It was announced that the catalogue consisted of articles accumulated in the Dead Letter office since 1857, (the Department having used effort to find the proper owners and being unable to do so,) and they would now be sold for the postage; the proceeds, if any, after paying the charges to be deposited in the United States Treasury, subject to order should the proper owners hereafter be found. The articles came from the post office in sealed packages and no opportunity having thus been obtained of getting a peep of examination, the bidding was somewhat in the dark, but generally spirited. I saw the young lady quietly draw from under her cloak a little crimsom woolen shawl, and softly put on the shoulders of the little one, the mother looked in con-fused wonder. After a short time she arose to leave the cars, and would have removed the shawl. "No, keep it on, keep it for her. The woman did not answer; the conductor hurried her out, but her eyes swam in tears, which no one saw but me. I noticed her as she descended to a base-"Soon after, my unknown arose also to

How to thank Thee for these blessings! An Exciting Scene.-Years ago when I was a youngster, I became an assistant of Dr. B., the superintendent of a public in-sane saylum. As in all insane saylums, some of the patients were decile and tractable, and had the freedom of a high walled garden; while others, being violent and dangerous in their madness, were confined to their rooms. Sometimes one of the last named gentlemen would get loose, a fact which he usually announced by breaking things generally, upon which announcethings generally, upon which announcement the doctor would repair to the spot at which he was "elevating the ancient Henry," and advancing upon him with steadfast gase, would march him off to his room. We had one lunatic by the name of Jones, large and strong as an ostrich.—
He had broken out of his room two or three times, but had always gone back do-cilely when any one of us made our appearance.

The asylum had a saloon in the centre with a door at each end; and one of the doors requiring fixing, once upon a time, a carpenter was engaged upon it, when in trundled Mr. Jones, and quietly possessed himself of a long sharp chisel. When the carpenter looked around the madman gave a grin and a poke of the chisel at him; whereupon the man of chips scuttled out and loked the door—then, while the enemy was battering away at it, he rushed account and looked the door—then the chest of the other than the chest of the c around and locked the door at the other.

end. Having thus caged Jones, he gave the alarm; and I supposing it was an ordinary case, which I could control, unlocked the door and entered soldly, whereupon he made a rush at me. I incontinently bolted. The doctor was sent for. He came, racconnectering through the key-hole, and accessining that the enemy was hole, and acceptaining that the enemy was at the other end of the room he opened the door, and any at once that he could do nothing with the loose maniac. Here was apparently a dilearma. A crany individual, as strong as a buil, perfectly uncontrollable and armed with a weapen. To capture him by force was a difficult and danger of the country of the gerous undertaking, and to starve him would be a tedious affair. The doctor did not hesitate long.

The lunatic sat at the other end of the hall on a chair, eyeing us keenly and savagely. Slowly, very slowly, we advanced towards him. The nearer we got the more wicked that chisel looked, and the handla seemed to increase, until it was very long. When we got within a few feet of him, he jupmed up, and sprang towards me.— Whiz! spatter! splash! went the quart of hartshorn into his countenance—down he went like a log-it would have knocked down a battalion; and while he was catching his breath we caught him.—Recollections of a Physician.

out to Fond du Lac, then a territory, his new home was graced by several grown-up daughters. The Indians were "there and thereabouts' at the time, and frequently were met by members of the Governor's family. It was an era in female dress when the bustle was a desired accession of grace and outline, but new to the aborigines .-A grave old chief one day was asked what he thought of the Governor's daughters .-Pretty squaws, nice white squaws, pity 'um backs broke." What would the old chief say now, in these modern days, of wide spread crinoline?

Lady Stamford, who, it seems, coniders herself, and with every reason, too, first rate steeple chaser, finding few can surpass her daring or defeat her in a long run, has (says the Court Circular.) with the chivalric mettle of more primitive days challenged another lady, renowned for her cross-country daring, and who presumes herself a mighty huntress before heir liege lord, to an equestrian tournament across a rather difficult country, for £500 a side.— The scene of this interesting wager is in the county of Limerick. John Kain who was sentenced to imprisonment for life two years ago, at incinnati, for the murder of Richard Singleton, the seducer of his daughter, had a new trial at that place a few days ago on a writ of error and was acquitted. The Cincinnati Gazette says, "that the fact that he had been driven to commit the act by the seduction of a daughter-the popular expression in the Sickles case and in view that he had been in the Penitentiary nearly two years—these combined, doubtless weighed with the jury in determining their verdict."

THE SIDEWALE CENETERY-One of our exchanges tells a good story of a jolly fellow who, on "the Glorious Fourth," passing along the streets of Springfield saw the inscription, "B. K. Bliss, Apothecary," nestly chiseled on a marble slab in the center of the sidewalk. Stepping reverently over the stone, he turned around, and reading slowly, "B. K. Bliss, Apoplexy," exclaimed, "Apoplexy—yes—well—but what in—did they bury him under the sidewalk

As unsocial as was the squatter, he was respected by all who had come in contact with him. He was brave to madness, and yet as coof in danger as in his camp. Nor was there anything rough in his manners; on the contrary, there was an easy bear-ing-almost elegance—which bespoke a day of education and refinement. And

Blair had other qualifications which won the respect of the hardy spirits around him He was six feet high, broad shouldered, full chested, and form erect, and his limbs were models of symmetry and strength; his hair and beard had grown unshorn ced playing on the clarionet, a saw filer, since we had known him, and were thickly though darkly bronzed and deeply seamed, was almost massive, and the head of tault-A garl down East having professed less mould.
