

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being frequently of the bladder, and giving rise to the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing his work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Calendars for 1907.

The Intelligencer office has received a full and complete line of samples of fine art calendars, and we are ready to take your orders for 1907. Be sure to call and learn our prices before placing your order. Designs of every description to select from. Remember, we lead and others follow.

And to think that St. Patrick's Day is behind us!

Miss Stella Cook is ill at her home on Vine street.

Coal strike possibilities keep the guessers busy.

It begins to look as if the people would have to live on sleds.

The overhanging icicle is keeping a watchful eye for unwary victims.

If Mr. Taft goes upon the Supreme Bench he will surely "add weight" to its decisions.

Rev. E. T. Swartz, pastor of St. Peter's M. E. church, South Danville, is ill at his home.

John D. Rockefeller is said to be losing his nerve. But he still has his money.

One Chicago man names his son, and another names his uncle, in divorce proceedings. After all, these are only family affairs.

Trespass notices for sale at this office. Two for 5c, or 25c a dozen.

Good farm for rent in Dairy township, Montour county.

M. L. SHEEP, Jerseytown Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Eggleston, of Scranton, are visiting at the home of Frank Bergner, Nassau street.

Miss May McNeill, of Jerseytown, spent Sunday in this city as the guest of Mrs. Charles V. Amerman.

A. H. Bloom, of Wilkes-Barre, spent Saturday at the home of George B. Jacobs, Ferry street.

Miss Katherine Raver, of Barnham, spent Sunday at the home of her father, Rev. C. W. Raver, Ash street.

John Dauner, of Honesdale, spent Sunday with friends in this city.

Horton and Fressa Laubach, of Berwick, spent Sunday with friends in this city.

Miss Margaret Michael, of Clarkstown, is a guest at the home of George S. Tilton, Pine street.

Miss Robinson, teacher in the third ward schools, spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson, Liberty township.

Miss Leah Mincemeyer, of Montgometry, spent Sunday with relatives in this city.

Job Printing of all kinds properly executed at reasonable prices, at the Intelligencer Office.

Philip Johnson, Walnut street, has received the appointment of assistant military instructor at the Soldiers' Orphan Industrial school, Scotland, Pa.

It will take more than 30 years to complete the Panama canal if all of the work has to be done in Washington.

If China trembles when Uncle Sam makes a few precautionary warlike moves what would it do if it got up against the real thing?

At Wilton, England, a pair of carls have opened a carp factory. The nobility seem to be finding time to open something besides jack pots.

Can it be that the peaky little ground hog saw his shadow again and retired? Movers are already making arrangements for the annual flit.

The Intelligencer is at your service as a news or advertising medium. We await your commands.

There is snow enough on the ground now to insure a prolonged period of sleep and mind.

Uniform primaries will at least stop the practice of foisting upon political parties in this State men who are unfit and who represent nothing.

Some men are born grafters, some acquire the art after hard practice, and some are elected to the United States senate.

If anyone asks what whisky is doing in the food bill, let it be remembered that this whole thing is being considered from the congressional point of view.

Now it is intimated that the egg trust intends to hold its stored stock over another year. In that event it might become liable for attempting to obtain money on false pretenses.

FOR SALE—At a bargain; one Model Babylon & Co. $50; weight of safe 1800 to 2000; apply to Charles Woods 219 Mill St., Danville, Pa.

Andrew Carnegie is a great success as a builder of public libraries and a promoter of pipe organ funds, but as a leader of a spelling reform he is a monumental failure.

The incubator is knocking the hen out of the hatching business. The hen should stop such foolishness and lay eggs. The incubator will save her a great many weary hours.

WANTED: District Managers to post signs, advertise and distribute samples. Salary $18.00 weekly, $3.00 per day for expenses. State age and present employment. IDEAL SHEAR CO., 89 Randolph St., Chicago.

The first baseball guide for 1906 is out, and there is nothing in it to show that the umpire will not be guided just the same as usual this season.

The news that the Cuban tobacco crop is a failure need cause no alarm among smokers. Lancaster county, Pa., will continue, as usual, to furnish the Havana cigars.

They're going to investigate the lynching of a negro in Louisiana who was guilty of the imprudence of killing a cow that belonged to a white man.

