C. E. ANDERSON, Chairman. Dr. A. Lusk, Secretary.

There will be a meeting of the Officers and Members of the Butler County Agricultural Society held in the Court House on Thursday, the 5th day of June, at 1 o'clock, P. M.

A general attendance is requested, by Order of the President, JOHN B. MCQUISTON, Sec'y.

Our contributors will have to bear with us patiently. Their productions, both of verse and prose, will appear hereafter.

Drugs and Groceries.

Have you been at the new Drug and Grocery Store of Bell & Dieffenbacher? If not, you should call without delay. If you are sick, they keep that which if taken in proper quantities, will make you whole. If you are well, then it is the place to procure that which will strengthen and invigorate the system. In sickness or hunger, delays are dangerous, and you should call with the Doctors at once; they will accommodate you in such a gentlemanly manner, that you will be pleased, and can never pass the door, opposite to Chas. Duffy's Store, without calling in and making a purchase.

The Rail Road.

During the last winter our people have been occasionally excited on the question of the probable construction of a Railroad from, at, or near, Freeport to this place. A Corps of Engineers spent the greater part of the winter, running different routes, most of which seemed to contemplate a location in the Southern part of the county. After the winter's prospecting, this Corps has commenced a permanent location of a route from Tarentum, by way of the Glade Mills to the mouth of Glade run; or rather they have completed this location, and are now engaged in locating a road from this terminus to the Borough of Butler. They may be expected to arrive in this place in a few days. This is a surprise on most of our people, who always expected to see them approach us from the South-east.

The present movement would seem to foreshadow the construction of a thorough route from Tarentum to Homewood Station, with a branch running up the Connoquessing to this place. While this would not be as satisfactory as an eastern outlet, still looking at it, at once, an outlet, both east and west, we don't know why it may not be satisfactory, at any rate, so far as a location is concerned. The next object of interest will be its construction. On this point we can say nothing, and can therefore only hop for the best.

The Circus.

Thayer, Noyes & Co's Grand Combination Circus will be here on Monday, the 28th inst. This Circus has visited our town several times and each time has given general satisfaction.

Base-Ball.

The enterprising young men who compose this Club, played the first game of the season, on Saturday evening last. We learn that the name of the Club has been changed to the Keystone Base-Ball Club of Butler.

Lost.—A gold locomotive scarf pin, on the 21st instant, in this Borough. The finder will be rewarded by leaving it at this office.

The Memphis Riot.

We have been permitted to publish the following private letter, written by a gentleman in Memphis, to his brother in this county. It will explain itself. On our first page will also be found an account of these outrages as taken from a Memphis paper. The following is the letter:

MEMPHIS, TENN., May 6th, 1866. DEAR BROTHER:—Owing to the excitement throughout the country concerning the Riot, you will doubtless be anxious to hear from me direct. I have not time to write at length. I was very sick at the outbreak; the second day, I was compelled to leave my bed, scarcely able to stand. We were all to be murdered; seventeen teachers hastened to the boat and were soon far enough out of danger I buckled on my arms, and repaired to H'q's Freedmen's Bureau, determined to "fight it out on this line." I cannot write the particulars, some of which are too diabolical to think of; but you will soon get a correct and full account through the press. A vigorous effort is made to blame the colored people. Not a charge can be brought against them! It is a whiteman's mob, headed by those to whom we look for protection, city officials. And here was enacted the most heinous barbarities ever known in the history of savage races. All our school houses [10] and three colored churches, were totally destroyed. What will be the result? 1st, The city will have to pay all damages. 2d, New and better houses will be immediately built upon the ruins of the old ones. 3d, Irish police and rebels will no longer rule in the city of Memphis. The perpetrators of this infamous crime will be brought to immediate justice and suffer the severest judgment of a military court-martial.

Your Brother, C. E. ANDERSON, Chairman.

Changed Hands.

We notice by the Pittsburg Dispatch, of the 15th instant, that a change has taken place in the proprietorship of the Pittsburg Gazette; and we feel gratified to know that N. P. Reed, of our Borough, is one of the firm. He is a young man of strict sobriety, and sterling integrity. As a business man he is prompt and energetic. During the period of the nine-months service he acted as deputy Register and Recorder of this county for Maj. C. E. Anderson, while he was in the service, and at the same time discharged the duties of County Treasurer, giving general satisfaction in both of these trusty and honorable positions. We are not personally acquainted with Messrs. Penniman and Houston, the other members of the firm, but we feel free in saying, if they have such application, energy and integrity as Mr. Reed possesses, the Gazette will have lost nothing by the change that has taken place, and will continue to be a welcome visitor to its numerous readers. We wish our young friend abundant success in his new undertaking. In commendation of Mr. Reed, the following article from the Pittsburg Dispatch, needs no comment.

