A BLOW AT CORRUPTION.

The Roberts corrupt practices act will work a revolution in the political methods of the State. It is comprehensive, drastic and practically impossible to evade unless candidates are willing to commit willful and corrupt perjury in swearing to false statements with the knowledge that their perjury will be known to every person with whom corrupt dealings have been had, and that such persons will have the power to expose and convict whenever their demands are not met.

Men may be willing to use money corruptly and to lie about it, but when compelled to sign, swear to and file in a public office an itemized statement, giving amounts of money paid, the time when and the name of the person receiving the same, with a voucher for every payment exceeding $10, knowing that the account is subject to an official audit, in which the candidate may be subjected to a searching cross-examination, be obliged to produce papers, checks, bank accounts, and that he cannot refuse to testify, even though his testimony may incriminate, he will be very unwilling to use money corruptly to secure nomination or election.

Add to this the fact that every person with whom the candidate or his agents deal is also liable to be summoned as a witness, and must also divulge everything or commit perjury for which he may be punished, and that the penalty for disobeying the law is prosecution, fine and imprisonment and loss of office, and the case is such that only the hardened villain or the customary criminal would venture on filing a false statement.

The plans which the practical politicians are conceiving by which the law may be evaded will come to grief and the inventors to disgrace. The law was demanded by the people, and the people, tired of being sold out by the hoodler at convention and election, are in favor of enforcing this law.

The immunity that has attended violations of the bribery laws in the past have been due to the fact that the offense was always known only to the giver and the taker, and neither could be forced to tell. The new law meets that situation by compelling all persons to testify. If a witness refuse he will go to jail for contempt of court and be released when he testifies and not before.

We hail the dawn of a better day in Pennsylvania politics. All over the United States the public attention is directed to the corrupt use of money in politics and legislative bodies. Men high in finance and society are under indictment for that offense, and in danger of condign punishment. It is high time. The people cannot afford to sell themselves and their liberties to the plutocrats. If the corrupt use of money in politics is not checked free government will be a mockery.

the earth. The democracy will become a plutocracy, which is more odious than a despotism.—Phil's Press.

Pet Dog Saves Drowning Child.
Selinsgrove, Pa., April 18.—Mable Shamary, aged 4 years, fell into a deep spring near Salem, Snyder county, today. She would have drowned had not a pet dog seized her by the skirts and pulled her out of the water.

Rev. Ure, Moderator.
With the annual session which has just closed, Rev. Dr. Hemingway, of Bloomsburg retired as moderator of the Northumberland Presbytery. Rev. Herbert T. Ure, of Williamsport, succeeds to the position.

The reports showed 459 members had been received in the church during the year. The annual expense was $116,000.

Exodus Still Continues.
Five hundred foreigners and a number of English speaking miners left Wilkes-Barre yesterday for about all the cities of importance in the country and others took a trip to their native land. How long the exodus will be continued cannot be determined, but it is safe to say that a great many of the foreign settlements are being depopulated. A car load passed through South Danville attached to the 9 o'clock passenger train.

Fortunate Father and Son.
I am as certain as I now live, says Mr. C. E. Bartholomew, Kalkaska, Mich., that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., saved my life when I was a victim of that terrible disorder, Bright's disease. My son had a fever sore on his leg; he too used Favorite Remedy and it is now well. All druggists $1.00; 6 bottles $5.00.

T. W. Lee Resigns.
It has been announced that T. W. Lee, general passenger agent of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad company, has resigned, to take effect July 1.

He will be succeeded by George A. Cullton, the general western passenger agent of the road, whose office now is in Chicago.

Tax Collector Arrested.
Tax collector Edward Minnick, of Centralia, was placed under arrest on Saturday on a charge of collecting taxes unlawfully. One hundred and twenty warrants were issued, the case growing out of the reserving of the Lehigh Valley coal company taxes if not paid by residents on their land.

Notice.
Mr. Alex. Scheinert, expert Piano Tuner and Repairer, of Philadelphia, will be in Danville, at the Montour House, during the week commencing April the 30th. Orders from new patrons will receive prompt attention. This will be Mr. Scheinert's 19th semi-annual visit to this city.

Auto Revenue.
Under the new automobile law every owner of a machine must take out an annual license from the State department at Harrisburg, and pay a fee of $2. This department is kept busy issuing licenses, some 7000 having been granted within the last hundred days. A large revenue can be expected from this source.

