BILL INTRODUCED TO STOP TREATING

HARRISBURG, Jan. 23. A bill to stop treating in any place-where vinous, malt or spirituous liqu-ors are sold was introduced in the where vinous, mair or spirituous inquors are sold was introduced in the house this morning by Mr. Thomas, of Bucks. It provides that the proprietor of any place of this kind who allows reating shall be guilty of a misdeme anor and shall be subject to a fine of $100 and imprisonment of sixty days. The act defines "treating" thus: "To be the practice of inviting one of nore persons to drink any malt, vin ous or spirituous liquors as a compli-ment or as a civility, often in return for the like favor shown.''

The old scheme to erect a new conn-ty in the upper part of the State and make Hazleton the seat thereof-it was once designed to do this and name the new county Quay county—came up again this morning Mr. Boyle, of Luzerne, presented a bill providing for the erection and organization of new counties out of parts of two adjoining counties.

Mr. Flack, of Bucks, introduced a bill to provide that townships which have abolished the work tax shall get more money from the State. THE $20 OPEN MILEAGE TICKET. On September 1, 1906, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company placed on sale at $20 each one-thousand-mile tickets, good for one year, and good for the passage of the holder, and any number of other persons within mileage limit of ticket, on any of the lines of the Company east of Pittsburg and Buffalo. This ticket has proved so popular that it has been almost impossible to print them fast enough to meet the demand, about 200,000 having been distributed as many as it may be desirable to use it.

For business houses which keep a force on the road or which find it necessary to send men out frequently, the ticket is especially attractive, as it is good in the hands of any one at any time and for as many as it may be desirable to use it.

Merchants, manufacturers, buisness men, and others who make frequent trips to New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Buffalo, and other cities have also found it a very convenient ticket. It is available at any moment, not only for the business man himself, but for any one whom he may desire to send, and for the members of his family.

In fact, it is a convenient and desirable form of transportation for every one, for by its use a two-cent-a-mile rate is obtained for one-way trips and in many casess a considerable reduction is gained Mileage Tickets are on sale at all Ticket Offices.

There-had been only six months of that, and a lifetime stretched drab before them. "Marjorie!" He leaned half across the table, his glance full of passionate appeal. He seemed to have forgotten altogether that half a year ago they had parted for good and all, with the promise never to speak to one another again.

had parted for good and all, with the promise never to speak to one another again.

The girl accepted his eyes for a second. Then her lashes filckered and fell. Her lips were held taut to conceal their trembling, and her breath was coming in little jerks. But she controlled herself quickly, and when she looked up again her expression was quite calm, whatever it may have indexed.

"Personalities," she forced herself to say, "will have to be avoided, Dick. We settled all that long ago, did we not?"

Her words had a final ring, and Kendall felt himself going white under the stab of them. Could it be possible, after all past asseverations, that she had ceased to care so entirely? Surely she could never have suffered as he had done the past six months and sit facing him now with so cool a demeanor. He was on the point of speaking when the waiter reappeared.

step toward its consummation. The first had been taken when he drifted into the correspondence with the girl, a correspondence which had quickly run through all the successive stages till now it stood upon a decidedly sentimental footing.

Kendall occupied himself alternately by studying the flying landscape and the photograph of his latest inamorata. She was good looking enough in all sense, but for some perverse reason of the hour he chose to resent her rich dark beauty with passionate defiance. Somehow another face, sweeter than a flower, star eyed, framed in a cloud of misty gold hair, kept coming in between with maddening insistence, bit ter memory of his disappointment wringing his heart as he had never thought it could be wrung again. An unwonted tear caught in his eye. He dashed it away in some rage at himself and the ner instant was poring attentively over an inverted newspaper article.

Presently came the first call for dinner, and Kendall rose with alacrity, making his way to the dining car ahead. Anything to give relief from his present gloomy thoughts. Every table but one was occupied, and he took his seat gratefully, dashing off an elaborate order in an utterly preoccupied fashion. Then he gave his attention to the dingy train of freight cars whining monotonously past and the shadowy chain of mountains, rearing themselves like solemn green cones in the distance. Presently a driving rain set in, adding, if possible, to his desperate frame of mind.

Kendall's heart gave a great lurch. Had she heard? He would be frank with her anyway.

"If you mean the circumstances surrounding our-disagreement," he said, "decidedly they do."

She made no answer, but the hurt look in her eyes told him the truth, and he hurried on eagerly:

"Marjorie, will you listen to my side of it? Listen! I was desperate—crazy—when I thought I had lost you. I threw myself into anything—everything—all sorts of things—as a means of getting a little relief from the eating misery of it all. Before I knew it I found myself mixed up in this silly business. But I swear to you on my word as a man that there is no question of honor involved. The whole thing, believe me, is nine parts jest. With a little it might be made serious, but, thank heaven, no fatal words have been epoten."

"But she believes"—

"But she believes"—

"Not at all. She has no right. She does not. I know it. Dear, you have always been good and wise and liberal. Don't let this nonsensical thing some between us now. You will not?"
Again he leaned toward her with passionate vehemence, and his fingers eaught hers and held them hard, his gres burning into hers.

When he finished speaking Marjorie was looking into his face wistfully, almost sadly.

"I am sorry, Dick," she said, "but it all too late. I sail from New York Friday as companion to an invalid lady. My father lost everything, and I accepted the engagement last month, it is serious, you see."

Kendail smiled. "There are degrees of seriousness, Miss Dereforth, are there not?"

She shook her head, still grave, but his syes only brightened. He had the feins now, and he was resolved upon the herois course.

"Will you be good enough to give me the lady's address?" he asked.

Wondering, Marjorie drew from her bag a silp of paper and passed it over to him.

At the next station Kendail left the car for a few moments, and the girl went back into her sleeper, where she a tremendous sensation of relief. Self control was fast getting away from her. Site raised a glass of water to her lips and drained it feverishly. Kendall noted that her fingers were shaking, and his heart gave a sudden throb. Perhaps, after all, her coldness was mere assumption. He sought her glance eagerly, but it was frigidly withheld.
