$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hail's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical Traternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. ials.

THE BEAUTIFUL BUT VENOMOUS

the Pleasing Exterior of This Brilliant Fungus Lurks a Victous Poison That Is Fatal to the Lives of Men and Cattle.

In the dark shade of lofty pine trees and under spreading oaks in more open woods a mushroom is found so remarkable in color and graceful in form that its beauty has excited admiration for hundreds of years. The color of its bright orange cap and its chalk white stem and gills is heightened by the surrounding darkness of the woods and presents a contrast as singular as it is beautiful. But beneath the pleasing exterior of this brilliant fungus a potson lurks so fatal to the lives of men and cattle that it is called the deadly amanita, and in different countries mothers caution their children to beware of its In the dark shade of lofty pine trees tion their children to beware or uscharms.

Amanita muscaria, the deadly, or fly, amanita, is completely incased in a fleece-like covering during the early stages of its growth, which makes it decidedly egg shaped in form. As the stem lengthens this covering either adheres in loose patches to the top of the cap or it slips away and forms a sheathing to the cup at the base of the stem.

Another inner covering breaks away in its turn from the cap as the mush-room expands and forms a conspicuous collar about the upper part of the stem. The bulbons base of the stem and these ruptured, fleecy coverings are pronounced characteristics which are most helpful in distinguishing this dangerous fungus from the other varieties of mushrooms.

It is strong, free from posts and grows to a height from four to sixteen inches. In color the cap is sometimes bright scarlet, again orange or yellow or reddish in the center and light yellow toward the edges, and it has not teenble wardlike patches spread over the top. On old plants the color fades out, and late as the season particularly forms of the deadly amanita are found which are almost white. The stem is easily separated from the cup at its easily separated from the cup at its easily separated from the cup at its base.

This mushroom is more generally known than any of the other poisonous species. It has long been used as a fly poison in Europe, and it takes its name, muscaria, from the Latin word for a fly. Its poisonous effect upon human beings begins a few hours after it has been eaten. The symptoms are nausea and faintness, with cold perspiration and stupor, followed in severe cases by death from a gradual weakening of the heart.

A strong emetic should be given at once, and in all cases a physician should be called. Sulphate of atropin is the only known chemical antidote for this poison, and to save the patient it must be promptly administered by hypodermic injections.

The poison may also be absorbed through the prizes of the skin, and bad cases of poisoning have been produced by simply holding an amanita in the closed hand or breathing its exhalations in a warm room.

The death cup is even more poisonous than the deadly amanita and stands first among all noxious fungifor its poisonous qualities. It grows in the eastern and middle states and in particularly large quantities near the city of Washington.

The boleti for instance, have several varieties which are nonedible, although many kinds, on the other hand, make delicious food. The boleti are distinguished by a sponge-like surface of pores instead of gills beneath the cap. The harmful varieties are bitter, as a rule, and change color to blue or red when cut or broken. The edible varieties remain white.—Annie Oakes Huntington in Youth's Companion.

Curious Incident In the History of the Kohinoor.

The Kohinoor fell into the hands of the ruler of Lahore and on the conquest of the Punjab became a possession of Queen Victoria in the year 1850. The first authentic mention of this matchiess gem is by an eastern monarch, who refers to a "jewel valued at one-half, the daily expenses of the whole world." A century or two later the Persian conqueror of India, seeing the diamond glitter in the turban of the unfortunate rajah, exclaimed, with the unfortunate rajah, exclaimed, with rough and somewhat costly humor, "Come, let us change our turbans in pledge of friendship!" The exchange was promptly effected. The stone fell at last into the hands of the British, and pending its delivery to the crown Sir John Lawrence, afterward Lord Lawrence, was made its guardian. His blographer, Bosworth Smith, relates a curious incident of its custody. Half unconsciously Sir John thrust it, wrapped up in numerous folds of cloth, into his waistecat pocket, the whole being in an insignificant little box. He continued the work upon which he was

AN ODD BIRD SPECIES. She Does the Courting and He Most of the Nursery Work.

Wilson's phalarope is very common in nearly all parts of the northwestern cries, feeding prettily along the moist tressing itself over our presence. From nearly every standpoint this phalarope, like all other species of its class, is an anomaly among the birds. Apwhently a land bird, it has partially webbed or scalipped feet and is a good and graceful swimmer. The female is the larger and handsomer of the pair. She does the courting and he most of the subsequent incubation and nursery work. He is duly meek and obedient, as becomes the husband of an amazon, for so worthy and strenuous a young female as she will not tolerate a buck handly a round tall when there is hanging around idle when there is plenty of useful work to be done. For her part, to lay eggs so big that the chicks are clothed and able to run at birth is all that should reasonably birth is all that should reasonably be expected of her. Their marital relations are otherwise scandalous from our point of view. Two or three idle, valuglorious females are often seen devoting themselves to one little male at the height of the nesting season, and no one seems to be sure whether or not he is the husband of any one or not he is the husband of any one or all of them. Anyhow, they are all head over ears in love with him.—Herbert K, Job in Outing Magazine.

