Mr. Povey's baggage was already on the Nordland and he was in sight of the vessel when he fell on the street. It is accounted a fortunate circumst-ance that death occurred before he was carried out to sea. As it was, he was given a burial by his friends in a town where he had formed many attach-ments, while, if death had occurred on the Nordland, the body would have been in the hands of strangers and would have been disposed of accord-ing to the series of ing to the rules provided for such

From the present outlook there is erious danger of a repetition of the experiences undergone in the closing hours of the last session. At that time there was such an avalanche of bills, finally agreed to by both houses after long delay, that the enrolling clerks were simply overwhelmed and could not keep pace, thus delaying the adjournment. If such a thing should happen again this year the only parback the hands of the clock when noon
