HONESTY AND PROGRESS.

There is plenty of work yet for the worthy muck-rakers. For the unworthy, who merely labor for the sake of stirring up unpleasant things, nobody cares, but we refer to the worthy rakers of insurance and railroad graft and bad meat.

Let us beware how we soothe agitated public sentiment, with the assurance that the shocking revelations of shaky morality in high places, which have been made during the past twelve months, have produced a general bracing up of moral tone; that everybody is turning over a new leaf, and that there is really much less rascality than there was a year ago. The signs point the other way and suggest that there may be a great deal more to be raked up.

It is announced, for example, that a company engaged in the insurance of merchants against loss by burglary has decided to abandon its business in New York city. The chief of police don't know what to make of it, protesting that thieves and burglars are not nearly as plentiful in Gotham as they used to be, and that there are more of them in other cities, where the company continues its business. Whereupon it is shrewdly suggested that the fraudulent disappearance of insured property is not difficult to affect under certan conditions, and particularly when valuable gems are thus protected.

The primal dependence of all sound prosperity upon morality thus receives simple and direct illustration. The insurance business, in all of its branches, is a development of advanced civilization, and assumes a high average of honor and honesty. That rascality has been found at the heart of it, in the life insurance business, does not affect this truth. That fire insurance is embarrassed by fraudulent fires only confirms it. The general appreciation of the value of insurance forces even upon those inclined to be dishonest the conviction that honesty is the best policy, but it is the high general average of honesty, the moral standard of all the people which makes this object lesson possible.

Let us, then, be most jealous of this standard of morality; let us urge the searching out of crookedness and immorality everywhere.

COERCING THE PEOPLE OF ARIZONA.

The defeat of President Roosevelt's scheme by the Democrats to force Arizona into partnership with New Mexico, appears to have enraged him against the people of that territory. He threatens them that "if they let this chance go by they will have to wait many years before the chance again offers itself, and even then it probably will be only on the present terms—that is on the condition of being joined with New Mexico." Arizona is Democratic, New Mexico is Republican and the great majority of the voters are Mexicans and the Roosevelt scheme is to force the two territories together and make a Republican state. This plan is very obnoxious to the people of Arizona, who are largely Americans and prefer to remain as a territory than to be ruled by the Mexicans. Thanks to the Democratic amendment to the enabling the people of Arizona have the right to vote, for or against, the joint statehood plan. The federal officeholders are already engaged in an active campaign to induce the voters to accept statehood with New Mexico. They should be attending to their official business.

—EVERY good citizen of Pennsylvania will rejoice to accept the State Democratic ticket in its entirety at the polls this coming November, for it means all for the good of our great commonwealth.

—TRUST magnate Schwab has just lost so much money gambling at Monte Carlo that he will have to reconsider his determination to run for Senator in Nevada.

YOUR ASSOCIATIONS.

Thou art noble; yet I see,
Thy honorable metal may be wrought
From that it is disposed, therefore 'tis meet,
That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduced?
—Shakespeare.

The adage runs that an author is known by his writings, a mother by her daughter, a fool by his words, and all men by their companions. Intercourse with persons of decided virtue and excellence is of great importance in the forming of good, clean character. The force of example is powerful, especially in the young. And as we are all creatures of imitation, and by a necessary influence our tempers and habits are very much formed on the models of those with which we familiarly associate, day by day, better to be entirely alone than in bad company. Evil communications corrupt good manners just as fire in the forest makes the timbers rotten and useless, stripped of all their former beauty and strength. Ill qualities are catching as well as disease, and the mind is at least made weak and sickly.

Are jesters and buffoons our choice friend? He who loves to laugh at folly is himself a fool! Do you love and seek the society of the wise and good? Is this your habit? Had you rather take the lowest seat among these than the highest seat among others? Then you have already learned to be good! You may not make very much progress but even a good beginning is not to be despised. Hold on your way and seek to be the companion of those who fear God. So you shall be wise for yourself and wise for eternity.

No man of position can allow himself to associate with the profane, the Sabbath breakers, the drunken and the licentious, for he lowers himself without elevating them. The sweep is not made the less black by rubbing against the clean, while they are inevitably defiled.

