How's This?

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

We, the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions, and financially able to carry out all obligations made by his firm. Wholesale Druggists, toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Christmas is rapidly approaching. The man with plenty has no reason to complain.

Next in order will be the holiday festivities. Now old 1905 enters on the last lap of Time's cycle.

Now get down to work again for three weeks.

Old King Bureau is beginning to cut up gay capers.

Try some pepin for that case of indigestion.

Remember the charitable institutions during the holidays.

Big perks now enlist the attention of rural communities, just as big hunting stories interest city chaps.

Save your fruit trees by learning how to spray to destroy the San Jose scale.

It is hoped that a year hence we will have a great deal more to be thankful for.

The Christmas rush promises to set in early this year.

The holiday rush will soon be in earnest.

Buy a snow shovel now and have it ready for the next snow. Then be a public benefactor.

That rise in the river is good for fishing purposes at any rate.

Good farm for rent in Dairy township, Montour county.

M. L. SHEER, Jerseytown, Pa.

Gradually the stars are denning their holiday attire.

Even if the Star escapes a violent death there is grave danger that he may be frightened to death.

Dividing the costs is a good way of getting rid of petty cases in court.

Of course Congress will not be expected to get in good running condition until after the holidays.

The coming three weeks promise to be remarkably busy in the Danville stores.

One of the unpleasant features of the average cold wave is the suddenness of arrival.

Shop early. By doing so you will be showing your good sense and get more satisfaction out of your dollars.

Mr. F. B. Meuschke, of near Exchange, gave us a business call on Monday.

Mr. J. M. Moore, of near this city, while in town Tuesday on business, called upon us and renewed his subscription for 1906.

Congress will wait until after the holidays before taking up the big topics.

Ice harvesters are now beginning to look forward hopefully.

Trespass notices for sale at this office. Two for 5c, or 25c a dozen.

Anthony Schott, of Selinsgrove, spent Sunday with his family in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sieder and children, of Sunbury, spent Sunday with relatives in this city.

Miss Lois Dietz, of Norristown, is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dietz, East Market street.

Job Printing of all kinds properly executed at reasonable prices, at the Intelligencer Office.

Miss Mary Lyons, of Kilmegrove, spent Sunday with friends in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Winters, of Sunbury, spent Sunday with relatives in this city.

Professors J. Miles Dorr, Schuyler Irwin and Isaac Acor gave us very pleasant calls during their attendance at institute in this city this week.

We have received a number of personal letters of praise on our special edition of last week which we wish to acknowledge through the columns of the Intelligencer.

Tracy S. Pettiglow, Esq., promoter of our new Rural Telephone System, is now busily engaged finishing up a fine directory of 1500 copies, at this office.

The early buyer will be better satisfied with his purchase than will the person who waits until the eleventh hour to select his Christmas gifts.

Mr. D. W. Diehl, of Strawberry Ridge, with his mother, Mrs. Daniel Diehl, of Exchange, gave us a business call Thursday afternoon.

Why not help the clerks and your selves by buying our presents early? Christmas shopping may be made easy for all concerned by starting now using the morning hours as far as possible.

No matter what your business, use good printing. It's the dress by which the public judges you. We can please you and make your printing a profitable investment.—The Intelligencer Printing, rear of No. 10 West Mahoning street.

LADIES!—I want all to know of the splendid opportunity I can give any woman whereby she can actually turn her spare time into money. The work is very pleasant and will easily pay $18 p. week. There is no deception about this. No experience necessary. If you really want to make money, write to me at once. Address, HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH, Box H, Joliet, Ill.

The Intelligencer is at your service as a news or advertising medium. We await your commands.

Mr. Jonathan Rudy, of near this city, renewed his subscription yesterday and gave us a pleasant call.

Mr. L. O. Everett, of near Pottsgrove, gave us a pleasant business call Thursday. He has a fine farm for sale near that place and offers it at a very reasonable price. See his advertisement in another column headed "For sale—a small farm, etc."

The prosperity of the railroads and the recent breaking of the steel rails have occasioned an unprecedented demand for steel cars and other cars, locomotives, rails, and railroad equipment generally, and the steel and iron industry enjoys a stronger statistical position than at any time during the past two years.

Annual election of directors of the Montour Mutual Fire Insurance Co. will be held on Monday, January 1st, 1906, at the Company's Office, 221 Mill street, Danville, Pa., between the hours of 1 and 2 o'clock P. M., in accordance with the by laws of the company. 12 22

Postmaster General Cortelino is probing a Pittsburgh mining company which has on its list of officers and directors the names of many men of prominence. It's an old game to catch goldbugs with the use of names of prominent people, and many honest people have been separated from their money in this way.

