Established in 1826.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, O.

Calendars for 1907.
The Intelligencer office has received a full and complete line of samples of fine art calendars, and we are ready to take your orders for 1907. Be sure to call and learn our prices before placing your order. Designs of every description to select from. Remember, we lead and others follow.

March holds the winter record. Looks like the spring thaw at last. Perhaps the biggest snow storm of the season is still to come.

Better than medicine for the weak—invigorating and satisfying for the strong.

The mover wishes the rain would go away and come some other day.

MARRIED AT HIGH NOON

Last Tuesday Miss Lizzie Ritter Became the Bride of Ed. C. Diehl.

Tuesday, at high noon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Ritter, Railroad street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Rev. S. B. Evans, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, pronounced the words that joined their accomplished daughter, Lizzie G., into a life partnership with Mr. Edward C. Diehl, a popular young man of this city.

The bride, who was handsomely gowned in Alice blue laces and the groom, in the conventional black, stepped into the presence of some fifty especially invited guests, unattended, while Mrs. Emma Woods rendered the wedding march from Lohengrin.

After the ceremony and a round of best wishes and congratulations extended, a fine dinner was spread and all present did eat of such a feast as would do justice to royalty. At 2:11 o'clock the happy couple, amid a shower of rice, boarded the D. L. & W. train for a tour to Wilkes-Barre and Scranton.

The bride is a highly esteemed and popular lady, and a very successful music instructor, being for a number of years pianist in the St. Paul's M. E. Sunday school, from which organization she received as a token of love for her very faithful services, two handsome rocking chairs. Many other useful and valuable presents were received.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Diehl, of Mahoning township, and is well and favorably known, being the popular assistant at Shannon's meat market.

They will return home Saturday and take up housekeeping on Sunbury street, South Danville, where a newly furnished house awaits them.

The Intelligencer voices their many friends in wishing them a happy, long and prosperous union.

In Bolivia the natives of the interior wear hats and shirts made of the bark of a tree, which is first soaked in water and then beaten until pliable.

In Siam the number of rooms in a house, of windows or doors in a room, even of rungs on a ladder, must always be odd. Even numbers are considered unlucky.

The adjutant, or marabout, a tall bird of India, of the stork species, will swallow a hare or a cat whole. It stands five feet high, and the expansion of wings is nearly fifteen feet.

Ladies seldom rise in Spain to receive a male visitor, and they rarely accompany him to the door. For a Spaniard to give a lady—even his wife—his arm when out walking is looked upon as a decided violation of propriety.

Conspicuous among the adornments of the bridal feast in Brittany is an artistic and elaborate butter structure, as fanciful and elegant as the most beautiful bridal cake, and into this structure the guests stick split sticks bearing coins of gold or silver.

A curious custom is observed in certain districts of Spain in regard to betrothals. A young man who desires to win the hand of any damsel calls on her parents for three successive days at the same hour of the day. On the last occasion he leaves his walking stick, and if he is looked on with favor by the maiden and her family the cane is handed to him when he calls again.

Bakers in France are subjected to certain unusual rules and regulations. In large fortified towns, for instance, they were formerly allowed a certain stock in hand in case of war. Not only this, but everywhere they have to deposit a sum of money in the hands of the municipal authorities as a surety of good conduct; and the law, not content with merely looking after their weights and measures, actually decides the price at which bread is sold.

J. W. Bettelton, representing the State department of agriculture at San Jose scale demonstrator, was here on Monday and demonstrated in the orchard of I. X. Grier, on the farm occupied by J. D. S. Rhodes, just below Riverside, and on Tuesday gave another demonstration on the farm of Cyrus S. Stynes, West Hemlock township, this county. Notwithstanding the bad weather conditions good crowds greeted him at both places, eager to learn something that would save their valuable orchards from the much dreaded plague.

A Curious Legend.
There is a curious legend in regard to Deadman's place, Southwark, London. An ingenious old writer says that the name originated as follows: "In Deadman's place, at St. Marguerite, a man servant being buried at seven of the clock in the morning, and the grave standing open for more dead comrademates, at four of the clock in the same evening he was got up alive by means of a strange miracle, which, to be true and certain, hundreds of people can testify that saw him act like a country Ghost in his white peackled sheets." However, a more exact historian explained that the name was merely a corruption of Desmond's place.

