

For a long time it has baffled the medical authorities to account for the force with which the waves beat against the shore, and it has recently come to light that it arises from the fact of there being "nuclei" in the sea.

Woman is said to be a mere delusion, but it is sometimes pleasant to hug delusions.

"I'm a gone sucker," as the child said when his mother weaned him.

Most men who complain that they have nothing to do, are just about equal to the task.

He that would, have no trouble in this world must be born in it.

When it rains, it pours.

Good blood will always show itself, as the old lady said, when she was struck by the redness of her nose.

Why is the leader of an orchestra on the opera the most wonderful man of his age? Because he beats time.

The husband who devoured his wife with kisses found afterwards that she disagreed with him.

There is no monarch's signet-ring that is typical of as much duty as the wedding-ring is.

Opportunities, like eggs, must be hatched when they are fresh.

GEN. SHERMAN CORNER.—While General Sherman was in General Howard's tent one day during the Georgia campaign, the medical director, who knew that the former liked "glass" occasionally, while General Howard was total abstinence, told Sherman that he looked weary and ill, and if he would go with him he would give him a sedlitz powder.

The General acquiesced in the proposal with alacrity, but General Howard opening his valise begged him not to leave and produced a powder which he mixed and gave to Sherman. The bystanders who saw the joke smiled as loud as was proper under the circumstances.

DUTY.—A farmer's boy was sent to a certain gate in order to keep it shut, and thus prevent the many hunters who went that way from trampling down his master's grass. After he had been at the gate a short time, a gentleman came up and asked him to open it.

"No," said the lad; "I was placed here to keep it shut."

The gentleman became indignant, and expostulated with the boy.

"Don't you know who I am? I am the Duke of Wellington."

The lad said he did not mind who he was. The duke, remarking that the lad was doing his duty, said he ought to be rewarded, and gave him half a sovereign.

Away ran the boy, skipping across the field, and shouting to everyone whom he met:

"Ah, I have done more than Bony could do; I have stopped the Duke of Wellington."

The State election took place in Mississippi on Monday. The vote was very close between Gen. Humphries and Judge Fisher, but the latter is probably chosen Governor. The Legislature will meet on the 10th inst.

The President-to-day signed 85 pardon warrants, principally for parties in Alabama, Tennessee, Virginia and North Carolina. They were sent to the State Department for the signature of the Secretary.

Thomas B. Peddie, a well known manufacturer of Newark, N.J., has been nominated for Mayor of that city by the Union Convention. The resolutions indorse the eight-hour movement.

Recent intelligence from Columbus, Ga., is to the effect that cotton sells there for 20 cents per pound, and in Goldsborough at 28 cents, in currency.

The gunboats Victoria and General Price were sold on Tuesday at Mound City. The former brought $10,000 and the latter $14,000.

Unsuccessful efforts have been made in Richmond to secure a revocation of the military order suppressing The Commercial Bulletin.

A Kentucky delegation, headed by Garret Davis, is on its way to Washington to request the President to remove Gen. Palmer.

A plot among the 225 white and black criminals to escape from the Washington jail was discovered on Monday, just in time to prevent its success.

The name of the Post-Office formerly called "Americus," Lyon Co., Kansas, has been changed to "Sheridan."

Mrs. M. L. Longstreet, wife of the Rebel General of that name, has been pardoned by the President. She came within the $20,000 exemption list.

An anecdote is told of the Bishop of Exeter, England. The scene is a church in Turkey, the Bishop is present, but not officiating, and he sits with the congregation. The officiating clergyman ventures to soften to ears polite the phrase "Eat and drink their own damnation!" He reads it "condemning."

A voice is heard energetically exclaiming "Damnation!!" The whole church is startled. But it is not a profane epithet they hear, it is the voice of the Bishop in rebuke of the officiating minister.

THE SEA OF GALILEE.