Charles Dana Gibson has sailed for Europe, where, it is understood, he will study painting. His going is America's loss, for it will be deprived of the cartoons which nobody but Gibson himself can make. He is taking big chances, for it is not a certainty that American lovers of the artistic will prefer a Gibson painting to a Gibson drawing. He is going to Europe at the expense of his loyal American public.

Last week we published a list of items from Exchange, which we understand, were meant for slander more than anything else, the first we have published that had no name signed to them. This was a breach to our rules, but we thought there was nothing harmful in them and gave them space. Henceforth NO items will be published without a signature attached. Such conduct is the work of cowards and is never meant for any good, generally for revenge through jealousy of some sort. Any community can do without these disturbers of the peace.

PEPSOIDS Cure Dyspepsia. Dr. Oldman's Prescription in concentrated form for indigestion, acid and all stomach trouble. Price 50 Cents.

To Fight the San Jose Scale. The first orchard demonstration under the auspices of the State Department of Agriculture ever held in Montour county took place on the farm of E. G. Wertman, Mahoning township, yesterday afternoon.

The "demonstration" had been well advertised and Mr. Brinkerhoff found a good sized audience awaiting him at the Wertman's orchard in the number being inquired of ladies. Mr. Wertman, as required to do, drove down to this city and hauled the "demonstrator" along with his outfit up to the farm. The spraying outfit consists of a sprayer mounted in a barrel, a large iron kettle, two pieces of hose each twelve feet long and a bamboo rod ten feet in length. In addition to hauling the spraying outfit to and from the station the farmer is expected to entertain the "demonstrator".

Mr. Brinkerhoff's duties as "demonstrator" consist in actually making the "California Mixture" before the assembled farmers, which he did yesterday by putting the three ingredients—lime, sulphur and salt—into the iron kettle and boiling them together one hour and fifteen minutes. This was followed by a practical demonstration in spraying, some ten trees being treated.

Mr. Brinkerhoff gave a talk of over an hour and answered many questions relating to the matter in hand. It develops upon the "demonstrator" to teach the farmers how to recognize the San Jose Scale, which closely resembles some other insects of its kind. It is, however, much more destructive than any other kind of pest, as it not only injects poison into the tree but at the same time sucks out the sap.

A large number of twigs were brought to Mr. Wertman's orchard yesterday for inspection. Mr. Brinkerhoff, however, was unable to find any scale. He is inclined to think that the farmer in too many instances brought him twigs of old trees, instead of breaking off branches of younger trees, such as peach, pear, &c., which are more likely to be infested. Old trees, especially the ones of the branches, are more likely to escape the San Jose Scale.

New Delivery Wagon. Fallon Brothers have put a new delivery wagon into commission, which is about as handsome a vehicle of its kind as is to be found in this section. It was manufactured by our townsmen, D. C. Hunt, who stands foremost among our carriage and wagon makers. Fallon Brothers wagon attests to the manufacturer's skill by the artistic manner in which it is painted as well as the excellent workmanship visible in all its parts.

Too Cold to Build Roads. State Highway Commissioner Hunter has suspended actual road construction in Pennsylvania until next spring. The Commissioner will, however, continue to make surveys for new work so long as the weather is pleasant. The entire department force will soon be put to work getting ready for new road work to be begun next spring.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

Goodness Knows. Mrs. Naylor, of Judge, I want you to try some of my angel cake. Judge Sokem (absent)—What is it charged with—Cleveland Leader.

To believe is to be strong. Doubt cramps energy. Belief is power.—Robertson.

A STUPID FELLOW

By EDITH M. DOANE

Copyright, 1905, by F. C. Eastman

The low, rambling farmhouse lately purchased by the Iod and Gun club lay glistening in the early morning sunshine. Long shafts of golden light stretched across the lawn screened porch. In the old fashioned garden at one side huge pineys lifted heavy, dewy heads. A robin's song came from the orchard, and over all brooded the sweet silence of the Berkshire hills.

A mischievous little breeze strayed around the corner of the clubhouse, shook the dew from the lilacs, scattered the pink petals of an almond bush and with a sudden little puff, tossed the bright hair of the girl who stood on the clubhouse steps in the food of sweet June sunshine, her eyes fixed on the distant hills.

"The hills, rock ribbed and ancient as the sun," she murmured softly, stretching out her arms with an impulsive little gesture. She dropped them suddenly, a quick wave of soft color dyeing her cheeks as she encountered the admiring glance of a slender, dark eyed man who came lazily toward her.