The law of Pennsylvania forbids the sale or gift of a cigarette or a cigarette paper to any person under the age of 21. It is enforced about as well as most restrictive acts of that sort are here—that is to say it is not an unusual sight to see young boys inhaling the fumes of cigarettes.

A NATURAL DIKE.

The Volcanic Formation Along the Course of Fall River.

Nature is full of strange freaks, and her agents—rain, storms, winds and even dust—produce results that might often be mistaken for the works of human hands, though frequently on a colossal scale.

Volcanic activities are mighty forces, and through them some wonderful phenomena are wrought. One of these may be seen along the course of Fall River, in northern California. This stream is of considerable size, and the work the nature's gigantic forces may be seen between the upper and lower cascades of the river.

It is what might properly be called a "volcanic dike." This dike extends for some distance along Fall River, and its banks are nearly parallel to the course. It bears close resemblance to a roughly constructed wall. The top of this dike is very ragged and the height of varying altitudes. In some places it is twenty feet high and several feet in thickness, and again it may be easily clambered over. The rock of which this wall of nature is composed is of a very porous character, bearing some resemblance to pumice stone, though much more solid and of greater specific gravity.

The entire region is of volcanic origin and evidently was once the scene of great eruptive activity. Scoria and lava abound, though the face of the country is now thickly clad with timber and brush. The dike begins and ends abruptly.

The wall of the dike is evidently the result of volcanic forces, and has no doubt stood for many centuries. It stands clear from clinging rocks, has a narrow foundation, with vertical walls, and is very straight. The mystery is what forces of nature could have piled up or left standing this rock formation so uniform. This dike has puzzled not a few geologists who have visited and examined it.—American Inventor.

A FIERCE MERMAN.

Brand of Marine Monster Virginia Hunted in 1676.

B. H. Blackwell of Oxford has published a recent reprint of "An Account of Virginia; Its Situation, Temperature, Productions, Inhabitants and Their Manner of Planting and Ordering Tobacco." It is, in brief, a pamphlet communicated to the Royal Society in 1676 by one Thomas Glover, "an ingenious Chirurgeon," who had lived for some years in the province. Mr. Glover would seem to have reckoned the sea serpent among the inhabitants of the colony to judge from the minute accuracy of the following description:

"A most prodigious Creature, much resembling a man, only somewhat larger, standing right up in the water with his head, neck, shoulders, breast and waist, to the cubits of his arms, above water; his skin was tawny, much like that of an Indian; the figure of his head was pyramidal, and sleek, without hair, his eyes large and black, and so were his eyebrows; his mouth very wide, with a broad, black streak on the upper lip, which turned upward at each end like mustaches; his countenance was grim and terrible; his neck, shoulders, arms, breast and waist were like unto the neck, arms, shoulders, breast and waist of a man; his hands, if he had any, were under water. He seemed to stand with his eyes fixed on me for some time, and afterward dived down, and a little after riseth at somewhat a farther distance and turned his head toward me again, and then immediately fell into the water and swam away so near the top of the water that I could discern him throw out his arms and gather them in as a man doth when he swimeth. At last he shoots with his head downward, by which means he cast up above the water, which exactly resembled the tail of a fish, with a broad fan at the end of it."

HANDEL'S OBSTINACY.

An incident of the Great Musician's Childhood Days.

A child's obstinacy does not always bring as fortunate results as was the case with Handel, the great musician. His extraordinary resolution as a boy doubtless led to that great success which crowned the latter years of his life. When he was some seven years of age his father had occasion to visit a son by a former wife, who was valet to the Duke of Saxe Weissenfeld. Traveling in those days—200 years ago—was tedious and expensive, and Dr. Handel did not desire to be delayed with the care of an "infant" during a journey which the demands of a responsible profession would probably make as short as possible.

But the future giant of music would grow. He cried, bellowed and eventually ran along the road after the vehicle, until the tender feelings of the doctor could refuse no longer. In an evil moment for his jurisprudence scheme he took the child with him.

No sooner did the little fellow reach the ducal residence than he gave rein to his fancy on the keys of every instrument that he found open. The remarkable music that came from the finger tips of the child's hands was soon the object of wonder and congratulation throughout the palace, and all this was intensified when he secured an opportunity of touching the keys of the chance organ within the hearing of the duke.

