Does the engle tell its young to leave their cozy nest in the high, over-hanging cliffs and soar gracefully over the deep ravine? No. It teaches by example the use and power of their wings by fluttering before them, then tearing asunder their downy resting place, taking one on her back high up and then setting it free to do its best. The fete is conquered and the eaglet, through constant practice, follows the example of its mother to perfect flight.

ONCE more the mistake, if no the fallacy, of an American girl in buying a foreign titled husband has forced itself upon public attention. What has long been predicted is now likely to become a reality. Anna Gould has sued for a divorce from her or a divorce from her profligate and altogether worthless spendthrirt husband, the Count Boni de Castellane. Treated with discourtesy and contempt by her husband's high-toned relatives, with dishonor by her dissolute husband himself, and tired paying his gambling and other debts, she has at last asked for a dissolution of the alliance she once so eagerly sought, and for which unwise action she has paid so dearly. Or course, Count Boni and his titled recourse, Count Boni and his titled re-latives oppose the divorce. Under the French law, a decree of that kind dissolves any contract made between the parties relative to pecuniary settle-ments, each party resuming control of their own property. Count Boni is poorer than the proverbial church mouse, and his aristocratic family is about as wealthy. The whole gang have, no doubt, been living on the Gould millions, while despising and treating with the utmost contempt the treating with the utmost contempt the source whence those supplies came. All this is only what was predicted when this marriage was first an-

There has been a shortage of cars in the au-thracite regious because both the Reading Company and the Pennsyl-vania have of late been sending thous ands to Western Maryland and West ands to Western Maryland and West Virginia to bring the bituminous pro-duct of those regions where they may be needed should a strike occur. The Pennsylvania Railroad has begun to store coal for its motive power. Tem-porary storage plants have been es-tablished at all terminal points, and terminal points, and bituminous will be tablished at all terminal points, and great piles of bituminous will be amassed before the end of the present wage scale agreement. These are, of course precautionary measures, but it is more than probable they will have much to do in deciding the action of the miners when the first of April arrives.

—The Lehigh Valley Railroad directors at their meeting on Weinser day filled the vacancy in the board, created by the death of Alexander B. Coxe by the election of Hon. Simon P. Wolverton, of Sunbury. Mr. Wolverton has been associated for a number of years with the Reading and other coal companies as their counsel, and is a trustee of the Coxe estate, which recently sold its large coal and railroad interests to the Lehigh Valley. Mr. Wolverton is one of our most capable State attorneys and is thoroughly acquainted and posted in all matters pertaining to anthracite affairs, and thus becomes a strong acquisition to the Lehigh Valley board. Mr. Wolverton is very well known in this city and surroundings, having always entertained the most friendly,

We shall serve them uprightly and to the best of our ability. Again we say, thank you, fellow citizens of the Fourth Ward.

AN EFFECTIVE BAIT.

Clever Detective to Send After a Missing Debtor.

A registered letter is mighty effective bait. The Seventy-eighth street woman nibbled at the first throw.

"Of course it is for me," she said.
"That is my name and that was my address before I moved here."

"Yes, that part of it's all right," the postman admitted, "but it says 'esquire.' You're not esquire."

"No," sighed the woman, "but I'm sure"—

"Of course you are sure," he put in

"but I can't leave the letter. This is a registered letter, and we have to be very careful of registered mail. The best I can do is to give you the name and address of the writer. Then you can make inquiry and ask to have the letter addressed properly."

The woman eyed the prosperous looking missive yearningly, but since the compromise offered was the best bargain obtainable she accepted it. The situation was puzzling. The name of her benefactor was totally unknown. Fortunately he was situated in a downtown office building, so immediately after luncheon she attempted to cluck date the mystery of the registered letdate the mystery of the registered letdate the mystery of the registered let date the mystery of the registered letdate the mystery of the registered letter. Once inside the office she recognized her correspondent as the manager of a concern to which she had owed $2 for typewriting supplies for the last six months. She mentioned the letter; the man produced a bill.
"It was a copy of this," he said.
"You had moved—we could not find you—mere oversight on your part of course—still, in order to keep our accounts square—you understand"—

The woman was so mad she wasn't sure whether she understood or not, but she paid the bill. When she had gone the manager treated himself to a spirit toward Danville's progress, many times lending a willing helping hand in furthering a good cause. WILL NOT ABOLISH WORK TAX

The Intelligencer is able to give this morning to its many readers complete township returns, for which it is indebted to the efficiency of the complete rural telephone system, and to the kindness of its patrons.

All of the townships with the exception of Mayberry and Cooper voted on the new road measure, and, with one exception, the districts balloted in favor of retaining the old system of taxation. The townships' vote in detail follows:

THE PHENIX.

THE PHENIX.

Legend of How it Lived and Died and Lived Again.

The ancient tradition concerning the phenix has introduced into nearly every language the habit of applying that name to whatever is singular or uncommon among its kind. According to ancient writers, the phenix was a bird of great beauty about the size of an eagle. A shining and most beautiful crest adorned its head, its plumage contained nearly every tint of the rainbow, and its eyes sparkled like diamonds. Only one of these birds could live at a time, but its existence covered a period of 500 or 600 years. When its o monds. Only one of these birds could live at a time, but its existence covered a period of 500 or 600 years. When its life drew to a close the bird built for itself a funeral pile of wood and aromatic spices, with its wings fanned the pile into a fame and therein consumed itself. From its passes a worm was produced, out of which another phenix was formed, having all the vigor of youth. The first care of the new phenix was to solemnize its parent's obsequies. For that purpose it made a ball of myrrh, frankincense and other fragrant things. At Heliopoils, a city in lower Egypt, there was a magnificent temple dedicated to the sun. To this temple the phenix would carry the fragrant ball and burn to on the altar of the sun as a sacrifice. The priests then examined the register and found that exactly 500 years or exactly 600 years had elapsed since that same ceremony had taken place.

Modern Card Playing.

The gambling of today is a mild atfair compared with the extant records of English society. We shall never again see the days when General Scott won a fortune of £200,000 at whist, chiefly by dint of keeping sober. And high play, it must never be forgotten, is a relative term. When Lord Stavordale gained £11,000 by a single coup at hazard, his only comment was that if he had been playing "deep" he might have won millions. When the dimensions of modern wealth arp taken into account the wildest excesses ever witnessed at the card table would have a timid and parsimonious aspect to the bucks of the regency.—Times of India, Bombay.
