote of some dinky little old castellated ruin in Austria. He was sorry that he had tried to see her, sorry he had come back, sorry he had made Calverton change places with him.
"You had better stop crying," he said. "Will be there in a few minutes. Estevan might not like it."
She smiled back at him, her eyes bright with tears.
"So you try to frighten the bad little girl into good behavior? Well, she goes on across worth a cent, Darby. Your boggy man is a sack of fragile, proper, tissue paper boggy man that the bad little girl has decided he isn't worth being afraid of."
"What do you mean?"
"Can't you guess? I expect others to be so good at guessing, you know. You expect to kiss a girl and go away to Manchuria—or was it the moon—and then come back and find love in her eyes. What was it like this?"
She was laughing at him. He felt angry and obstinate.
"Can you say that you never loved me?"
"No, I cannot." Her eyes met his with calm, defensive candor. "Of course I loved you. Do you think I would have kissed you that day if I had not? And you're right about the other too. I shall always love you."
He bent toward her with keen, half shut eyes.
"And yet in three weeks you will be his wife."
"No, I won't. Do you think I could—after tonight? I shall break the engagement tonight. You have accomplished that at least. Now, take the first boat back to Manchuria."
He smiled slowly and happily. She had not heard yet of the accumulated possessions.
"We've turned out of the park," he said. "I don't want to go to the house and face a crowd. Gladys, look at me, no, straight in the eyes, please! Try to think quickly. I've come all the way around the world to see you. I've always wanted you, you know that. I was afraid before, and I ran away like a coward and didn't even give you the chance to refuse me. Will you refuse me now?"
"As if it made any difference?" Her eyes were clear and true and a somewhat indignant. "If I have enough money to satisfy even Aunt Victoria and her little crowd, isn't there enough for you? If you go back there—"
"What?"
"If I give away all the money and come after you?"
"Come, now!"
Her lips were half parted, her eyes wistful and troubled.
"It will be easy to come back and break the engagement then. You will only have to present your husband."
"I'll dare!"
He tapped on the glass slide and gave an order to the driver, and they turned back down the avenue just as the bells were chiming midnight.

Poetry For the Jury.
"I once won a case with one of James Whitcomb's poems," says Congressman Brice of Indiana, who is a lawyer, "and so I stand for him. I was defending a man charged with stealing silk, and it looked so bad for him that I decided on an appeal to the jury. I got the best I could with the evidence, but my bank must on the fact that the defendant was a young man with a wife and child and that it would go hard for all of them to have him go to the penitentiary for a term of years."
"My whole argument led up to the point where I closed with Lilly's little poem 'Back From a Two Years' Sentence.' When I finished, the jury was in tears, and even the judge and the attorney for the prosecution were affected. The jury took just one ballot whole world and the man was acquitted and returned a verdict of 'no guilty.'"

Italy and Her Criminals.
In Italy, which is a famous criminal trial is on the newspapers takes sides violently, search for evidence and assume all the prerogatives of the court. That they are even more sensational than the American press in this regard is indicated by the fact that the Italian reading accounts of great cases in the American papers are always struck with the moderation of tone shown and wonder how it is that Americans take so little interest in what concerns the whole world and the masses of a great people, say the Italians, "but could; they don't even warm to their own criminals!"

St. Walter Scott's Funeral.
That is a touching story told of the funeral of Sir Walter Scott. The road by which the procession took its way wound over a hill, whence can be seen one of the most beautiful of landscapes. It never fails to warm hearts to gaze upon the scene, and when talking a friend out to drive he never failed to stop there and call the attention of his companion to the most beautiful points of the view. Few could refrain from tears when carrying their master on his last journey, the horses stopped at the old familiar spot, as it were, for him to give a last look at the scene he had loved so well.

Every pain in the breast, difficult breathing, palpitation, fluttering or dizzy spell means that your heart is straining itself in its effort to keep in motion. It is dangerous. Some sudden strain from over-exertion or excitement will completely exhaust the nerves, or rupture the walls or arteries of the heart, and it will stop. Relieve this terrible strain at once with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. It invigorates and strengthens the heart nerves and muscles, stimulates the heart action, and relieves the pain and misery. Take no chances; make your heart strong and vigorous with Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "I suffered terribly with heart disease, have been treated by different physicians for my trouble without results. I went to a physician in Memphis, who claimed that I had dropsy of the heart. He put me on medicine, but my trouble with his medicine he came near making a final mistake. Some time before this a Mr. Young, of St. Louis, was in our town. He saw my condition, and recommended Dr. Miles' Heart Cure to me. I gave it little attention until my return from Memphis, when I concluded to try it, and am pleased to say three bottles cured me."