Such a job started from that chapel organ when little Handel's tender fingers close the keys, and the soul of the duke was touched as it never had been touched before—truly a momentous occurrence, since but for it Handel's sacred music might never have been written.

The duke's attention having been arrested, he inquired of Dr. Handel concerning the child's future, and eventually succeeded in placing him, for three years, under Zachau, the organist of Halle cathedral. This was the beginning of Handel's musical education.

An Indicator.

"But, doctor," asked the young practitioner, "why do you always order champagne for every new patient that comes to you?" "Because, my boy," replied the wise old medical man, "I can judge by what he says whether or not he can afford it. That helps me to come to make out my bill."—Philadelphia Press.

Driven From Home.

"Did you hear that the daughter of that rich man in the next block had been driven from home?"

"No. When did it happen?"

"Just after she got into the carriage."—Baltimore American.

A Bad Head.

"They say," murmured Mr. McEosh, "that two heads are better than one, but I doubt it. If I had two like the one I've got this morning I'd like to 'woudn't' commit suicide."—Cleveland Leader.

A GLAD WELCOME TO SPRING.

Not only does it bring again the warm sunshine—but it develops the buds of Dame Fashion into the blossoming styles in Suits, and Dresses, Skirts and Waists. This week we devote interest to Priestly's Black Dress Goods.

For many years we have been exclusive dealers in Priestly's blacks for Milton's trade, and why? There is no color that requires so much care in selecting as black in the many years of experience we have found no other maker can approach B. Priestly and Co. in quality, finish and fast color, every yard is guaranteed—in fact in all these three years we have never found any of Priestly's Blacks to turn grayish in color.

Many of Priestly's goods are "Cravenettes" having undergone a process that makes them absolutely waterproof, you can wear them in a pelting rain give them a shake and dampness will not be felt beneath—no rubber in the process—then too they are sponged and shrunk and you know that that means for a suit or skirt.

The new lines for Spring includes a wide range of choice in many weaves, Prunella, Carita, Boxanna, Voile, Panamas in plain and fancy, Melrose, Empress Poplin, Odessa Crepe, French Serge, Battise Crepe de chine, Eolienne in all wool or silk and wool. In special favor now are:

Wool Eolienne, 40 inches wide and especially fine and sheer and devoid of oil and harshness or wiryness, price 1.00 yard.

Empress Poplin, also 40 inches wide, quite similar in texture to Eolienne except in weight being a trifle heavier and more weight price 1.10 yard.

Silk Warp Henriettes, possibly not so new in weave, yet continuing in high demand and appreciation, very fine and lustrous at 1.10, 1.35 and 1.50 a yard.

"Queens" Cloth in a fancy black weave, small invisible patterns that are a relief from the plain yet nothing loud. Good weight for all season wear, 42 inches 1.35 a yard.

Wool Tiffen a fine close woven fabric, yet quite sheer and one that will stand a lot of hardwear without showing it, 44 inches 1.25 Chiffon Voile a very popular fabric for light weight dresses, quite sheer in fact their effect made up over silk with a rich effect, 40 inches wide 80c a yard.

See The New Cotton Dress Goods.

For Spring and Summer wear there's a vast amount of interest centered on cottons, their cool and dressy looking and in our stock you will be surprised to see how near cotton can be made to resemble woolen and silk textiles. Their beauty places them in a stronger position than ever, the day is past when cottons are only regarded for ordinary housewear.

Our selection contains a range in quality and price, color and style to please the most fastidious. Plain and figured, flowers, stripes, plaids, white or colored, Organza Lains, Mulls, Batistes, Voiles, Madras, Poplins, Dimities, etc. Many in waist and dress patterns, so that there will be only one dress of a kind in the town. Prices range 10c in easy steps to 75c yard.

20c Colored Dress Goods 15c Yard.

Several hundred yards of part wool, double fold dress goods in plain color, red, greens and blues. Material is of good body diagonal serge, very suitable and serviceable for children wear and the price is a direct saving of 5c a yard.

Civil War Reminiscences.

The Writer Claims the 2d Penna Heavy Artillery Numbered 3,300 Men of the Rank and File, the Largest, With One Exception, and When It Entered the Wilderness Was Taken for a Division or a Brigade.