"Invoking the poet of these hills?" he said easily. "By the way, what do you say to a little pilgrimage to his old home this afternoon? It must be somewhere near here. Perhaps Ellerton will know," he went on, turning to a tall, broad shouldered young fellow who came toward them across the lawn with long, easy strides. His red, long, wet boots and his mud streaked clothing bore mute witness to his recent occupation. At sight of them he snatched off his cap and waved aloft an adder twig from which glistened the body of a good sized trout.

"Three ponds if he's an ounce, Miss Blair," he called, flourishing the branch triumphantly. "The old stammer! I knew I'd fetch him, and in time for your breakfast, too," he went on eagerly. She thanked him in her pretty, gracious way, smiling into his unburdened face, and still smiling, her eyes followed the tall strong figure as he proudly bore his trophy through the garden in search of the cook.

Robert Underwood, leaning on the veranda railing, had watched the little scene impatiently. "Poor duffer!" he said aloud. "Pity the fates didn't give the same careful attention to his brains that they did to his back account!"

"The smile faded from the girl's face. 'Hardly the remark to expect from his chief friend,' she said coldly. He colored with annoyance. 'Oh, he's a good fellow,'" he returned lightly. "Say, Billy," he demanded as Ellerton came again into view, "do you know how far it is to Bryant's place?"

"Bryant?" The blue eyes were distinctly puzzled. "What Bryant is that? Not Tom Bryant on our team? I didn't know he had a place near here."

"Never heard of a poet named Bryant, I suppose," Robert returned, with a quick, amused glance at Kathleen, whose eyes were again fixed on the distant hills.

Billy's good humored face colored under the coat of tan. "Oh, yes, I don't know much about him," he went on, with an embarrassed little laugh. "I'm hoping to take Miss Blair over this afternoon—that is, if I can find anything to take her in." Underwood, with calm assurance, winked at him.

"Oh, I say, Miss Blair, I wanted to take you a run over to—" Billy stopped abruptly, his eyes fixed miserably on the couple above. He saw Robert Underwood's dark, alert face, the tender, troubled eyes of the girl, the sweet and gracious beside him, and in a sudden, unhappy flash of comprehension he understood. "And I imagined she might care for such a stupid fellow as I am," he thought bitterly.

"Take my car. I shall not be taking it," he said shortly, and plunging his hands in his pockets, he turned abruptly and walked slowly away over the dew wet grass.

The automobile had been left at the entrance of the quiet, elm shaded street. "It would be a desecration," said Kathleen, "to bring it nearer." She and Robert Underwood approached the wide porch of the low, yellow house the poet had loved.

Kathleen wandered happily through the quaint, old fashioned rooms, examined the funny little wooden cradle, climbed delightedly to look from the corner window where the poet sat when he wrote his first verse. She snatched his favorite chair with reverent fingers, stood with hushed awe in the room where the great man had died and lingered in the narrow path leading to his daughter's house, where, between walls of birches which, like slim, white sentinels, clasped leafy protecting arms overhead, the poet had his daily pilgrimage of love.

The hush of late afternoon lay over hill and valley and long shadows flickered through the arching elms when finally they turned from the old home, and drove slowly down the winding road. Up and down hill, over bridges spanning tumultuous brooks, past grassy hollows filled with dandelions, the car sped smoothly on, following the road in and out beside a noisy stream.

A sharp cry—a warning shriek from the automobile—the wild plunge of a terrified horse—a woman's frightened scream!

"Quick! Jump! Oh, do help them!" cried Kathleen, springing distractedly to her feet. But Robert Underwood sat motionless.

"It is no use," he muttered, pale with fright. The horse plunged wildly toward the stream, and, stuck with horror, Kathleen closed her eyes to shut out what must follow.

Another frenzied call for help, an answering cry, quick parting of the alder bushes fringing the opposite bank, and a familiar, mud streaked figure, like a young giant's, plunged knee deep into the stream.

A moment, and he had the frenzied horse—another breathless moment, and he had the frightened woman safely on their way. But his voice was unsteady and the hot color stung his face as he caught Billy's scornful eyes.

Very unlike the young man he had been used to treating with respect, the velvet contempt was this young fellow who walked with calm assurance toward the willow shaded bank where Kathleen stood.

She smiled a nervous little greeting as she advanced to meet him with outstretched hand and tender, shining eyes. "I am so proud of you!" she said, a little catch in her voice.