"The Gazette of yesterday announces a change of proprietors, Messrs. Penniman, Reed & Co., having purchased the concern from the Gazette Association, by whom it has been published since 1841. Mr. Penniman has filled the editorial chair in the Gazette office for several months, and is not only a gentleman of large experience in newspaper matters, but a forcible and ready writer. Mr. Reed has also considerable experience in the business, and is in all respects a most estimable and deserving gentleman. During the fifteen months he was connected with this office, our relations with him were of the most pleasant and agreeable character, and it gives us sincere pleasure to be able to bear testimony to his energy and activity, and the disinterested zeal in which he labored in our behalf. The remaining partner, Mr. Houston, is equally deserving of commendation. He entered the office of the Dispatch as reporter about ten months ago, and being well educated, and having a taste for the business, his success was at once marked and rapid. There are few more industrious, painstaking or deserving young men than Mr. Houston, and, having taken a deep interest in him from his boyhood, it affords us sincere gratification to see him enter on a field in which, if perseverance and application be worth anything, he ought to be able to command success. We part with Messrs. Reed and Houston with regret. They served us faithfully, and we are sure we need hardly state that we wish them, in their new undertaking, the most unqualified success. We ought to state, perhaps, that the politics of the Gazette will remain unchanged, or in other words, it will continue to support the policy of Congress as opposed to that of the President.

Communications.

Mr. Editors:—We live in an age of progress and improvement, as can be seen by the incidents and co-incidents of the past five years. In 1860 the peace and prosperity of our nation was broken by the rebelling of a few of the States in the South; the same year our Northern States began to be developed; the barren hills of Pennsylvania, on account of their rich minerals were worth thousands, and capitalists were making large investments. Substitutes were bought and hurried to the front, that our country might still be a peaceable and prosperous country; and as none but sound men could fill such positions; many a fair lady was deprived of her lover, and it may be said, for four long years "our maids no marriage had."

By and by the dark cloud passed away and kind Heaven smiled upon us victory; the soldier, but a day ago in blue, had become a citizen; with a light step and a merry heart he turned his face homeward, there to be met and greeted by kind friends, a loving wife or a faithful sweetheart. These are facts that cannot be applied to one town or township more than another, yet "Betsey Jean, of Petersville," thinks no place has withstood the calamity of "matrimony," they have had for the last nine months.

There is a small place called Butler, on this same creek with "Petersville," that started out on the same prospecting scheme, and at this writing it is impossible to enumerate the success that attended the efforts of these gallant warriors, not one has turned back faint hearted, but ridding themselves of every burden, kept on with "good hope" to the Sea of Matrimony. The disease has become contagious, and the only way we know when the epidemic has taken hold on one of the community, is to see the boys with horns bells and tin-pans, heading for some part of the town. To guard against this old boynish custom (or some other reason) we have nocturnal or secret marriages. Divines have been called from their peaceful couches and conducted by "Fiekle Mind" to the house of "Faithful" thereto tie the knot already beaded. Others of our town have fully the same courage and many of the young men, fearing that these "nocturnals" have been indulged in to some extent, have left the town and bro't from afar, those that were not acquainted with the "modus operandi," while others, under duress of life, from an un-known husband have retired behind the wall of "separation." Such is the fearful calamity the war has brought upon us. Reconstruction, colonization, enfranchising rebels is nothing in comparison to "this. I will give you a history of the old maids and bachelors (with those likely to be), as soon as they strike out on the Boyd farm.

POLLY SOPHIA MATILDA JANE.

Social Life of Our Young Men.

New York is the Mecca of American youth. Our country lads outstrip those of older lands in ambition and enterprise, and more early set their faces toward the great marts where success can be most largely gained, if gained at all. They come, fresh from the dewy influences of home, to stake their youth, faith and purity against wealth, fame, or power. We have always deprecated this rush to the city—where so many seem to be called and so few chosen. Half these aspirants would be doing better for the country and themselves tilling the farms on which they were born, or reclaiming their proportions of our Western domain.

