Peabody's Advice to His Young Friends.

Mr. George Peabody, on the occasion of his visit to his native town, South Danvers, Massachusetts, recently, addressed the school-children, who assembled to meet him at the Peabody Institute, as follows:

"My dear young friends: Nearly two generations have passed away since I left this, my native town with probably less education than even the youngest among those I now address, and with no prospect of future success in life beyond that of any boy now before me who possesses good health, industry, and perseverance, with a heart and mind determined to make principles his guide. My course is well known, and I fear too much appreciated by our whole country; but praise, even but partially deserved, tends to stimulate to extra exertion, both physically and morally—particularly the young, and I hope and pray that every one who is now within the sound of my voice may experience, as I have, the truth of these remarks, and deserve the pride and satisfaction which are to attend all those who conscientiously strive to do right and to benefit their fellow men.

"All of you, my young friends, should aim at a high mark in this respect, and undoubtedly many of your number of both sexes, will arrive at distinction in society, but neither my regard for truth nor past experience will justify me in promising any one of you that great success which has ever attended me. Scarcely one of an age attains to it, and I feel most sensibly that it is only by the guidance and blessings of my Heavenly Father, from my early life to my present advanced age, that I have been enabled to accomplish so much for the purpose of laying the foundations for the physical comforts of the needy, and the promotion of knowledge and morality for the present and future generations. As you advance in life you will find that years will appear short in comparison with those occupied by your studies at the present time. This is my second visit to my native land, for thirty years, and the period appears brief to me. Time and generations pass most rapidly.

"Ten years ago last week, on a beautiful autumnal day, I addressed from the front of this Institute the scholars of the Danvers schools, numbering, I think, over seventeen hundred, and I then said to them: 'I would bid you remember that but a few years would elapse before you will occupy the same position towards your own children which your parents now hold towards you. The training you are now receiving, therefore, is a precious talent, for the use or abuse of which each one will, on a future day, be called upon to give an account.' This language, my young friends, I wish equally to apply to you now, as I then applied it to them. Where is now that assemblage of near two thousand scholars? In this short space of time, I doubt whether fifty of them occupy the place of scholars here to-day. Many of them have become husbands and wives, and nearly all have entered upon the duties, the cares and the anxieties of more mature life. You have taken the place which they occupied in 1853, and by the great centennial celebration of the birth of our glorious Union, in 1876, they, your fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, will have taken another step forward on the stage of life, and you will take the places they now fill. Be prepared for that important change, while your present high privileges of learning remain open to you.

"On the 9th of October, 1856, I did not anticipate the pleasure of being here at this time; but God has graciously permitted my living beyond the allotted three score years and ten, to return and enter upon the realization of hopes and plans which I have entertained for many years, and to endeavor to show my gratitude for His goodness and watchful care, by taking further and wider action in extending to the inhabitants of my native town, of my native State, my native country, not only for the present generation, but for those who will appear and act upon the stage of existence in future ages, the means of mental culture and moral improvement.

"At my advanced age I cannot expect to meet you again collectively, and it is to me a saddening thought, for though since I addressed your predecessors at the time I have mentioned, I have met many assemblages of children, and to some I have spoken—founded on a long experience—words of simple advice and caution, yet in none, on either side of the Atlantic, can I feel so deep an interest as in the children of South Danvers. They seem intimately associated with thoughts of my childhood and early youth; they take the same lessons; they occupy my play-grounds, and their feet tread the same paths over which I once trudged to school. With such feelings, therefore, I earnestly exhort you, my dear young friends, to strive by your present advantages to prepare yourselves for a life of usefulness in the responsible positions which you are to fill; to honor, and if necessary, protect and support your parents; to never depart from the path of honor and integrity; and, above all, 'Remember your Creator in the days of your youth, and when you are old He will never forsake you.' Farewell, farewell."

☞ The Boston Transcript tells an amusing story of a young gentleman who, walking on the Common a few evenings since, came in contact with a person going in the opposite direction. Both apologized and walked on. A moment after the young gentleman missed his watch, and turning, ran after the individual whom he had just met. He soon overtook him, and drawing his revolver, placed it at his head, and demanded that he should instantly give up that watch.—The man, terribly frightened, obeyed, and took his departure from that vicinity with the greatest possible expedition.—The young gentleman went home and related the circumstances to his mother, who burst into a laugh, and told him that his own watch was in his room, and that he had been the robber and not the robbed.

A WOOD-CHOPPER is a very polite man, for when he wants wood he goes and cuts for it.

FALL PLANTING OF FRUIT TREES.—In planting fall fruit trees, the pear, apple and cherry invariably do better fall-planted than when deferred till spring north of Philadelphia. The peach plum and apricot should not be planted till spring, if not done before heavy frost. All fruit trees when set out should be vigorously shortened in. Trees should not be planted deep—no deeper than they grew before removal. It is better to draw a mound of soil about them for the winter, to be removed early in the spring; it preserves from frost and throws off superabundant moisture. Dwarf pears must be set below the quince stock—and in selecting these, choose those that are budded near the ground—where a long-legged quince stock has to be buried so deep, the tree makes but a poor growth for some seasons afterwards, and is in other respects injured. In severe climates, cherries of very luxuriant growth are liable to be winter killed. To obviate this, the weaker growing kinds, as the Duke and Morele, and the Mahaleb, are used for stocks to graft them on. This checks their vigor, and renders them hardier. It, however, always keeps them dwarfed—and superior sized fruit is not so probable. When danger of winter-killing exists, these strong growing kinds should not have a highly manured soil, and where they grow vigorous when young, they may be root-pruned as already described. If they can be got through the first ten years of their life, till they lose their youthful vigor, they will not suffer in severe winters afterwards.—Gardener's Monthly.