What is companionship where nothing that improves the intellect is communicated and where the larger heart contracts itself to the model and dimensions of the smaller? Washington was wont to say "be courteous to all, but intimate with few, and let those few be well tried before you give them your confidence."

It should be the aim of young men to go into good society. Not good in the sense of riches, pride or fashion, but the society of the wise, the intelligent and good. When you find men that know more than you do, and from whose conversation one can gain information, with them it is always safe to be found. It has broken down many a man associating with the low and vulgar. No connection or friendship can be lasting where a conformity of inclination and disposition does not exist, all passions and finer feeling of the soul must gently harmonize, and form one common lasting interest.

REVILING THE DEMOCRATS.

Mr. Taft is disputing with Mr. Roosevelt the championship of the noble profession of diplomacy—hiding the truth. In his speech to the negroes and Federal office-holders of North Carolina, June 9th, he declared that while the Democratic leaders have been for years declaring against corporations, "they have instituted no legislative steps in all this time to restrain the abuses." Taft knew this to be utterly false. He knew, for instance, that the Tillman-Gillespie resolution under which the Standard Oil and the railroads are now being investigated was of Democratic origin. He knew that the Tillman bill to prohibit corporations from contributing to party corruption funds,—a bill which passed the Senate, but was opposed by Root, Roosevelt, and Taft so that it failed in the House—was of Democratic origin. He knew that the Democrats in Congress have introduced numberless measures designed to curb the trusts by abolishing the tariff duties on trust-made goods. He knew that nearly every Democratic State had established a railroad commission to prevent extortions and discriminations by the railroad companies. In fine, Taft knew that he was evading the truth and gloried in what he was doing. Let him read what Roosevelt has written about liars, and he will probably think less of himself, unless Roosovelt has told him not to believe such things.

THE ONLY ISSUE.

After the Democratic convention accepted Emery as its candidate for governor, there need be no hesitation in the Prohibition party doing the same, though it be that Emery no more subscribes to Prohibition doctrine than to Democratic, outside the one issue of reform in the administration of offices of trust, which is the only issue in this campaign, as the action of the Democratic convention sufficiently testified.

It set aside all other questions and determined to fuse with the portion of the Republican party that revolted against the administration of the public affairs of which that party has been in charge for many years, and against the corporation malpractices which that administration has fostered.

If the Prohibition leaders think that their chosen issue is more important than this, they can take the sentiment of their people in the matter by nominating a ticket of their own, if they have the courage to do it; which they will not have; for they would not command the votes of their intelligent followers, who will understand that this is a time to join in with their fellow citizens of all parties who rally under Emery in the cause of honest government, and for the downfall of those who have been so sorely abusing the trusts they have held.

—MISERY comes to the masses mainly from two phases of inequality---inequality in property and inequality in political rights. Both kinds of inequality are growing with tremendous rapidity under the Republican regime. Equality is the basis of every just government, and Democracy stands for equality.

LET IT BE YOUR BEST EFFORT.

Each one is a leader, a teacher; you have your followers; possibly you are not aware of the fact, but some child, some one is being influenced by your words, your acts, your life. Whatever your work, you can make your life sweet, grand and noble. Literature can depict life, music can instruct and give voice to emotions, commerce is the means by which we advance; all work helps to minister to some phase of the life of men and women, and it is the business of each of us to cultivate, to develop and to lift up life.

We can make our work grand and important, and be proud, dignified and earnest in maintaining it. Let nothing stand in our way of putting our best in our work. How much our young people do in helping people to live; not by commanding and dictating, but by your bright faces, your ambition, your energy, your earnestness, your pleasant ways, you give others courage, you make them strong and they are better fitted to live and carry their burdens and do their daily work.

Wherever you are or whatever work you are doing fill your place to the fullest extent with noble, conscientious service; by this you will prove yourself a person of exceptional merit, and if you can accomplish larger work somebody will find it out. Your work, your place and the people you live among may not be just as you desire, but for the present this work is yours, this place is yours and these are the people you are to help. Do your work so well, so completely, and fit yourself for the higher place. We all look forward to a larger field, a more honorable place, but after all, the quintessence of life is to help people, just where we are, by living at our highest and best. If we do this we accomplish a life's work no matter what our work or where we are. The important thing for us to consider is, how have we done our work? How have we acquitted ourselves? How truly have we helped people?

