Their wedded life realized all lips, and the eyes opened, only to close Albert Sidney Johnston, aides-de-camp to her hopes of happiness. Three beautiful children were given them, and Heaven smiled upon their labors. Life is not all sunshine, however, and the dark days came. The husband and father was sud. up from the poor heart as the weary frame denly stricken down, and for months the felt again the grateful repose it so sadly affost about this matter. They cannot fatal breath of consumption sapped his needed. vitals. And now the woman's soul stood forth. There was a deal of energy and strength in that frail form, and untiringly labored. Farm vork, house work, she and the care of her little ones were faith. fully attended to, while the beloved partner of her soul lacked not one necessary comfort. The cords were tightly drawn, was past that ! but they were held by love; and through days and nights of anguish, she never failed in duty. Finally, there was a change. The fell destroyer came; and one dreary night, with his hand firmly clasped in that of his faithful wife, and his head nillowed upon her bosom, the husband died, and left one empty, desolate heart to mourn for its idol. Cares now thickened. Her guiding star had set, and she groped in darkness; but God walked with her, and shall wear. prospered the work of her hands. Her children grew, and discovered talents which should have culture. How should she educate them? She could ill afford to send them away, and in those western wilds, little chance was offered for the attainment of knowledge. What wonder, then, that when an elderly stranger from a distant city came, and asked her for her hand, that she hesitated ? So they were married, and for a time all went prosperously, Her sons grew in knowledge, and went portionate to the weight of the earthly out to seek their own fortunes. Her Cross. daughter, the idol of her heart, became all she wished, and was early in life happily united to the one whom her heart ad chosen. Again, however, the sky became overcast, and the deep muttering of the withering thunder was heard in the distance. Losses succeeded each other in quick succession, and finally the storm burst, and poverty stared them in the face. Then began the man's true nature to show forth. Strong and confiint in prosperity, he became weak in adversity. His disposition, always quick, became tyrannical and insulting. Like a strong tree, smitten by lightning, the blackness of his heart appeared now, and the delicate vine which had twined about the great depth of the water would prehim, became his chief support. And now again came out the strong soul of the woman. A large house was rented, and force of the fall had not killed him before rooms for boarders advertised. The house was soon filled, and the inmates all loved their refined and lady-like hostess; but attended with a great deal of trouble and the unpleasant disposition of the host, patience, but life was extinct. I hear of some sad doings in one of those regiments. A cautain in the 15th (the name has escaped me) returned with a trophy of war in the shape of a pet contraband. This darkey has met with nothing but kindness at the hand of the Captain, while the men have been treated worse than brutes. While at Sunbury, below Williamsport, the contraband, an-suming liberties that did not belong to him, ordered the men about in a similar manner as did his master, when one of the privates gave him a blow in the face. The Captain, enraged that his pet should be thus abused, drew a revolver and shot the man through the bowels, whereupon, his comrades rushed in, seized him, threw him to the earth, and kicked and beat him to such an extent, that he died ere the train passed from the station. I have read articles in the daily press, from the pens of sensation writers, of son Davis' escape. The negroes collected on every farm to witness the passage of the soldiers, and in many instances greeted them with evident marks of pleasure. Sitting upon a gate post, upon one of these farms, was a sharp little darkey just entering his teens, who, when he was told of his freedom, clapped his hands and shouted for joy, " I's free, I's free !" He exclaimed in an estasy to his mamma, " I aint gwine to rock de cradle no more, case I's free." Running to a younger sister, he imparted his newly obtained intelligence, saying: "You is free-don't pick up no more chips." And spying a cat lazily stretching her limbs in the sunshine, he reached the climax by screaming out, "And you's free, pussy, don't ketch no more rats." Whether the delighted fellow went on addressing the fowls, the cattle, the hogs, we do not know, but the above is related as an actual occurrence. -Petersburg Express. NEGRO RIOT IN NEW JERSET .--- A serious negro riot occurred in Salem, New Jersey, lately. A wench slapped the mouth of a very respectable young lady upon the side-walk for some tancied affront, and got knocked down for her pains. Other "culled pussens" took part, and a general pitching in followed, when the blacks, being overpowered fled. All business was suspended, and by eleven o'clock that night not a negro was to be seen upon the streets Hostilities were resumed the next day, when some of the blacks fired. upon a white man, wounding him severely.
