For two years the quiet adoration went on and the neighbors wendered why, as there was nothing to prevent it, they did not marry. It has never been known whether the idea arose out of Zach's own brain, or whether it was a hint from a friend, but at last he did find courage to pop the question. It was done in this way. The time was New Year Eve, and the fair Sally had been preparing a stout jug of mulled cider that she might have something to cheer Zach's heart when he same in. Zach came, he drank, and took his accustomed seat in the chimney corner, where he sat quietly for a few minutes, and then, without any previous symptoms, he rese up to his full height, six feet and two inches, putting his head up the chimney so that little of him was seen shove the waist and delivered the following oration :

"If somebody loved somebody as well as somebody loves somebody, somebody would marry somebody."

Zach remained with his head up the chimney after this speech, silent as death, for some minutes, until he came forth from his place of refuge at the earnest solicitation of Widow Brows, with a face glowing like the setting sun.