The ascent of Mount Tabor was steep and difficult. The summit reached, we had that sweeping view from which none in all the world is more beautiful, certainly none more sublime. In the northeast was the glory of Hermon, snow-capped and towering in the sky, on the north the Lebanon range stretching away to the sea; on the northwest the hills that surround Nazareth, and farther away the peaks that overlook Tyre and Sidon. On the west was the plain leading off to the Mediterranean, and here and there the silver gleam of Kishon—that ancient river, the river Kishon. On the south side of the plain, and in the middle of it, were almost innumerable points of interest. Carmel bounded the horizon toward the sea-shore. Between us and that hill lay Taanach, Mogiddo, and all the points which in the long battle history of Ezedraon made it to be looked on as a very plain of strife for armies, so that John in the Apocalypse spoke of the hill Mogiddo as the last gathering place of nations for combat. South of Tabor lay Shunem, and beyond it the peaks of Gilboa, looking down on Jezreel. Close by Shunem was Nain, and not far from that Eador, and thence the eye swept eastward and downward, for the plain descended rapidly; all the mountains seem to fall swiftly to the Jordan valley, and there, deep down in the slopes, lying in a basin of emerald, was the sea of Galilee.

It lies in a deep basin. The eastern shore rises abruptly in high rocky mountains, and the land east of this is barren and desolate stretching away to the ruins of Gadara, the chief city of the ancient Gadarenes. The lake is not large. Here the traveler may be disappointed. The word "sea" has led him to think of Genesaret as a vast body of water. He is scarcely prepared for the little lake over which his eye sweeps with a single glance. But no lake or ocean where the observer looks across the water into such infinite distances of thought and memory, joy and sorrow. The lake is oval in form, lying north and south. The Jordan enters it at the northern end and flows out at the southern extremity. Around the northern and northwestern shores cluster the points of deepest interest. There were Chorazin and Bethsaida, and Capernaum. On the east was the land of the Gadarenes. But the steepness of the mountains forbade the location of any cities there, except near the northern and southern extremities of the lake. The western shore must have been lined with cities and villages. The ruins which are found all along the banks, and especially the vacant tombs in the rocky hillside, attest the former wealth and populousness of this coast. There is not a city of the time of Christ, although it can hardly be doubted that it occupies the site of some well-known place of that day. It is the only place of any importance now on the shore of the sea. On the southeastern side is a small village of mud huts, but nowhere else on its whole circuit is there any collection of human habitations; and I believe is but a ruin. In the time of the crusades it was a walled town, and the towers and walls remain shaken by earthquakes into mangled ruin. Breaches admit friends and enemies through the old defenses at numerous points, but there is not much within to tempt either class. No business is done here, and on the evening of my arrival one solitary boat, a rudely built open fishing boat was the only craft afloat on the sea. Since that time travelers report this boat as among the things of the past, and there is not even one small representative left of the ancient shipping.

The sayings of Napoleon First. To a general officer not eminently distinguished, who solicited from the Emperor a Marshal's baton, he said: "It is not I that makes marshals; it is victories." On hearing the first gun at Friedland, he exclaimed: "Soldiers! it is an auspicious day. To a troop of artillery, which had failed in their duty, he said: "This flag which you have basely deserted shall be placed in the Temple of Mars, covered with grape. Your corps is disbanded."

He presented Moreau, on one occasion with a magnificent pair of pistols as a reward for a service. "I intended," said he, "to have got the names of your victories engraved upon them, but there was not room for them."

A sentinel who allowed General Jourdan to enter Napoleon's tent without giving the password, was brought before him: "Go," said he, "the man who forced the Iron will walk a funeral procession."

"What have you done with your eagle?" asked Napoleon. "A regiment that loses its eagle has lost all. Yes; but I see two standards that you have taken. I intended," said he, "to have got the names of your victories engraved upon them, but there was not room for them."

On the field of Austerlitz, a young Russian officer, taken prisoner, was brought before him. "Sir," said he, "let me be shot. I have suffered my guns to be taken."

"Young man," was the reply, "be content. The man who has conquered his soldiers may still have titles to glory."

FEMALE SUFFRAGE.—The question whether women shall vote is practically decided in Europe. The inhabitants of Aio, in France, chose the other day nine of their townswomen to be of the municipal council there, and lawyers in England are ready to contend that if the ratepayers of parish should take it into their heads to depose half a dozen benevolent ladies to their number to the board of guardians by a clear majority of votes, no legal obstacle would prevent their admission. John Stuart Mill proposes to discard, in all future reform bills, any distinction of sex; while, says an English writer, to show how it would work, we have been favored with a specimen election speech by Mrs. Jenkins, who, so to speak, unsuccessfully contested Dorsetshire in her husband's name.

THE SOUTHERN NEWSPAPERS are rapidly improving in appearance, and we think it safe to say, assuming a more healthful tone. The rebel annals is fading gradually but surely.