A TRUE FRIEND.

If you would have friends, yourself must be friendly.

Friendship is a very common sentiment, yet a very great and important one. It enters into every life and continually affects it at every period from childhood to old age.

Friendship in its strictest sence should be limited in its manifestations, for the human heart and life can scarcely have more than one ideal friendship. Friendship means confidence, and he who takes many into his confidence and gives them a knowledge of his real self and life commits a serious folly. We may have many friends who esteem and respect us, but among them all there should be one above all others—"the friend who sticketh closer than a brother," the one to whom we intrust ourselves even more entirely than to one bound to us by the ties of blood. David and Johnathan had doubtless many friendly companions, but only their "two souls were knit together."

The elements of true friendship are commonly known—constancy, "a friend in need," faithfulness in sacredly guarding every confidence intrusted to us. No viler or more contemptible person exists than the one who betrays the confidence of friendship or deserts a friend in the hour of trouble. But besides a human friend, we have the opportunity of a divine friendship. In Jesus Christ the Son of God, we may find a friend upon condition of conformity to His divine will. "Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you." The best of earthly friends will fail us, but Christ will never fail.

BRIGADIER GENERALS IDLE.

Our top heavy army is to again be reorganized to give employment to the large number of Brigadier generals who have nothing to do. Seven posts are to be established at once and two more, if the funds hold out, and in each of these is to be concentrated enough troops to form a brigade with a general in command. This will necessitate the dismantlement of most of the smaller forts with accomodations for one regiment or less. This is the Roosevelt-Taft plan and the appropriations made by Congress of $800,000 for army posts and $3,000,000 for barracks and quarter and $12,000,000 for transportation of troops are to be manipulated to carry out the scheme. It might be cheaper and better to retire a few brigadier generals, or for Congress to reduce their number, but such retrenchment could not be expected from a Republican Administration.

DEALING WISELY WITH TRUSTS.

Why did the Republican Congress defeat the Tillman bill which provided for exposing and punishing contributions by corporations to party campaign funds? Well, let us see. If the Sugar Trust should produce its sweet donation, or the Steel Trust some of its tariff plunder, or the Coal Trust, through Baer or some other God-entrusted coal baron, should "come down with the dust," it might be awkward to publish such things to the vulgar world, or to punish such "benefactors" of G. O. P. As Pharaoh said about the Hebrews, so the Republican party said about the trusts: "Let us deal wisely with them."

—ROOSEVELT has cost more and is worth less than any other president we have ever had," declares Senator Bailey. The Texas statesman has the happy faculty of compressing a great deal of truth into a very small compass.

—Trust products are costly to the citizens and cheap to the foreigners. Why not revise the tariff that protects the trusts and even things up?

—The hot weather and the Congress got on the Presidential nerves, but the Democrats were quite cool and comfortable, thank you.

MUCH IN DEMAND.

It is to be lamented that there are not more men like the Hon. Wm. T. Creasy. He has served in the State legislature with singular intelligence and fidelity to the people for five terms and his place in that body, cannot easily be filled if he withdraws his nomination and devotes his attention to the office of Auditor General, which nomination the Democrats and independent or better thinking classes of the Republican party has conferred upon him.

There is no question but that Mr. Creasy would make one of the best Auditor Generals the State could afford, but he will be badly needed in the next Legislature, too. Present indications point to a saturnalia of corruption during the next session. Abstemiousness during the next session has whetted the avarice of the machine leaders to a keen edge and now that they have bent the Governor to the basest servitude, they will plunge into the sea of loot to an unexampled depth. Mr. Creasy's presence, with his experience, ability and integrity would hardly serve to avert the operations but he would make the process as difficult as possible.

It may safety be said that there is no man in the State whom the machine leaders would rather defeat than "The Farmer." He is a thorn in their side, a man whom they can neither delude nor corrupt. He is of the people and for the people and if it is possible for him to hold both offices, which we regret to say seems improbable, we would like to see him do it.

NO MACHINE JUDGE.

