The Commission houses appear to have come to the conclusion that they must moderate their views respecting prices, and are offering their goods at low figures. The jobbers, however, cannot be tempted to buy anything beyond small parcels, to provide for the immediate demand. The manufacturers of cotton fabrics are pursuing a strictly cautious policy. The difficulty of procuring paying prices for goods discourages production, and the consequence is that, although the receipts of cotton are abundant, there is no corresponding augmentation of the supply of goods, and cotton, being thus kept dear in price is sent abroad, where it will realize relatively higher prices than here.

In the Canadian Parliament, on Wednesday, the Attorney General bro't in a bill to prevent and suppress outrages on the frontier, and manufacture and shipment for unlawful purposes, and providing for the seizure and examination of suspected vessels; also, to give notice to persons providing unwelcome hospitality in that country to remove from it.