But come they will, in constantly increasing numbers; and we have to accept the fact, and to lend them a helping hand in their trial years of loneliness and temptation. And again: Discreditable and impolitic as the proceeding of the Senate is, as between itself and President Johnson, it is yet worse, when considered as a new influence in the administration of public affairs. It is simply and solely to annoy the President, to subject the power of Congress to harassment, to prove the impotence of Congress to harass and cripple him, to deprive him of authority vested in him by the Constitution, and with the lawful exercise of which no former Congress has attempted similarly to interfere.

The World says: But whatever may be the degree of participation to which the Senate may be entitled, nothing could be more evidently absurd than the pretension of Congress (consisting of the two Houses) to hold the appointing power of the President in check, as is proposed by the bill now pending.

What blissful ignorance of the past! In the United States Senate, December 19th, 1860, Andrew Johnson, Senator from the State of Tennessee, said: "I believe we have the power in our own hands, and I am not willing to shrink from the responsibility of exercising that power. * * * I am for abiding by the Constitution; and in abiding by it I want to maintain and retain my place here and put down Mr. Lincoln and drive back his advances upon Southern institutions, if he designs to make any. Have we not got the power? We have. Let South Carolina send her Senators back; Let all the Senators come; and on the 4th of March next we shall have a majority of six in this body against him. This sectional candidate, who is in a minority of a million, or nearly so, on the popular vote, cannot make his Cabinet on the 4th of March next unless this Senate will permit him. Am I to be so great a coward as to retreat from duty? I will stand here and resist all encroachments and advances. Here is the place to stand. Shall I desert the citadel and let the enemy come and take possession? No."

registered houses of prostitution—in all of which every young man will meet a cordial welcome. Why, here is a whole army with banners, a sonorous and glittering array, perpetually recruiting for those powers of Evil which our philanthropists claim to oppose. It is estimated that the receipts of the "pretty-water-girl" saloons and of the houses of ill fame, amount to the annual sum of 86,500,000. Add to this enormous item the immense income of the dram-shops, and you have an exhaustless commissary-chest for the maintenance of the satanic campaign.

What are the forces on the other side? Item: a few Evening Schools; the Apprentices Library and the Printers' Free Library; neither sufficient for the class designated in its title; item: the Mercantile Library, a richly endowed, noble institution, but which does not directly aim at social and moral influence, and offers no attractions without charge; item: the Cooper Union, in many respects the most comprehensive and efficient of all, but limited in comparison with the field around it; item: 50 attractive places for young men to attend; item: 801 places of worship, where the sittings are at moderate rates, but the preaching and exercises of which, not to be irreverent, the young men consider dear at any price.

The Young Men's Christian Association, however forms a vanguard of encouraging influences and bids fair to be a host in itself. It has latterly been managed by earnest and accomplished young men, belonging to resident families, who devote time and money without stint to befriending those less fortunate than themselves. There are literary, social, and religious facilities at the rooms of the Association, and its members perform a deal of gratuitous labor in finding aid and employment for those newly arrived out of work. Committees "On Boarding-Houses," "On Employment," and "On Visitation of the Sick," are significant of the practical turn which the Christianity of this Association has taken.

The managers are now essaying to increase their means to the proportions of the work in hand, and, especially, to erect a building which will really enable them to offer social and moral attractions to the young men of New York. Their design includes a Lecture Room, Reading Room, Circulating and Reference Library, Conversation Rooms, a Gymnasium, and other means of recreation and advancement. Such a house could not fail to become a general place of resort. For its erection and endowment they ask the sum of 250,000. The amount, if large, is nothing in consideration of the object to be gained, and our generous merchants, if they choose, can raise it in a single day. They can find no better use for surplus funds, since this is almost a first movement of a truly philosophical nature, in the estimation of the youth of this city. It is based upon Heaven's own plan—that of making the instincts and tastes of the young subserve to their growth and well-being. Young men love, and will seek for, brightness, friendship, entertainment, love, society. Give them something of all this in the pure and natural way if you would offer any effective opposition to the saloon, the gambling-hell, and the brothel.

It is strange that the gathering forces of corruption which redder our thoroughfares at night with their lurid watchfires, do not awaken an alarm among us. We fear the coming pestilence, and have our advent the routine of years to stay its ertowment. But what of this moral plague? "It is not so difficult, O Athenians, to escape the pestilence; but, first of all, fee depravity; for it courses swifter than Death?"

Johnson on the Powers of the Senate.

In commenting on the Senate Amendment, defining the appointing power of the President, the Times says: Party feeling, in its most excited hour, never went so far. Webster, Erwin, Magnum, and other eminent statesmen, that the Executive could be ignored, or that Congress could usurp the authority of the President. * * * * *