HORRIBLE INDIAN OUTRAGES DISCOVERED.—ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Capt. Barlow, of Gen. Sherman's staff, arrived here yesterday from Fort Dodge, where he saw two white girls, named Doyee, one seventeen and the other thirteen years old who had been ransomed from the Kiowa Indians. The girls state that on the 17th of August the Kiowas attacked their home in northwestern Texas, killed, scalped and burned their father; themselves and their mother, and sister, eight years old were carried into captivity and treated in the cruelest and most revolting manner. On arriving at the Indian camp, the captives were knocked about with clubs, and brutally abused. On hearing their condition the commanding officer at Fort Dodge, not having sufficient force to rescue them, effected their ransom, and will send them to their friends in Texas as soon as they recover from their terrible sufferings. When in the Indian camp, the officer sent to arrange their ransom saw the captives knocked down three times and violated.

Gen. Sherman arrived at home the 16th.

A MOONSTRUCK MONARCH.—King Louis of Bavaria is reported to be moonstruck, having entirely given up the direction of public affairs to indulge various eccentricities, the chief of which is to bask in the moonlight. He has a swan-shaped boat in which he floats about on the water, and so greatly is he enamoured of the moonlight, that he has fixed in his sleeping apartments an apparatus borrowed from a theatre, which creates an artificial moonlight. These follies are very absurd, but they are at the same time very innocent, and King Louis no doubt can be spared from undergoing the cares of state in Europe, which, even without him, is too much governed.

SURGICAL FACTS.—That whiskey is the key by which many gain an entrance into our poor-houses and alms-houses.

That brandy brands the noses of all those who cannot govern their appetites.

That wine causes many to take a windy way home.

That punch is the cause of many unfriendly punches.

That ale causes many ailings; while beer brings many to the bier.

That champagne is the cause of many real pains.

That gin-slings have "slewed" more than the slings of old.

YEAST.—Boil twelve good sized potatoes soft. Rub them through a colander; add one quart of boiling water, and one of cold; one teaspoonful of salt; one cup of white coffee-sugar; one pint of good yeast, when blood warm. Set in a warm place to rise, about six hours. Cork tightly, and keep in a cool place. Set a sponge; use a teacupfull for two loaves.

A REMEDY for the cure of the hollow horn, or horn ail in cattle is to dissolve a table spoonful of coperas in warm water, and mix it with the creature's mess, if it is not past eating; if it is, it should be poured down. This dose will seldom need to be given more than once. It has been our remedy for many years, in a large dairy.

A boston paper says that a hasty pudding, which had been set out to cool one morning in that city was taken to the station-house by a policeman on a charge of smoking in the street—a practice which is not permitted in the tidy little city.

REASONS WHY THE AMERICAN WATCH Made at WALTHAM Mass. IS the Most.

It is made on the best principle. Its frame is composed of SOLID PLATES. NO jar can interfere with the harmony of its working and no sudden shock can damage its machinery. Every piece is made and finished by machinery (the first known to do so), as well as for its effectiveness and is therefore properly made.—The watch is what all mechanism should be—ACCURATE, SIMPLE, STRONG AND ECONOMICAL—except some high grades, too costly for common use, foreign watches are chiefly made by women and boys; such watches are composed of several hundred pieces, screwed and rivited together, and require constant repairs to keep them in any kind of order. All persons who have carried "ancres," "lepines" and "English Patent Levers" are perfectly well aware of the truth of this statement.

At the beginning of our enterprise more than ten years ago, it was our object to make a thoroughly good low-priced watch for the million, to take the place of the worthless foreign imposition—the refuse of foreign factories—which were entirely unreliable, time and perfectly worthless everywhere.

How well we have accomplished this may be inferred from the fact, that after a many years of public trial, we now make MORE THAN ONE-HALF OF ALL THE WATCHES SOLD IN THE UNITED STATES, and that no others have ever given such universal satisfaction. While this department of our business is confined with increased facilities for perfect work, we are at present engaged in the manufacture of watches of the very HIGHEST GRADE KNOWN TO HOROMETRY unequalled by anything hitherto made by ourselves, and unsurpassed by anything made in the world. For this purpose we have the amplest facilities. We have erected an addition to our main buildings expressly for this branch of our business, and have filled it with the best workmen in our service. New machinery and appliances have been constructed, with which to perform their work with consummate delicacy and exactness. The closest and most approved inspection by eye and watch-gauge connection between the grade of our work and the finest imported chronometers. We do not pretend to sell our watches for less money than foreign watches but we do assert without fear of contradiction that for the same money our product is incomparably superior. All our watches, of whatever grade, are fully warranted and his warrantee is good at all times against us or our agents in all parts of the world.

CAUTION.—The public are cautioned to buy only of respectable dealers. All persons selling counterfeits will be prosecuted.

The total amount covered by insurance on the property destroyed by the fire of July 4th, was about $[illegible] of which about $[illegible] was insured in companies with which we are connected, ranging from $2,000 to $[illegible] and being generally adjusted and paid. This sum is 5 per cent more than the assets of [illegible] but slightly exceeding our net cash income paid last year, or a per centage equal to a $600 loss for a company of $100,000 a year.

The necessity for insurance and the value of wealthy and long established corporations is forcibly illustrated by this fire. Several weak insurance Companies are dead; yet Portland has a population of 35,000. Was handsomely built, mostly fine brick or stone structures—protected and screened with upwards of 600 shade trees—and stood on three sides by water—indeed literally an island rising from the sea. Yet with all these natural and artificial advantages, it has been SWEPT AND DESTROYED as properly conceived in a few moments as if it had been a city of paper. Remember the terrific origin of fire that swept away in a few hours the earnings of years. Consult your best interests and give the Ætna Agent a call if you need proper insurance security.
