STORE WINDOW LIGHTS. Begulations For Their Costrol as Applied in Berlin. The regulation of artificial lighting in connection with window displays is a subject which has been given com-paratively little attention by the mu-nelepalities of this country, considering the extent to which it is used for this purpose in these days. That this phase of the lighting question demands closer seruiny there can be no doult, and it might be well for information on the matter to look to those cittes which have given it study. Stringent regulations have been adopted in Ber-lin and other European cities, where merchants were inclined to take ad-vantage of laxity in the premises. In Berlin lamps outside shop windows must not be lower than the feet above the pavement or project more than forty inches from the wall. Where the lighting in the windows is done by oil, petroleum, gas fame or Weisbachs there must always be a sheet of glass not less than one-tend of an inch thick under the lamps and running the whole length and breadth of the shop windows, so as to completely cover Mrs. Eugene Kemp and son are visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. Samuel Mauger. The lamps must be at least forty inches below any inflammable part of the construction and ten inches from any such part horizontally. There are also regulations as to iron sereens where there is bare wood and as to efficient ventilation. Bare figures are not allowed in igniting the gas. This must be done by chemical or elec-trical kindling arrangements especial ly sanctioned by the authorities. The regulations for incandescent electric lamps are about equally strict—Mu-nicipal Journal and Engineer.

After Clovis, the Merovingian kings this abbey. After Clovis, the Merovingian kings seem to have returned to the ancient emblems. They were content to fight under engles, flowers, crosses or the images of saints until the time of Char-lemagne, who, if an old mosale in the Church of St. John Lateran at Rome is to be believed, reintroduced the blue. dag embellished with six red roses. The color of the French flag was changed in 1124, when Louis the Fat carried the red oriflamb of St. Denis in his struggles against the German emperor Henry V. This continued to be the official French flag day to the hattle of Aglneourt in 1415. In the meantime the blue flag had again made its appearance, now decorated with the flaur-de-lis instead of the roses of Charlemagne. In this form it was car-ried at Acre and Creey and Poitiers, until in the fifteenth century it be-came the banner of France. The first white flag in Frenc'h flasto-ty was the banner of the Virgin Mary borne by Joan of Arc in her heroic campaigns for the derses of the dau-phin. A pure white flag was occasion-ally used by Francis I, in his struzelos borne by Joan of Arc In her herole campaigns for the defense of the dau-phin. A pure white flag was occasion-ally used by Francis I. In his struggles against the Emperor Charles V., but it did not become the permanent royal banner until Henry IV., the first Bour-bon, ascended the throne in 1580. The tricolor of the French revolution was a compromise. The cockades of the revolutionists were composed of two colors, the red of the Paris com-mune and the blue of the ancient mon-archy. In the troubled times just pre-ceding the deposition and execution of Louis XVI., Lafayette, to signify the desire of the people for a reconcilia-tion with their king, added the Bour-bon white to the cockade. The tricolor as a national emblem was adopted by the convention in 1794. Long before this, however, the tri-color had been the national flag of Holland. The Dutch were in fact the first to use it. When the United Prov-inces galmed their independence from Spain in the sixteenth century, accord-ing to a favorite oid story which can-not be authenticated, they invited Hen-ry of Navarre to choose their colors, and he suggested orange, blue and white. Whether he selected this com-bination or not, such were the colors of Holland until some time in the sev-enteenth century, when the orange was replaced by red. When William of Orange became king of England in 1608 he crossed the channel under the red, white and blu The early luhabitants of England, like those of other countries, used em-blematic devices of one kind or an-other, that of the Saxons being a white horse. The introduction of flags into England is ascribed to the missionary Rt. Augustine and his followers, who after the conversion of King Ethelbert, according to the Venerable Bede, en-tered Canterbury in procession, chant-ing and bearing small banners. Since the fourteenth century the cross of St. George has been the emblem of the British nation. Before that time it was worn on the armor by the cru-saders, among whom it came to be known as the "jack." During the bloody civil wars of the fiftenth cen-tury it was practically superseded by the roses, white and red. and in 1600 Miss Annie Robinson spent Sunday Mrs. Miles Bitler is seriously ill at Mrs. Wm. Samuel Stump gave friends in Mooresburg a short call Monday. Blankets, Comforts tury it was practically superseded by the roses, white and red, and in 1600 by proclamation of James I. it was finally replaced by a red flag with th jack in the upper inside corner. The red standard of Great Britain did not attain its present form, however, until after the union with Ireland in 1801. after the union with Ireland in 1801. By parliamentary enactment in 1801, the present union jack was brought finto being by the addition of the cross of St. Patrick. Waving flags are said to have been first brought to Spain by the Saracens. The present Spanish colors, red and yellow, came from the old shields of Castile and Aragon. The Austrian black and yellow were the colors of the Holy Roman Empire. They were adopted, so the story goes by Frederick Barbarossa, whose fancy was captured at a ceremony in Main by the black and gold flooring of the hall. The crescent was originally the spe-
