The Meaning of Some of Those Whose Origin We Can Trace.

NAMES OF ANIMALS.

leopard is first found in the Persian language, where pars stands for pan-ther. Seal, very appropriately, was once a word meaning of the sea; close to the Latin sal, the sea. Puma, jaguar, taple and peccary (from paquires) are all names from South American Indian languages. The coyote and occlet were called coyoti and occlete by the Mexicans long before Cortes landed on their shores.

coyoti and occlote by the Mexicans long before Cortes landed on their shores. Moose is from the Iadian word mouswah, meaning wood eater; skunk, from seganku, an Algonquin term; wapil in the Creek language means white deer, and was originally applied to the Rocky mountain goat, but the name is now restricted to the American elk. Caribou is also a na-tive Indian word; opossum is from possowne, and raccoon is from the In-dian arrathkune (by further sphere-sis soon). Rhinoceros is pure Greek, meaning nose horned, but beaver has indeed had a rough time of it in its travels through various languages. It is hard-ly recognizable as bebrus, babru and bru. The latter is the uitimate root of the English word brown. The orig-inal application was doubtless on ac-count of the color of the creature's fur. Otter goes back to Sanskrit, where it is udra. The significance of this word is in its close kinship to udan, meaning water. The little mouse hands its name down through the years from the old, old Sanskrit, the root meaning to steal. The word rat may have been derived from the root of the Latin word va-dere, to scratch, or rodere, to gnaw. Rodent is derived from the latter term. Cat is also in doubt, but is first rec-ganized in entulys, a diminutive of Rolent is derived from the latter term. Rolent is derived from the latter term. Cat is also in doubt, but is first rec-ognized in catulus, a diminutive of canis, a dog. It was applied to the young of almost any animal, as the English words pup, kitten, cub, etc. Bear is the result of tongue twisting, from the Latin fera, a wild beast. Deer is of obscure origin, but may have been an adjective, meaning wild. Elk is derived from the same root as eland, and the history of the latter word is an interesting one. It meant a sufferer, and was applied by the Teutons to the elk of the old world on account of the awkward gait and stiff movements of this ungainly ani-ma.

mal. Squirrel has a poetic origin in the Greek language, its original meaning being shadow tall. Tiger is far more intricate. The old Persian word tir meant arrow, while tighra signified sharp. The application to this great minal was in allusion to the swiftness with which the tiger leaps upon its prey.—Detroit News-Tribune. mal.

Rapid Fire Justice. Rapid Fire Justice. Yankee dispatch characterizes the court rulings of a Toronto magistrate, of vhom John Foster Fraser tells in his book, "Canada as It Is." Newspapers. It has been calculated that, taking the population of the whole world, there is one newspaper to every 82,000 persons. The United States supports 12,500 newspapers, of which 1,000 are dailies, these being round figures. Ger-many has 5,500 journals, of which 800 are daily. England takes second place in the European record with 3,000 newspapers, of which 800 are daily. France has nearly the same number.
