The Mary-laud Construction Company is still at work and with a continuance of the present mild weather the company hopes to put the finishing touches on the road yet this fall, so that the fine macadam highway will be ready to meet the demands of traffic next spring at a time when such a road will be most needed.

The rebuilding of the colvert at Cyras Childs' property near the old fair rgound, which formed the most difficult part of the work, is just now about completed. The contractors next will begin work on raising the crown of the road to its specified height and making such changes as may prove necessary in the drains along side of the road. A short period of favorable weather would enable them to make rapid progress in the work.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidney, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the day, and to get up many times during the might. ship making her furtive way through the woods. At a dozen paces from him she stopped and with a stick dug a hole in the ground at the foot of a tree and concealed something. When she had run away the inspector scooped out the dirt until he came to an oiled silk bag containing her ladyship's diamonds. They were all there to her last ring, and the inspector knew enough about precious stones to know that these were paste.

This happened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. What her ladyship would do without her diamonds at dinner time the inspector could not determine. Her secret burial of them meant to him simply one thing—she was going to be "robbed" of them. She would have to put up a claim of loss by daylight, and there would be a sensation. Either that or she must be "indisposed" at dinner time and not appear among her guests during the evening.

Her ladyship proceeded at once to business. An hour before dinner, and after all the guests, including the inspector, had been indulging in games on the lawn, she went to her room to discover that her diamonds were missing. There was a sensation at once. No one had seen any stranger lurking about, and the robbery must have been perpetrated by some of the servants. Including maids and valets, these numbered over sixty, and each one was obliged to come forward and be investigated. His lordship insisted on the most rigorous examination, and this led to protestations and hard feelings. Within twenty-four hours the house party was broken up and scattered, and inspector McDonald had to admit that he had no clew. The only thing his lordship onld do was to offer a reward, and he made it $25,000.

The inspector did not go with the others. He remained behind to look for clews. He held many interviews with his lordship and her ladyship together, and he had to admit the others. He looked straight into the eyes of the woman, but she did not falter in the gaze. He saw by her attitude that she was even ready to hear him say that she was the woman he saw and to drag from his pocket the bag of diamonds in corroboration. He dared not put her to the test.

When his lordship criticised his action in not overhauling the unknown woman, the detective could only swallow his chagrin and beg to withdraw from the case. Two hours later he was

"We are glad to hear that her lady-ship's diamonds have been restored to her. It is hinted that the person claiming the reward had the manners of the gentleman, though in disgulse."

"One of her brothers, maybe," said inspector McDonald to himself, as he turned to the case in his book and wrote "Closed" at the bottom.

Not long ago a certain clergyman from the west was called to a church in Jersey City. Soon after his arrival the divine's wife made the usual vists to the members of the parish. Where the Sea Disappears.

A girl was recently overtaken and drowned by the incoming tide on the west coast of France. A transplanted Breton said of this fatality:

"Can you, who see your own tides crawl in at the rate of ten feet or so an hour, imagine tides racing like wild white horses up the flat sands at the rate of half a mile a minute? The extraordinary flatness of our Breton coasts gives us these phenomenal tides. The sea does not rise and fall. It appears and disappears. You have a vast and flat plain of sand. At a set hour and sea the sea rushes in, white, wild, submerging this vast plain. At a set hour anseen hand sucks back the watersback thirty, forty, fifty miles—and nothing is visible but the plain of pale sand again. We unto such as walk on this desolate plain when the tide begins to rise, for they must drown! Nothing can save them."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Conscience.

A man, so to speak, who cannot bow to his own conscience every morning is hardly in condition to respectfully salute the world at any other time of the day.—Douglas Jerrold.

Mapleson's Ruse.

When Mapleson, the operatic manager, was on a tour in Dublin, Miles. Salla and Anna de Belocca were in the company. On arriving at the hotel both ladies chose the best suit of rooms in it, each saying, "These will do for me." "I shall have them," said Salla, "I am prima donnas," "There are two prima donnas," returned Belocca, "myself and Patti," This began a furious quarrel. Mapleson went to the hotel donnas, returned Belocca, "myself and Pattl." This began a furious quarrel. Mapleson went to the hotel keeper and ascertained that there were some other rooms nearly as good. He enjoined the man to declare that they were for Lady Spencer, wife of the viceroy, and stand to the statement. He then called him up and said loudly: "Both these ladies must have equally good rooms. Where are the others?" "The only others as large are reserved for the Countess Spencer," returned the hotel keeper. "But we could see them?" exclaimed both singers at once. "Oh, yes," said the man, leading the way. Belocca instantly flew upstairs past him into the suit and, locking the door in their faces, shouted through the keyhole that Lady Spencer must set on a best fixe evid. shouted through the keyhole that Lady Spencer must get on as best she could leaving Mapleson to congratulate him-self on the effect of his stratagem.

LIFE IN THE MIDDLE AGES. The Way In Sickness and Old Age Was Pittable Indeed.

Was Pitiulic Indeed.
Concerning the life of poor people
during the middle ages a writer says:
"In those bygone days of feudal rule the dwelfers in the country were almost invariably serfs, bound to the estate on which they were born and un-der the absolute rule of the owner. They were possibly better fed than at They were possibly better fed than at the present day, for butter, cheese and eggs were plentiful, and the fertile soil of italy supplied them with abundance of fruit and vegetables. The poor man held his plot of ground by the tenure of 50 many days in the year of service to his lord. But in sickness or old age 15 case was very pitiable, and we have a curious proof of this in a letter written in 1465 by the mother of Filippo Struzzi, at Florence. She is speaking of some old people on her estate in the country: Plero and Monna Clila are both alive and infirm. I have overflowed the field for next year, and, as I must put it in order, those two old people, if they do not die, must go and beg. Heaven will provide. This is no passing thought of the good lady, who was plous and highly esteemed, a friend of course, if heaven will take him.' Apparently a mereiful Providence had already provided for Monna Cilia!"

Physical Indications That You May Study For Yourself.

Every person carries about with him the physical indications of his longevity. A long lived person may be distinguished from a short lived person at sight. In many instances a physician may look at the hand of a patient and tell whether he will live or die. The primary conditions of longevity are that the heart, lungs and digestive organs as well as the brain should be large. If these organs are large the trunk will be long and the limbs comparatively short. The person will appear tall in sitting and short in standing. The hand will have a long and somewhat heavy palm and short fingers. The brain will be deeply seated, as shown by the orifice of the ear being low. The blue hazel or brown hazel eye, as showing an intermission of temperament, is a favorable indication. The nostrils being large, open and free indicates large lungs. A pinched and half closed nostril indicates small or weak lungs.

cates small or weak lungs These are general points of distinction from those of short lived tenden cies, but of course subject to the usual individual exceptions. Still, it is well acknowledged that the characteristics noted are expressions of inherent po-tentiality, which have been proved on the basis of abundant statistical evi-dence.—Medical Record.

Curious, but True.

Although difficult to believe, it is nevertheless true that the death of two half sisters, the daughters of the same father, occurred 170 years apart. The grandfather of the British minister, Charles James Fox, Sir Stephen Fox, married in 1654 and had a daughter born to him in 1655 who died in the course of the same year. He had several other children who grew up and married, but all of them died before the father and without issue. Sir fore the father and without issue. Sir Stephen not wishing his large fortune to fall into the hands of distant relato ran into the hands of askant reactives, married again at a very advanced age, and his youngest daughter was ore in 1727. She reached the age of ninety-eight years and died in 1825—that is, 170 years after the death of her oldest sixth.