DANVILLE, Pa., March 27, 1906.
EDITOR INTELLIGENCER:

It was during the Civil War, in the year 1864, when the Second Heavy Artillery was guarding the Bermuda Front, on the banks of the Appomattox river, that the writer was asked by the Sanitary Commission to trade newspapers with the enemy. Having consented we were furnished a copy of the "Philadelphia Inquirer," and filling our haversack chock full of hard tack jumped over the rifle pits and started up the Port Tobacco railroad, all the while the pickets keeping watch that no advantage was taken in the deal. Just previous to this a paper was waved from the Confederate breast works, which our side quickly responded, which meant that the trade was on. About midway we met a Johnny Reb, though a looking customer as ever defended the Stars and Bars. His haversack was filled to the brim with elegant leaf smoking tobacco. We exchanged a few words and then exchanged papers, his was a "Richmond Whig," hard tack and tobacco. My opponent seemed delighted to get the bread, as it was said the Rebel rations at this time was a half-full of corn meal and a pinch of salt a day. To be candid, I was frightened at the big fierce looking fellow, thinking, perhaps, he might have a revolver or a knife secreted about his person, and use one or the other while I was filling my haversack with tobacco. But everything in the deeker was fair and square, and we parted to meet no more on this mundane sphere. Returning to camp the boys were delighted at the stock of the weed, and when all that desired helped themselves to a liberal quantity, and soon the air was filled with smoke. I then hurried to deliver the "Richmond Whig" to the Sanitary Commission, knowing full well that there would be some recompense for the risk and danger connected with the trip between the antagonistic lines. Of course the gentlemen of the humane institution were delighted at receiving the news of the situation in rebellion, and offered us anything in their line which consisted of Jamaica ginger, canned quail, soap, towel etc., and as long as the good things to eat lasted we were in clover, but alas, it was not long until hard-tack and "dried salt-horse" were again our rations, and which were relished with a gusto. But even army food was considered excellent by the soldiers, many of whom were not as well satisfied at their home firesides in the North while clustered around the dear old festive board. In fact Uncle Sam cared well for his defenders, even better than any nation on the face of the globe. And there was always enough and to spare, especially when we were in camp for any length of time. When breaking camp at Bermuda, preparatory to marching triumphantly into the evacuated city of Petersburg, hundreds of codfish were scattered over the ground—thrown away because of their being more than was needed.

MR. EDITOR:—As you invite the public Pro Bono Publico, I, for one, proudly come to your rescue.

Gentle spring weather will soon be here.

Indications are that this will be a prosperous year in Danville.

New York State snow water is now flushing the Susquehanna at this place.

Let a man have his own way about everything and everybody can get along with him.

At the battle of Mt. Dajo, the American troops demonstrated that all Moros look alike to them.

Landlord John Beaver, of San Juan, Porto Rico, will please accept our thanks for valuable literature.

Have you crossed the Danville Suspension bridge? It crosses Macomber creek near Chestnut street.

When Castro hears about the way American soldiers fought their way up that Jalo volcano, he may change his mind about "busting the Monroe doctrine."

Those of you who like your town, say so. Tell strangers all about its advantages for manufacturing; its beautiful location, romantic surroundings, and everything that go to make up a progressive little city.

The trouble people have not had much snow trouble to contend with this winter, but when it did come they were prepared to combat it successfully. The cars have been running on time, and no mishaps have interfered with service.

Of course there may be a coal strike, but the average citizen isn't worrying, as he thinks President Roosevelt will take fifteen minutes of some time between now and the first of the month and settle the dispute.

JOINED BY DOG IN OCEAN GRAVE
Coffee Leaps Overboard After Little Playmate's Body at Sea.

New York, March 27.—A pathetic incident of dog devotion was related today by officers of the steamship Columbia, just in from Glasgow. Among the passengers were Andrew Macdonald and his wife, who left Glasgow accompanied by their 4-year-old daughter Mary. The child was ill, and an ocean voyage had been recommended by her physician. Before sailing Mary insisted that her pet collier, Daisy and Ben, be taken along.

On Tuesday the child became worse, and early Wednesday morning she died. The ship's stewards say that the dogs seemed to know that something was wrong with their little mistress, for they howled dismally after her death, and tugged at the chains holding them in their quarters below deck.

Shortly after daylight it was decided to bury the child's body. The tiny corpse was brought on deck, and, while a few passengers and ship's officers stood by bar-headed, it was shoved over the rail. Because of the
