THE LIBY PRISON.

Little ken we sught of familios Little of starvatios here, Little of that pairand anguish, Prone to wring the scalding tear, Here we've peace to full perfection, Save a Mauch Chuisk now and then Where blood is sacificed to treason, By Corconia's outswed men. But these light affections vanish, Like a vapor newly risen, When we turn oursyes toward Richn To that hell stamped Liby prison. To that Moloch of secession, Blind to tears, and sumb to reason, Through whose arch are mortals driv Sacrificed to daming treason.

Next to Spains dart Inquisition, In the darker days of yore, Ranks the filtry Lby prison, Fetted, foul, and stined with gore. There the Indian weed was worked on By the lowborn, cracking slaves, Now'th deemed a fit reception, For the captured Union braws.

Like the gloomy dock Rialto, Of Venetian birth and fame, Looms that prison damp and dismal, All its horrors to reclaim. Noisome pestilential vapor, Loathesome vermin sporting round, Nameless bread and beans are given Cruel comfort for the bound.

Stretched on beds of ill description, Lays the wasting form of man, Lays the wasting form of man, from gaze of wife or loved one, Paint his thralldom, ye who can. Curses from the gazdesnen greet him. Dann the Yankee's sighs and tears, Dann him for a Lincoln minlon," Grates upon the soldiers ears.

From that pit, that slough of tree Goes the victim of the traiter, The dark old Jersey prison slip, In which our fathers waned sway At last has found a counterpart, In this our fiery trial day. How long can we thus enduring, Suffer insult to our nation?

DESTITUTION IN SOUTH CAROLINA AND GEORGIA.—A letter from Morris Island 23d ultimo, to the Philadelphia Inquirer

says:
"A large number of intercepted rebels letters have fallen into possession of our Post Commander of the Island. A perusal of them exhibits the great destitution and extreme suffering of the people in South Carolina and southeastern Georgia; corroborates also the prevailing opinion here at the North, that the Confederacy is nearly used up. One of these letters, written at Barnwell, expresses 'a hope that this terrible and devastating war will soon terminate; but if it does not we must per ish from famine or the want of clothing Another, written by a merchant at Jack-
