State highway department against paving further than Chambers street, aring further than Oramors street, as he believed beyond that point mac-adamization could be employed to a much better advantage. He finally agreed that it would be a good prop-osition to pave as far as the north-ern end of the steam mill.

Mr. Clay said he had ascertaine a the State highway department that the street could be paved under the act without using a course of con-crete, substituting for it a course of gravel with a two-inch sand cushion on top. This was precisely what coun-cil wanted and as it cuts down the