Yesterday (Thursday) afternoon another meeting of the Judicial conferees took place at the court house in this city but adjourned still disagreeing. This is only the second meeting held, and it is expected that err long an amicable understanding will be reached and Hon. John G. Harman will be the nominee.

Some of the ringsters are earnestly endeavoring to create a feeling toward compromising in favor of an outsider, naming "Jack" Gorman, of Wilkesbarre, as their particular choice—a choice to be admired (?) too. "Wouldn't he be a beaut, though."

The good people of this district need entertain no fears in this direction, for there are too many able and respectable persons in the district to select from rather than to condescend to material of this stripe.

—WE often wonder why it is so many young men can be seen loafing upon our streets until a late hour of night. Many of them are from our best homes. The fathers of these young men, many of them at least, are numbered among our best citizens. If their cow or their horse or even their favorite dog was away from home after dark they would be out on a search, but their own children can roam the town all night with apparent no effort being made to find them. The boy seems to be turned loose at a tender age to wander at will into the paths of sin and vice and then we wonder where all our tramps and worthless specimens of humanity come from. It is a regrettable fact that too many of them come from seed germinated in good homes and then sown in a careless manner upon our streets and back alleys. Reader, is your boy wasting his time upon our streets? If so had you not, at least, look after him as carefully at night fall as you would your horse and cow. We do not intimate that this evil exists to a greater extent in this community than in our sister towns, but the evil seems universal and increases in magnitude as the years roll by.

—THE fact that one of the big railroads has contracted for 1,500,000 railroad ties to be brought from Japan is very significant, and one that should set the people of this country to thinking. It is not so long ago that men in this and other States girdled trees to kill them quickly, and burnt them up when they fell. That was the quickest and easiest way of getting rid of the timber and clearing the land. Not twenty years ago the Northern Pacific Railroad cleared a space of 200 feet wide on each side of the tracks in Oregon, through some of the heaviest timber we ever saw. Thousands of trees from one to six feet and more in diameter lay piled on each other to a considerable height. Those trees would today be worth a great deal of money to that road itself. No doubt it has vast timber resources left, but even that does not excuse the wanton destruction of millions of feet of the finest lumber in the world, at a time when the supply is running short, and we are compelled to send eight thousand miles for the ties needed for our railrads.

—THE Republican theory that the higher the taxes the more prosperity, proves that President Roosevelt is a thorough-going Republican for he heartilly endorses the spending mania and extravagance of his party. For instance, how readily he gave way to the Wadsworth-Cannon plan of making the people pay for the meat inspection, instead of the Packers being made to pay. Can you remember any recommendation of Mr. Roosevelt for economy in expenditures?

—GERMANY celebrated the Fourth of July more enthusiastically than ever before for a hundred years. Not only did the American residents do their utmost, but even the Germans themselves, their Emperor at the head. Of course, the celebration was not altogether in honor of our Fourth, but because the Emperor on that day became a grandfather and that a successor to the imperial crown came in the person of Wilhelm III. This little Prince may some day rule over the German nation. We hope, if he does, he will have all the ability of his grandfather, without any of his questionable ways and qualities. When his turn comes to rule over Germany, and we hope it will, we trust we shall hear less of the mailed hand and more of the plow-share and pruning-hook.

After Democratic Leader Leaves London for a Tour of Britain ex - Congressman Levy Exploits Political Possibilities Here.

London, July 15.—William J. Bryan left London today. He will visit Oxford, Stratford-on-Avon, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Belfast, Cork and Dublin. He will return to London July 23, when he will go to Hawarden.

With the endless speculation which is being indulged in as to the platform which Mr. Bryan will adopt should he become the Democratic nominee for President, the opinion held by Jefferson M. Levy, a former Democratic Representative from New York, who is now in London, is of much interest, because it brings to light a new phase of the reforms which the Nebraska leader is seeking to accomplish. Looking at the situation from the standpoint of a banker, Mr. Levy believes that Mr. Bryan's probable campaign will appeal to the conservative financial interests of the United States through the prospect of the financial system being regulated in a manner which will preclude the possibility of such upheavals as follow a change of administration every four years.

INFLUENCE FOR STABILITY.