Here is Relief for Women.
If you have pains in the back, urinary bladder or kidney trouble, and I want a certain, pleasant remedy for women's ailments, Mother's Kidney and Bladder Remedy is the only one. It is a safe, reliable, and sure remedy. All druggists or by mail 50c. Sample package FREE. Write, The Mother-Kidney Co., 125 Broadway, N. Y.

An exchange says: "The kickers on a farm are not so hard to get along with as the kickers in town. On the farm there are kicking cows and the long eared friend the mule, but in town there is the knocker who wants all the privileges of municipal life without paying anything in return and blocks as far as he can, every public improvement. The cow can be butchered and the mule traded on a shot gun, but a town knocker is a grumbling, growling hoo."

Cops and Downers of Santa Cruz.

Probably no other of the West Indian islands has had such a checkered career as Santa Cruz. In turn it has belonged to Spain, which abandoned it; to England and Holland jointly; to England alone; to Spain again, which fell upon the colonists and destroyed or deported them all; to France, which took it from Spain; to the Knights of Malta, who received it as a gift from France; to a private company of adventurers. Then it was resumed possession of by France, but abandoned, so that in 1720 it was uninhabited. Then it became a no man's land until 1727, when France took it again, and presently sold it to a Danish company, which sold it in turn to the king of Denmark. In 1801 England took it once more, gave it back to Denmark, reported and took it away again in a few months, held it for eight years, and then returned it to Denmark, which

BETWIXT DAD AND JOE

By JOHN SEATON BLAIR

Copyright, 1906, by T. G. McClure

No one around the frontier town of Lewisburg knew much of Dr. Davy. He had come into the locality without ostentation, taken up a claim four miles away and built a sod house, half above and half below ground. For a year he had dwelt there alone and had only come into town once a fortnight for provisions. He was called doctor because he was a doctor, though not seeking to ply his art, and no one was able to say just how his title came to be known. His next neighbor was a mile away, and travelers who stopped at his house for a drink of water or to inquire the way were treated with scant courtesy. There was considerable gossip about the stranger, and many people shook their heads and whispered that the officers of the law would turn up in search of him some fine day, but after awhile, as nothing was heard against him, he was put down as a recluse and left undisturbed.

It was a year or more after Dr. Davy's appearance that he came to town one evening to meet a young woman who stepped off the train from the east. The family resemblance was so marked that it was agreed by all that the newcomer was his daughter. She was hurried away as if the father feared to let the townspeople get sight of her, but it had needed only a glance to show that she was good looking and about twenty years of age. Her countenance revived the gossip, but as she was not seen in town during the next three months she was in time forgotten by all with one exception. That exception was young Joe Taylor, who had been made sheriff of the county a year before and who was being talked of as a candidate for the legislature. He had only to accept a nomination to be elected, as he was a general favorite with all. He made it his business while scouting the country for horse thieves to call the doctor's name, and he was the first and about the only one to see the daughter Mollie in her own home and to be hospitably received by her father.

If he had any curiosity to gratify as an officer of the law he was disappointed.

"It was likely that way," nodded Joe. "But father ever restored the money after awhile, all but a paltry sum. He would also have restored that, just as it was, but he has been hounded and driven to his wits' end, become desperate and determined. Is that wretch to follow him to his grave?"

Joe sat down on the ground and dropped his chin on his hands and appeared to be thinking. The girl had put her arms around her neck, and there was a sob in her throat as she turned and entered the house. It was a quarter of an hour before she reappeared. Joe looked up into her face with eyes telling of sympathy and love, and a blush came to her cheek as she asked:

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"It's going—it's going to be the hardest thing of my life," he replied. "I must do it or stand impeached. Girl, you don't know."

"Joe," she interrupted, calling him by that name for the first time, "a girl knows when she is loved."

"Yes, she ought to, and you ought to know that I love you," he said. "I do, Joe, and I love you in return, and you will break my heart if you drag my old father to jail. Say that you won't do it—that you will leave the warrant unissued."

"Duty, girl," he whispered as he rose up and put his arms around her and kissed her for the first time.

"Then you will arrest him?"

He kissed her again and turned away toward the lake, looking at the paper in his hand through tears in his eyes. He had not taken a hundred steps, however, before a rick cracked, and he pitched forward on the grass. His horse would have dashed off at the sudden report, but it was secured by the girl.

"How did it come about?" asked the doctor, who had hurried home at the report of the rifle and found his daughter standing over a wounded and unconscious man.

