No feature of the great gathering of the Boys in Blue and the loyal citizens who desired to co-operate with them—a the Boys in Blue and the loyal citizens who desired to co-operate with them—a gathering which has made this week forever memorable in the history of Pittsburgh—was more worthy of remark and attentive consideration than the fraternal attentive consideration than the fraternal unanimity of feeling which everywhere seemed to prevail. If the people of the city cordially welcomed the visitors from every part who thronged our streets and public places, what shall we say of the reciprocal enthusiasm of those to whom that welcome was extended? They were guests whom it was our duty to delight to honor, and they must have felt we would have been recreant to our well known principles had we neglected to show them how high we held them in our estimation. But the whole-souled, hearty manner in which our hospitalities were appreciated, and the genial way in which these strangers whom we entertained sought to, and succeeded in, which these strangers whom we enter-tained sought to, and succeeded in meeting and pleasantly neutralizing our efforts to treat them worthily, by the ardent sincerity of their acknowledgments, was a delightful episode in human inter-course, not to be readily forgotten. We cannot refrain from again adverting to the moral a-pects of this grand and glerious demonstration. It was a practical exposition of the political views, feelings and intentions of the men by whom the war was fought and won. It was a clarion note of apprehended dan-ger that will be heard and heeded over the whole land. It was a terrible voice the whole land. It was a terrible voice of warning to an unscrupulous and ambitious faction that would seek to subvert our most cherished rights and to bring to nought all the dearly bought results of a sanguinary civil conflict. This time it was not a clique of aspiring officers of the regular army which spoke; neither was it the wire working of hide bound or reckless politicians, who would sacrifice the best interests of the country for a Naval Office or a Foreign Mission. It was, really and truly, the Boys in Blue who were heard from this time. Most of was, really and truly, the Boys in Blue who were heard from this time. Most of the direction of affairs they conceded to their former leaders in the field, in the same spirit as they had yielded obedience to them when in active service. It was a recognition of the superior genius or talent or tact of those who could assume and waintain a supremacy of milisume and maintain a supremacy of mili-tary rank. Men who can command in tary ronk. Men who can command in one capacity will be allowed to do so in others. But there was no idea of inequality or caste in this. The men who had shouldered muskets met, without distinction, men who had worn their double-starred shoulder straps A priegram of admitted intelligence and vate soldier of admitted intelligence and education was chosen temporary Chair-man of the Convention, and many oth-ers occupied prominent and responsible positions on committees. All were once more citizens—once more come to the same level, except where native ability or superior shrewdness irresistibly asserted

The people of Pittsburgh have a light to feel proud of the wide-spread reputation for sterling loyalty which caused it to be selected as the place of meeting for this representative congregation of the flower of our late Union armies.—

Thousands of them knew by experience how warm and encouraging their recep-tion here would be. All knew by report that, if they could find an inspiring welcome anywhere, they were sure to find it in the Iron City. And they were not disappointed. Wherever they came from whether from various portions of our own State, from States of the East or the State, from States of the East or the West, or from those Southern States that had partially remained true to the Gov-ernment and Constitution, they found the right hand of fellowship held forth to them, and a sympathy evinced in their behalf that was almost universal. What good we did unto them shall re-

In making them our honored guests, in showering upon them every courtesy and kindness in our power, we made for Pittsburgh a name that will long be green in the mem-ories of the best men that ever congrega-ted from all parts of the country in any ted from all parts of the country in any of the noble pre-eminence we had earned, as a law and Union loying community, to every corner of the States whose favorable opinion is worth having, and favorable opinion is worth having, and have established our city as the centre of that uncompromising spirit thro' which the Nation and its liberties were saved in war and which we, at least, have resolved shall not be permitted to stagnate or die out in a time of perilous and unsettled peace. Our position will hence forth be known and rocognized, and it is a position that will be glorious to us in our own time and shed lustre upon our posterity in generations yet to come -Pittsburgh Commercial.

REBEL MASSACRE. -The rebels in Platte county, Missouri, made an organized and murderous attack upon the Union convention which met at Kansas City on the 15th inst. to nominate a county ticket. The Campaign.

For many years, we have not witnessed so much interest manifested by the people in a political campaign as we have in the present one. This is true, in a general sense, leoling over the whole field from Maine to California, But our observations are intended to apply more particularly, to our own county. In the series of meetings just closed the utmost interest has been manifested. There is quite a feeling on this subject here, at present, and from the present temper of our "boys in blue" who are determined that none of those classes shall be allowed to vote in violation of the law of the State, we are inclined to think that our neighbor will be held to answer the crime of advising the elec tion officers to violate the law of the State which they have sworn to obey. If so, he has thus challenged. Were he the only sufferer, the matter would be the ess. But he may thus induce others to et the law at defiance, and thereby to become the subject of its just penalties.