"Nothing is more menacing to the prosperity of the country," said Mr. Levy, "than the upheavals which threaten to occur after each Presidential election. What we need is to have our methods so systematized that commercial, industrial and financial interests need stand in no fear of being interfered with by any change in the administration. Washington, under the present arrangement, is too much of a weather vane on the country's business methods. There is every reason to believe that Mr. Bryan would bend his energies toward bringing about more stability in the form of government.

"Blessed with sound business sense, he favors a conservative financial system and he has skill to put a peg here and a peg there, so that our methods would soon be on a firm basis. This is an opportunity which he would unquestionably avail himself of if he were to become the next incumbent of the White House. His conduct in office, I think, would be the embodiment of conservatism.

ERA OF REORGANIZATION.

"I do not believe he would try to interfere with the Constitution of the United States, but, at the same time, he would work for national betterment. Exposures of rottenness in many quarters which have been made in the last year or two have formed a basis for an era of reorganization which he would take advantage of and erect on it a staple structure of safe, sane methods."

Mr. Levy predicts a Democratic victory at the next Presidential election.

FARMER CREASY BUSY

But Crops, Not Politics, Engrosses Democratic Candidate.

Bloomsburg, Pa., July 14.—Farm work is interesting W. T. Creasy more than politics just now, and, although he is the Democratic candidate for Auditor General and also a candidate for State Representative from this county, his crops are getting more attention than his fences.

Wiping his perspiring forehead on a wide bandana as he sat down on his front porch with a sigh of relief this evening he said:—

We took in ten loads of wheat from 1 o'clock this afternoon until 7 o'clock this evening, and then hunted a lost dog and found him on the roof of the barn, so that I had altogether too strenuous a time lately to pay much attention to politics.

Candidly, I haven't had time lately with all the farm work to be done to give any consideration to my plans for the present campaign. There is plenty of time yet for me to decide whether or not I will remain a candidate for Representative.

Mr. Creasy seems quite unconcerned regarding the coming campaign, and spends most of his time from early morning until late at night superintending details of his farm.

Not Dead, but Sleeping.

Mrs. Kate Moore in remitting her subscription to the Intelligencer for 1906-07 says: "In subscribing for your paper a year ago I thought I would get some news from Mooresburg, my old home, but it seems they have all left or the place is dead, that they cannot give any news at all. Stir them up a little and get new life into them."

[It does seem strange that we cannot secure a correspondent from that particular locality, but we assure Mrs. Moore that there are still some live people living at Mooresburg. They are only a little indifferent. We especially request that someone try to report a few items each week.—Ed.

A Sin to be Straight.

An exchange says, Col. Guffey asks if it is a crime to be a straight democrat. We say yes, it is an ignorant sin to be a straight Democrat or straight Republican when one knows the candidate to be unfit, and only votes for him because he is on his ticket. If what the candidate represents, is not for the best interests of the party he represents, then do not vote for him simply because he belongs to the party. Be independent enough to vote for what is for the best interests of the community at large.

Notwithstanding the crookedness and unevenness of the street crossing at the intersection of Bloom and Walnut streets, it is a great improvement over the old one. A number of other crossings need similar attention, but for pity sake try to get them in straight. There are a number of sidewalks in all quarters of the city that need repairs, too.

—A REMARKABLE record has just been made by the steamer Goldmouth, belonging to an English line, which arrived at Rotterdam a few days ago from Singapore, a British city in the East Indies, by the Cape of Good Hope route, a distance of 11,791 miles, in fifty-two days, without once stopping her engines or checking the making of steam in her boilers, making 226 miles daily, on an average. The vessel burned liquid fuel, and with such economy that she had enough left upon her arrival for twenty days' steaming. This record is unrivalled.

Frog Hunters.

Undertaker Henrie drove a party, consisting of himself, Rev. and Mrs. Guy, Mrs. Ed. Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Kerns, Miss Elizabeth Binkley, Miss Jean Yohn and Mr. and Mrs. Lutz, beyond Mausdale last Thursday evening on a frog hunt. Twenty-one of the amphibious creatures fell prey to the alert eye and dexterous hand of the hunters in a short time. Ask the parson about the speckeled beauty he caught.