Our old neighbor, Wm. Paugh, the plumber, moved his family and household effects to their new quarters on Mill street, above Lechner's store rooms, yesterday.

K. J. Evans will remove his barber shop from the Brown building to the room now occupied by Woods' news agency. The change will take place during the first part of next week.

WANTED AGENTS—to take orders for a fine line of Dry Goods Specialties. Also Red Cross Towels, a fine bath towel. We handle staples as well as novelties. Spring samples now ready. Address at once Rob't. G. Wallace Co., Chauncey St., Boston, Mass.

The dissolute French count who has made the life of Anna Gould one prolonged misery, was too ill to appear in court last Saturday, so that the hearing in an effort to bring about a reconciliation was postponed for two weeks. He takes the prospective loss of his good fortune quite acutely.

The blizzards of the last ten days have emphasized the meaning to consumers of the convention of minors now in session at Indianapolis. So long as the blue birds were singing and the robins were on the way the impending coal strike was not so impressive as it is when the snow falls and the winds blow.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

exhausting himself lately. He had been working too hard. At present he had pain over his body. His tongue was distinctly discolored, and his pulse was weak. His head was throbbing, and there was scarcely a portion of his body which did not ache. Loss of time meant loss of money to him, for he wrote for a living. If he did not work he was perfectly aware that some one else would get ahead of him. Not that he had easily given up, but the task of putting words together had proved to him, in a most distressing condition as hard as carving blocks of stone.

In his extremity he thought of a doctor. Of all medical men he had a horror. At the moment, however, there seemed to be no excuse for not consulting himself lately.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician has gathered some figures worthy of a Carroll D. Wright.

"Only today, while crossing the slushy streets," he said, "I heard four different women say 'D—n,' and they said it loudly and firmly, to one. One woman said it when her foot slipped and went into a puddle to the top of her shoe. Another said it when a car she had signaled to stop did so directly in front of the deepest pool of slush and water on the street. Couldn't hardly blame her for that, though."

That embryonic merchants are to be found among the newboys of Philadelphia was revealed in the following dialogue with one of the craft, who is particularly bright and alert, while, as has been found by several men who are his patrons, is also scrupulously honest: "Give me a paper, son."

"Yes, sir; here you are, sir. Never mind the money, sir; you can give me that at another time."

"Why, how can you do business in that way? You don't know me. How do you know you'll ever get your money?" "Oh, I know you; I see you every day and have been waiting to get you to buy a paper."

"Well, I've bought one. What now?" "Now I want you to buy one every day; won't you, sir? You need not pay me when you buy it. I'd rather you paid me every Saturday, will you, please, sir?" "Of course, I will, my little man."

"Thank you, sir. Goodbye." "Goodbye." Here was enacted an incident that showed the true commercial instinct, and the man was not slow to see it and encourage it. He insists that he will follow up that boy's career and do whatever he can to promote his interests.

Dr. Torrey says "there is no more contemptible sneak and coward on earth than the writer of an anonymous letter," and referring to one recently received and "it may be that this man is a Christian; but he did a very unchristian thing, and I hope for the sake of his soul he will apologize for it and sign his name to the apology."

Mr. John O. Eyerly in ordering the Intelligencer sent to his home, No. 6210 Reedland St., Phil'a says he has been transferred from New York and has a fine position. He is employed with the Butterwick Publishing Co., and cares for all Eastern advertising. His family has gone to join him and make that city their future home. Our best wishes for happiness and prosperity, John.

The grand jury of Blair county has made a departure by recommending that the county commissioners compel the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to pay the county at least $1.50 a day for each person maintained at the almshouse who is taken there after having met with an accident along the railroad. The bill met with general favor and approval. This entire expense has heretofore been borne by the county.

Running about Bainbridge street between Fourth and Fifth every day of the week is a freak in the shape of a three-legged yellow dog. Three limbs are perfectly developed, while the fourth, the "hucky," left hind leg, is only a rudiment, a tiny paw, with well-developed claws, grown fast to the body. The animal appears not the least bit concerned over the absent member, but gets about in a style that would be the envy of any man with a wooden leg. Sort of a hop, step and a jump it is. His owner, an Italian boy, says "Triplets," as he calls him, was born that way.

A man who has been gathering statistics on the subject asserts that profanity is becoming more and more common among women and extends even to women of good social station and apparent refinement. This earnest statistician