INDIAN SUMMER

There is a time, just when the free Prepares to pave old Winter's way, When Autumn, in a reverie lost, The mellow day time dreams away.
When Summer comes in musing aidd.
To gaze once more on hill and ell.

To mark how many sheaves they hind, And see if all are ripened well, With balmy breath she whispers bw:

The dying flowers look up and live Their sweetest incense ere they For her who made their beautid-live. She enters 'neath the woodland's thade. Her zephyrs lift the lingering seet. And bear it gently where are laid.
The loved and lost ones of its guide.

At last Old Autumn, rising, takes Again his sceptre and his thrond With boisterous hand the trees heinke Intent on gathering all his own Sweet Summer sighing, flies the pain, And waiting winter, gaunt and grim, Sees miser Autumn hoard his grade,

And smiles to think it's all for him.

Choice Literatur. A TRUE STORY.

BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

On the 15th of October, 1856, celebra tion of a peculiar character was held in a small villagemear Jena. It was an occas sion of an entirely local nature, and might have passed over unobserved and inknown to all, except the immediate vie lity, but for its connection with the battle which tifty years and one day before, arbibiliated the power of Prussia. An account of it however, was published in most of the Ger man newspapers and through the circum stance the sequel of the story which I am about to relate was brought on At. the time the celebration took place, I was re siding in Gotha, not more than sity miles from the spot, and received the story almost in the very words of the chief actor in it.
