LETTUR FROM CAPT. MILES CO.

HEADQUARTERS 14TH PA. CAVALET) COMPANY, CAMP SCHOOMARER, HAUERSTOWN, December 28th, 1862. MR EDITOR:-I have delayed writing to you for the want of something of interest to write about and have waited in wain. Yesterday was Christmas, and through the influence of the commissioned officers of Co. 1. (may their shadows never grow less) the most of us were permitted to visit the Antietam Southac street, on Thanksgiving Day, and was | cer of the day, the men went in charge of boys had a good time generally, with few exceptions One man was thrown from his horse and had his arm dislocated at the elbow. He again The kind hosters provided refreshments for the injured man and his attendants, and refused all compensation in the way of money, only asking our protection in case of be happy to grant Taking an affectionate O Capt livin Gregg, formerly recruiting farewell, we moved on to Sharpeburg. After partaking of meat and hard tackle (the name given by the soldiers for the bread furnished for the army) we proceeded with our examination of the battle field. The iron messengers of death lay scattered in all directionsbuildings, rences, trees, all bear marks of the terrible storm of leaden hail that swopt over this particular locality, and last, though not least, the many new made graves of northern soldiers who fell, bravely defending the stars having become a partner with Mr Arbuckle, and stripes Their comrades in arms (be it said to their praise) have buried them decently, compared with those of the rebels. The Union graves are neatly marked, have headboards giving the name, age, Co. and Reg't, while the rebels are piled into trenches by the dozen-heads, legs, and arms are left pretruding from the ground. I saw several of the pits with the inscription: "Seventy four dead rebels." another "A rebel raid of 56 men run into the ground," at another, "Thirteen deadheads:" but enough of this. The reports are conflicting, some say we have marching orders, and are going to Baltimore; others say to North Mountain, for the purpose of habting Guerilas ()ur regiment is fully equipped; we have our horses. Our arms consist of swords, revolvers, and four companies have Burnside's carbine rifles; company I is one of SERGEANT.

Henry Ward Beecher, in his recent fraternity lecture in Boston, said.... "We need more martyrs; we need more bloodshed .-Bloodshed is the wine of the nations. God feeds them on blood." Now (says the Newburyport Herald, a republican paper,) why does not this man make a martyr of himself !why does he not shed a little of his own blood? in no way could be do his country more service, for his utterances for years have tended to bring us to our present position. Good care does he take to keep himself out of danger, while he talks so bravely-so devilishly-in the Plymouth Church and the Trement Temple. Ask the wife who lost her husband and parents who mourn sons, and they cannot talk so flippantly of blood as this minister of the meek and losely Jesus." If his God is one who feeds the nations with blood," it explains much of his preaching.