He took her hands and held them tightly in his own. "You have been badly frightened," he said, with quick anxiety, noting her tear stained face, the tremulous lips, the lashes wet with recent tears.

"Because I thought you would be hurt," she answered softly. In the road behind them Robert Underwood had reentered himself in the car and with assumed nonchalance was rolling a cigarette. Screened by the sheltering curve, they were alone in the silence of the woods.

Half cretulous, with eyes radiant with the dawning light of a great happiness, she searched the sweet, half averted face.

"Would you have cared?" he whispered under his breath and then, "I thought it was Underwood," he added huskily.

"There was never any one else," she answered, and in the silence her words came clear and sweet. He drew her closer, and a wave of delicate color dyed her face, but the blue eyes shined bravely. "Never any one but you," she murmured softly.

Glass Houses. There were whole streets in Tyre entirely occupied by glass works, and it is stated that the first glass houses were erected in Tyre. The glass houses of Alexandria were highly celebrated for the excellence of them. Their workmen and the extent of their manufactures. Layard, in writing about his discoveries among the ruins of Nineveh and Babylon, says: "In one chamber were found two entire glass chandeliers, the one of which was a bowl, the other a vase. The glass is of the same quality as the small bottle found in the ruins of the northwest palace during the previous excavations and now in the British museum. On this highly interesting relic, the name of Sargon, with his title of king of Assyria in cuneiform characters and the figure of a lion. We are therefore able to fix its date to the latter part of the seventh century B. C. It is consequently the most ancient known specimen of transparent glass."

SCHUYLER. Mr. Editor.—The rains of last Sunday and a week ago have supplied the wells and streams so that there is no likelihood of a scarcity of water during the winter.

The telephone line will be constructed to this place in the near future. The poles are being delivered along its line between this place and Limestoneville, which will give us communication with the neighboring towns and fill a long-felt want.

Last Sunday evening the St. James Lutheran church was reopened and rededicated. The services were to have been held in the morning but the weather was so inclement that they were postponed. The repairs took four and one-half months to complete, and cost nearly $2800. Rev. T. Myers, of Catawissa, preached the sermon, Rev. J. H. C. Manifold conducted the dedication. The Rev. T. O. Stem, of the Reformed church, and Rev. H. V. of the Baptist church, took part.

Mrs. Heitzman and daughter, who visited at John M. Smith's, returned to their home at Muncy on Tuesday.

Mrs. H. M. Smith returned last Saturday from her visit "down country."

A little daughter of N. J. Menges fell and broke her arm at the wrist on last Friday.

Dr. Mumfey, of Turbotville, killed a hog last week that weighed 518 pounds—over a quarter of a ton. Can any of your readers beat it?

The Souvenir sent out by the Intelligencer is a very handsome publication, and does credit to the publisher.

Limestone Township is proud of the fact that she is the possessor of a real live Judge in the person of C. A. Wagner. Well, the Governor might have gone farther and done worse when he made the appointment.

"Charlie" is a man of good sound sense and judgment and as honest as steel. Long live the Judge!

The Snyder school, under the direction of Nellie Fetherolf, the teacher, gave an entertainment on Thanksgiving evening for the benefit of the organ fund. The scholars acquitted themselves very well, and the audience greatly appreciated their efforts. Sufficient money was realized to pay for the organ and left a snug little sum over.

Warrior Run Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold its anniversary on the 14th. The program will provide a pleasant evening for those who will be present, composing addresses and music, both vocal and instrumental. The Turbotville orchestra will furnish the instrumental music and the male quartette the vocal. Dec. 5, 1905. BILL

Comfy. Mr. Editor.—It is moderately cold at present and hope it will not get any colder. We need not wish for good roads any more this fall.

A number of the young people of this vicinity attended the entertainment at Snyder's school last Thursday evening. All reported it very good.

Mrs. J. Schooley is spending a few days with her daughter at White Hall.

David Strouse had the misfortune to lose a ten dollar bill last week one night.

Hunting season has expired and the game was not very plenty.

Jane Wilson is on the sick list.

Mr. Lloyd Snyder and Miss Emma Rhone were married last Thursday. A number of the boys and men formed a band and gave them some music Friday night.

Christmas Welcome to You-- We Hold Supremacy in Assortment and Price.

The Big Store is ready to welcome you in holiday tone. Every effort has been exerted to make our store particularly interesting. A large and wide gathering of articles for children and grown ups appropriate for Christmas gifts. Of course we shall be crowded more so every day but you can influence that more than we—it's a satisfactory plan to buy early, better assortments and better service—we are less crowded in the morning too.