"He—he started to the lake to find you, and a gun went off!" replied the girl, who was looking at her father with a quivering lip.

"And—did he have any legal paper with him?" queried the father in a whisper.

"If he had, it is fatally wounded," he said. "The doctor will not touch him, and he will be all right in a week. I will load up the wagon, and we must move on and find another asylum."

"But the man—Mr. Taylor—Joe?" she asked.

"We shall take him with us. He will need my skill and your nursing for some days to come."

It was two weeks later when the sheriff opened his eyes and saw Mollie Taylor sitting near his bedside. The claim had been left a hundred miles behind and the abandoned cabin of a settler had been taken possession of. Joe Taylor had been nursed and tended through fever as the wagon rolled along.

"Mollie, I take it that it was betwixt dad and me?" he said as she saw that he had come back to earth again.

"It was, Joe," she replied. "But, now—"

"But now it's betwixt you and me, and soon as I can shake me off to gether I'll fix things so that you won't have to do any more moving. Thanks dear, that you shot a little too high!"

Lighting the Yule Log.
A custom at one time prevalent in the northern districts of the old country is that of placing an immense log of wood, sometimes the root of a great tree, in the wide chimney place. This log is often called the Yule log, and it was on Christmas eve that it was put on the wide hearth. Around it would gather the entire family, and their entrance was the occasion of a great deal of ceremony. There was music and rejoicing, while the one authorized to light it was obliged to have clean hands. It was always lighted with a brand left over from the log of the previous year, which had been carefully preserved for that purpose. A poet sings of it in this way:

With the last year's brand
Light the new block and
For good success in his spending
On your pastries play.

That sweet luck may
Come while the log is a-tending.

The Yule log was supposed to be a protection against evil spirits, and it was considered a bad omen if the fire went out before the evening was over. The family and guests used to seat themselves in front of the brightly burning fire, and many a story and merry jest went round the happy group.

VARIETY IN CHEWING.
Gum and Tobacco Are Not the Only Materials Utilized.

Gum chicle, which forms the basis of most American chewing gums, is by no means the only chewing material, though chewing gum has spread over a large portion of the world.

Among the old fashioned gum of the spruce tree is still in greater favor, and druggists near the great spruce belts drive a thriving trade in the brown lumps.

Although the chicle comes from the tropics, it is seldom used as a chewing gum there, unadorned rubber being the fashion. In Peru "coca," or cocoa leaves, form the staple chew, the plant being a powerful stimulant, since from its leaves cocaine is extracted. In the east the betel nut is chewed in preference, the nut being prepared with lime. To it might be accorded the place of first prominence, since because of the congestion of population practically one-tenth of the human race give it their preference.

One of the oddest chews is the leaden bullet which the English soldier used to chew before the introduction of the jacketed bullets now in use. They declared that it lessened their thirst and to some extent lessened their hunger on long marches.

And then there is tobacco.

ODD THINGS ABOUT WORDS.
When the Word "Lunch" Was First Used It Meant a "Lump."

A "lunch," etymologically, is just a lump. In the sixteenth century a "lunch of bacon" meant merely a slice or hunk of it. So Burns speaks of bread and cheese "dealt about in lanches," and Scott records that "little Benjie was ramming a huge luncheon of pie crust into his mouth." While in modern times "lunch" is an abbreviation from "luncheon," the latter was originally an elongation of "lunch."

The etymology shows how the old "noon" noon drink, came to mean noon eating, and to appear as "luncheon," and the development thereafter of "luncheon" from "lunch" was very natural.

Curious changes of words sometimes take place between two languages. This English has borrowed the French "joseur" and has given to France "snob" in trade. Frenchmen have a way of taking a polysyllabic word and using half of it. Thus of "steeples" they have appropriated the "steeple," and now the French sportsman speaks of "mounting a steeple" when he means to ride a race over the customary obstacles. A smoking jacket is with him a "smoking" and a sleeping car is a "sleeping."

Speed Rates.
Few men could tell, if they were asked, how many feet per second they walk. The average man walks four feet a second. A dog, on its ordinary jog, goes eight feet a second. A horse trots twelve feet a second. A reindeer over the ice makes twenty-six feet. A race horse makes forty-three feet. A sailing ship makes fourteen feet—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Got the Thorns.
Young Thorne (to his ideal)—And your name is Rose? What a sweet name Rose is! Rose—I am glad you like it. But—but I do not want to be a rose without a Thorne.
What would a fellow say after that?