INDIAN REMEDIES.

Peculiar Medical Methods Used In the Far East.

Great virtues are ascribed to the claws and horns of certain animals. Tigers' claws are in great demand with the common people. One or two claws may be worn near the iolns, but should one possess a larger number the fortunate owner makes a garland of them and wears them around his neck. Deer's horn ground into the paste is an excellent baim for pain and swellings. A more curious use is found for the same substance; it is sometimes made into a powder which is supposed to aid into a powder which is supposed to aid the growth of stunted women. The joints taken from the long and slender tail of the black scorpion are supposed to keep illness at arm's distance when children wear them on their waist thread.

A red or swollen eye is cured by having it touched with the bolt or chain of a door. A remedy which I have seen applied with considerable effect in more than one epileptic fit is to place a bunch of keys in the palm of the sufferer. I have heard it said that the fit passes away as readily if the keys are placed on the head. A rather quaint remedy in the case of a sprained neck is to use an iron measure for a pillow.

Sore throat is cured by spitting on redhot iron, quite the simplest and least expensive cure known to the native doctor. Peacock's flesh and pig's ghee are the best medicines for acute rheumatism.—Madras Mall.

Dae Theory of the Origin of This Hadge of Disgrace.

"Did you ever stop to think about the origin of the stripes we use in our prisons?" said a man with an eye for the curious. "If you have not, it will not take you long to figure the thing out if you happen to know anything about the Bible.

"For instance, in the laws and ordinances of Deuteronomy we find the following, which will give us the clew to the origin of the stripes as a badge of infamy: If there be a controversy between men and they come unto Judgment that the judges may judge them, then they shall justify the righteous and condemn the wicked. And it shall be if the wicked man be worthy to be beaten that the judge shall cause him to lie down and to be beaten before his face, according to his fault, by a certain number. Forty stripes he may give him and not exceed; less if he should exceed and beat him above these with many stripes; then thy brother should seem vile unto thee."

Behind the children and still higher in square pews against the wall sat the young men and maldens, the latter on the north and the former on the south. One gallery pew was reserved for colored men and one for colored women, and, queerest of all, a high square pew over the north stairway was assigned to old malds and a similar pew over the south stairs to old bachelors. Just how many years these two classes had to number before they were promoted from the lower seats in the synagogue the records do not state, but that they sat in those exaited seats Samuel Dwight Partridge, to whom we are indebted for the description of the old meeting house, assures us is beyond question. The square pews on the floor were assigned to householders, according to wealth and social position.—

East and West.

The chief distinction between the genius of the eastern civilization and that of the west, according to an oriental, lies in this: With you the indiental, lies in this: With you the individual is the hub of the universe—even charity begins at home with you—while with us of the east it is the whole, the state, not the individual, that we emphasize. An individual is nothing; the state, the whole, is everything. We sacrifice thousands of individuals, we sacrifice our children and our wives upon the altar of national honor, without hesitation, without regret.—Forum.

Miss Hills, who "has won the reputation of being the best American miniature painter of the present day," was trained at the Art Sudents' League in New York and the Art School in Boston. "She began her career as an artist by designing Christmas cards and valentines. After having gained experience in these lines she worked with pastels, her pastels including figures and landscapes. Her work was characterized by rich coloring and great depth of feeling, and began to attract the attention of many able critics, but she was not satisfied here. She wanted a finer method of coloring than pastels, so took up the small brush. In the beginning her orders were small, but she was willing to make the sacrifice in order to realize her ambitions. After working quietly for a few years, she began to exhibit at a Boston gallery, and it was not very long before she began to exhibit at a Boston gal-lery, and it was not very long before her name became know as a miniature artist at home and abroad.'

NOW A CONGRESSMAN The most talked-about man in this Congressional district, and, indeed, in all the mining sections in Pennsylvania, to-day is William B. Wilson. Mine boy in day is William B. Wilson. Mine boy in America, the story of the man's career reads like one of those delightful books based upon the lives of Lincoln or Garfield.

The story of Wilson, of his boyhood of his manhood, of his climb over the Stationery for Farmers.

Farmers and others, particularly those living on the Rural Delivery routes, should have printed stationery as well as business men. It is not only more business like to send a letter with name and address printed on the notehead and envelope, but it insures the return of the letter in case it is not delivered. We are especially well equipped to do this class of printing and can do it promptly and nearly well supply 250 noteheads and 250 envelopes, extra quality, for $1.50, or 75c for either one lot. This is cheaper than you can buy the paper and envelopes regularly at retail stores.
