A SCORE OF YEARS AGO.

Down by the breaking waves we stuod, Upon the rocky shore : The brave waves whisper'd courage And bid with friendly roar. The fait'ring words that fold the tale I dared not tell before i ask'd, if with the pricefees gift Her love, my life she blessed Was it her voice, or some fair wave For sooth, I scares may guesslome marmaring wave, or her tweet spice That lies'd so assetts "Yes "

And then, in happy slives, tou and long we stood there, careles While o'er the darkening land The sunset and the fishing boat Were seiting from the strand seems not manys ago-Like yesterday,—se soore times thus we stood, my love and i. Upon the rocky shore But I was four and twent, then, And new I'm ferr-fon:

The ity hand is thinner now, And in her sunny hair i see enmesilvery lines, and se Her brow some lines of care; ton, withkied brow, or aliver lucks The's not one whit less fair

The fishing boats a score of year, Go sailing from the strand The crimson san a score of years Sets o'er the darkeast land, and bere to-night upon the cliff We're standing hand in hand

"My darling, there's our eldest girl Down on the rocks below; What's Stanty doing by her side."
My wife says, "You shauld know fir's telling her what you told me A score of years ago."

The Wise Men of the East on Cotton

The Boston Journal, whose party kas been one of the principal causes of the fi-nancial trouble that now begins to pinch business and laboring men. proposes, says the Boston Pur, that the North should not send to buy any more cotton of the South, out wait for the cotton to come to them It thinks that this will operate upon the South, who will be troubled if they can't sell their cotton to New England manufacturers But how about the New England opera aves who have followed their blind leaders in this war on the South 1 The Journal ad-At first I could not recollect where I mits that manufacturing will be less profitable this winter, so that of course the mills must run slow, or stop, and the laboring men are to be the mourners to go about the streets crying glory to the politiciana, who got their votes under false pretences, dends, in the meantime, must be reduced or cut off, and those who depend on this aid are to be cramped if not rendered destitute of ordinary comforts.

And this is the beginning of the end of have seduced the people of the North into heir own ruin, and that of their country, by preaching up this "sacred animosity" of hatred to the South! They have been permitted to sow the wind, and their folowers are reaping the whirlwind. They have raised the storm which they have no espacity to govern nor allay, and the only hope of the country and of the very men who have elected a sectional President is. that, after all, Mr. Lincoln will not turn belie his professions of an "irrepressible conflict." and admit that he was chosen under false pretences by turning his back upon the very men whose appeals to the leluded consciences of slave hating men and women have made him President?

And then again, how feeble in this finanvial suggesty of the Boston Journal and its associates, who fancy they can coerce the bouth by not buying their cotton? Why, statistics show that five sevenths of the cotton that runs the thirty millions of spindles in Great Britain, and feeds five millions of her population, is the slave cotton of the South. And she has added eight millions of spindles to her manufactures within three years. The whole North consumes but one fifth of the cotton crop of the slave States, and this one fifth England and France need for their new machinery. While the consumption is increasing there, every week, and nowhere in the world is there any increase of the growth of cotton except in the slave States, and that only in proportion to the natural increase there of slave labor, which these wise men of the East have so long labored to destroys.

And now, after the mischief has been done, the value of property and labor reduced everywhere at the New York. told that the grand remedy is to send after no more cotton, but wait for cotton to come

Why not go one step further and do the ed it, and placed all the available furniture of the best course of action. This I speedily allowable the uncariness of decided one to the best course of action. This I speedily allowable the uncariness of decided one to the best course of action. This I speedily allowable the uncariness of decided one to the dog, I carmy mind. As I turned towards the table ressed him, and was on the point of carry-mills, sell no, wear no, cotton cloth, and see if they can step slave labor by no longer encouraging and supporting it as they have done and are doing.

What a spectacle in this monstrous hypocrisy of the North! Railing at the sin of the South in keeping and working slavewhile the North lives upon manufacturing the produce of slave labor, and Massachusetts alone works 200,000 slaves to keep her cotton mills going! And now when the supply of the staple and the market of the South are basely interrupted by this "battle of the States," which the Abolition. ists have raised up with their war cries of five headed barbarism" and "sacred an mosity" and "heels on the neck of the lave nower," everybody is wondering and fearing and doubting whether we shall he able to get through all this without a general and financial crash and break up.
What has mainly produced this buths mad war of the North on the South

What is the remedy? Not this misera ble little subterfuge of waiting for cotton to come North, which can better be sold in the meantime pinching laboring mer. and the failing of men of business. Not at who have deceived them; they must re solve to live up to their constitutional obligations

This is the remedy; and the great quition of the day, Union or half a dozen Re publies, prosperity or national ruin, depends upon the sense and justice of the people of the North to stop this aggression upon the South, and change this whole policy of an irrepressible conflict into a full recognition of the equal rights of the Stateand the strict observance of the duties between the States, enjoined by the Consti

BISHOP AMES AND NEWSPAPERS .- The Pacific Advocate says -- In his address to the conference, just before reading out the appointments, Bishop Ames alluded to the various methods by which an itines ant preacher might render himself useful. and among others he spoke of circulating newspapers as an important means of good doing. In his first circuit, some thirty years ago, he had been very active in this direction, and he said be used to say to his members, as a reason that they should take newspapers, that he had had experience as a school teacher, that it was his deliberate opinion that two dollars spent for a good newspaper was of more value as an educator in the family than ten dollars paid to s school master for tuition. "And," remarked the Bishop, "thirty years observa-tion has but confirmed that opinion"
