"Eight and Sixteen."

The following, which we clip from an exchange, being part of an address ful statement of the manner in which young persons are neglected, and thus permitted to run into crime. We have heretofore, on several occasions taken the liberty of dropping a few words to parents and guardians with regard to their duty towards the rising generation.

to fathers and mothers, and shows a fearful responsibility. Certainly a parent should secure and exercise absolute con-trol over his child until sixteen—it canmot be a very difficult matter to do this, except in very rare cases; and if that control is not wisely and efficiently exercised, it must be the parent's fault—it is owing to parental negelect or remissness.
Hence the real source of ninety-eight per cent, of the crime in a country such as England or the United States lies at the door of the parents.

DIED:

LINES.

Written on the death of Maggie Lawall, who died in Oil City, Pa., July 17, 1866, aged 19 years, 10 mos., 22 days. In the spring-time of her days she was cut down—but bleased thought! Comforting hope! What is loss to us is gain to her, "if we believe Jesus died and roge again, even so, they also who sleep in Jesus, will God with him."

Prom earth she has gently passed away,
Her weary spirit is now at rest,
Jesus at last has called her home
To dwell forever with the blest.

Alas! she has gone, the good, the pure, None named her but to praise her, None knew her but to love.

She has gone to join her sister, And to dwell with her above, And Jesus her great Rede To continue in His love.

Ah! dear Maggie's gone and left us, And her death we deeply mourn; But 't is Jesus that bereft us, He has only called her home.

Oh! cruel death; why cut her off In girthood's early hour; Why crush the noble and the good To show thy sovereign power.

Why blanch the rose tint on the cheek, Why dim the eye lit spark, Why chill the hearts warm spring; Oh, speak boath loves a shining mark.

She sleeps in the graveyard's quiet shade. Her sands of life are run;

But murmur not that she is gone'
Fond friends and mather cease thy weeping,
She is in that blest and happy land,
Not dead, "but only sleeping."
