MUDSLINGERS AND MILLIONAIRES.

HIS is surely a great country. Here we have the possibility of a coal strike; "Pitchfork" Sena-tor Tillman is in charge of the Rail-way Rate bill; millionaires are chased into hidding; almost everybody with any money being "investigated;" a bill in Congress to limit individual fortunes, and the socialists are de-manding that the Federal Govern-ment or the State or the municipality

At the same time the miners and other unions are insisting upon the 'closed shop'' principle that no man shall have the privilege of working and goodness only knows how many other social and economic fermentations are under way—and yet the business in the usual way. The farm, the mine and the mill are turning out products on an unprecented scale, as by accepting the office internal frade was never so active, exports are of record-wreeking magnitude and everybody seems to be porion. as well as the bad, are impelled to unite for common defense. It would not be surprising to learn at any time that the Militonnires' Mutual Protective Union has been organized and that it had demanded concessions from the Amalgamated Mudslingers' Association (Thomas Lawson, President), coupled with the threat of a general strike of Million-aires and withdrawal of their capital, if these are not complied with. Jerry Benedict, standing on the edge of it all, feit the beauty and knew the loneliness. He had come to Havana at Tom's suggestion. "There is a good opening down here which might suit you," his brother had written. And now, on arriving, he found Tom gone to Cienfuegos, not to return for several days. Jerry, wandering about by him-self, had promptly fallen in love with the quaim little city, its gayly painted houses, dusky white clad men and pretty secoritas. Havana was not a bad place, he decided. But tonight he was restless. The mooy was almost too powerful in its splendor and charm. Turning away from the merry crowd that made him feej an allen and an outcast, he decided to walk to his brother's house in Vedado. There was a fresh coolness in the air. A walk would do him good. He struck accord-ingly into one of the nearby streets.

On his side the pavement was quite dark, but across the way the moon, re-flecting with dazzling brilliancy upon the pink and white houses, showed ev-ery detail of window and facade and revealed plainly any one within, who leaned out to breathe the air. Suddenly Benedict stopped short. In an upper window, alone, stood a girl, certainly the most exquisite girl Bene-citet ever had seen. Against the black-hess of the room behind, her face, turn-ed full toward the street, stood out as purely pale as a moon flower. Heavy masses of dark hair crowned the state-ly little head, and just back of the tiny car lay one splendid crimson blossom. Benedict cought his breath. The girl could not see him there in the darkuld not see him there in the dark-ss, he thought, and he remained monless, staring with eager eyes. Who uld she be?

"But you are quite excusable, senor," s said in pretty English. Again his es sought the window. "It is for me apologize," he laughed. "The sight the Senorita Carmela is reason ough."

LIFE'S LITTLE THINGS. They Go a Very Long Way Toward Making the World Happy.

"You know her then?" burst out Ben-edict. Then he started and recollected. "I-I beg your pardon." he stammered distressfully. "But-but"-The man nodded more gravely. "I judge you are a stranger here," he re-narked. Young Benedict flushed. "Yes," he said. "I-I suppose it is awfully rude to stand in the street and stare that way. And again he hunghed. "But you, senor"-and his tone held a warning tone-"for you, senor, it would be best not to try it. You are but a stranger here, and our customs are not yours." And before the somewhat indignant Benedict could recover speech the stranger had bowed, replaced his eig-arctic between his lips and was gone, the gift at the window, too, had yan-ished, and Benedict, accepting perforce the other's advice, walked on. And if not quite so won-derful as this one—well, the Cuban's remarks had been well meant and were worth remembering. So he idled avay an hour or two in the Oalle Obispo, with its gay shop windows and bright awings, stretched the width of the marrow little street. Then he went to the bank for letters and had luncheon at the Englaterra, where he looked in vain for a famillar face. He did not mean to go near that street, her street, again, he assured bimself. And yet somehow as 5 o'clock drew near he found his feet taking him in that direc-tion. He scoled bimself, turned and as you drive by why the roving has al-ways its fascinations. And work at cash prices and expects cash on delivery of work. Patrons will please note the terms and govern themselves accordingly.

We are hardly through one politicul campaign before we are off on another. In about three months a candidate for Governor will be nom-inated, and that means there is already plenty to do.

Hoch, the Chicago bigamist-mur-derer, has been hanged at last. In a way he was of some use to his day. He got a couple dozen fool women to tie up to him who might have made some decent men miserable.

The Pennsylvania railroad's report shows that its net income last year was $38,000,000. It is going to be difficult for politicians to understand why a road so prosperous will not in-vite its friends to an occasional free wide chargement for you or you're cornered so that you can't escape the theater or a concert, you're the crossest and most despondent creature on earth. And you'll invent excuses that wouldn't wash in a strong lye to dodge a visit to your relatives or an excursion or a journey to another city. You want to do the same things in the same old way day after day, and if you can't do them you sit down and cry. Will you if's the morning paper, breakfast, the barber, work, lunchean, more work, home and the evening paper, and that would be your routine if you had $100, 000 a year and were free to come and go as you chose. THE MONOTONY OF LIFE. Why a Comment About It Made One Man Laugh Out Loud.

n. He scolded himself, turned and gan to walk away. But it seemed began to walk away. But it seemed feolish to avoid a street just because a pretty girl lived there, and it was the shortest way home. He was sure that it was the shortest way home. The next moment he was pacing rap-idly along it. As he drew near the house where be

She was there, and she was looking straight at him. He could have sworn that she recognized him. Yet how was that possible? And then slightly, almost imperceptibly, but to Benedict quite unmistakably, she bent her head. her head.

The Moon's Phases.

The Moon's Phases. The phases of the moon are caused by its relative position to the earth and the sun, so that when it is full moon in one part of the earth it is full moon in all parts of the earth and so for all its other phases. The moon revolves around the earth once in twenty-seven Benedict quite unmistakably, she bent her head. Tom was still away. There was nothing to do. A Funny Misprint. One of the most ludicrous announce-ments that ever appeared perhaps was made by a London newspaper in the earlier half of the last century to the effect that Sir Robert Peel "and a par-ty of flends were shooting peasants in Ireland." The words misprinted, of course, were "friends" and "pheas-atts."
