Fire Certification will be send broke forth, dimly at first, but afterwards broke forth, dimly at first, but afterwards the intellect of the white race at length with an effulgence which illumined the world. Not so with the negro, for relatively as he was thousands of years ago so is he now, and so must be ever remain. for such is the law of his being. But it may be said that the negro must be taught to read and write, and thus be made a good citizen. And where there is not native intelligence, knowing how to read and write are not sufficient qualifications for citizenship.

I am not actuated by any feeling of unkindness, and I trust by a higher motive than vulgar prejudice, when I oppose conferring the rights of citizenship upon the negro. To be a citizen, is not alone to have the right to vote, but to become judge, juror and legislator, for these are rights which belong to citizenship. But t will be said that if the negro is not competent for these high duties, he will become so. There are free negroes now living in the United States, whose grandfathers were free before them, but the grand-child of to-day, like the grandparent of a past generation, is inferior to the white man. Before the rebellion, there were half a million of free blacks. fell me, he who can, the names of a dezen who have become remarkable as mechanic<sup>5</sup>, farmers, poets, painters, or orators? An emigrant ship, on the other hand, arrives from Europe, perchance persons on board who can neither read nor write. Mark the effect of a single generation. The child is an American, it learns to read, to write, to think, to act like an American, and, in fact, is an American. Such was the case with Andrew Jackson. His father was poor, ignorant and destitute : necessity drove him from the shores of Ireland, and his first born boy after reaching the United took rank among the first statesmen of the age. But it is said that the war has proved the capacity of the negro for selfgovernment-his right to become a citizen. In what does the proof consist? Is it in the fact that negroes, free or slave, could not be found of sufficient intelligence to make lieutenants, and that all commissioned officers of black regiments are while men? D'es that fact prove the equality of the races?-the right of the negro to become a citizen ? Was his capacity for self-government proven by the conspiracy at Caarleston, to murder their white officers, and all white citizens, out of gratitude for being made free? Or is it to be found in the mutiny of the negro troops at Memphis, Nortolk and Portsmouth?

The capacity of man for self government has long been a fruitful subject of discussion, and self-government is still regarded as an experiment. In Great Britain, with her thirty millions inhabitants, the entire real estate is owned by thirty thousand persons, who within themselves constitute the government, and yet that government is regarded as. and perhaps is, the most liberal in Europe. Yet the great mass of that population green meadows.

ng that whon it has one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, people, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. Now, to what one people does the "Declaration" refer, when it says that a decent respect for the opinions. of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to separation ? The States were occupied by a white, a red, and black people-does the expression "one people" refer to the whita, black and red people, or to only one of them? Had the negroes of the Colonies any political relations with Great Britain ? No; for under the authority of Great Britain they were bought and sold was tried and found not guilty ; while a as property. Hence the negroes were not a part of that people who dissolved the political bands which united them to England. Was the position of the Indians, in a political sense, different from that of the negroes ? No; because the British government regarded the Indians as mere savages, who were to be cleared away with the wolf and the bear. Then as it was neither the Indians nor the negroes who dissolved the political bands which united the Colonies with the mother country, it must have been the whites who did so. But this is rendered certain from the fact that the Colonists were the direct offspring from Great Britain, while the other races had different origins; and neither the Indians nor the negroes were represented, directly or in-directly, in the Congress which published the "Declaration." Hence, then, it is conclusive that the word "people" was used in that instrument in a special sense, to mean white people, or the European race, from which the Colonists sprung. Again, the clause of the "Declaration" already referred to, says, "a decent respect for the opinions of mankind, requires that the causes which led to the separation should be made known." Now, the word "mankind" taken in its general sense means the whole human family. tion," for copies of that instrument were sent to the nations of Europe, but not to any other people. Then the word "mankina" as used in the "Declaration" re-fers exclusively to the European race, for had it been intended to mean the people of China. or Egypt, or Morocco, commissioners would have been appointed to have communicated the "Declaration" to them, as well as to the nations of Europe. which was not done. It is clear then that the words "people" and "mankind" are used in that instrument in a limited, and not in a general sense. 'The "Declaration" then goes on to say: we hold these truths, to be self-evident, that all men are created equal; and in a Sintes, not only became President, but general sense, the words "all men," like the word "mankind," embraces the whole human family. But was such the intention of the framers of that paper? A moment's reflection must satisfy every one that the words "all men," like the word "mankind," were only intended to apply to the European race, and have no reference either to negroes or to Indians. When the "Declaration " was published every one of the thirteen States held slaves, and the author of that paper was himself a slaveholder. Is it, then, reasonable to suppose that our fathers intended to proclaim that the negroes whom they bought and sold as property, were created equals with themselves? On the contrary. y the Constitution which was afterwards framed, negro slavery was not only recognized, but the importation of negro slaves from Africa was authorized in express terms until the year 1808.

A SAGACIOUS OBSERVATION .- A COTTON pondent of the Cincinnati Gazette does not like Sherman's remark that his soldiers are not hangmen, and gravely observes; "Now, if this sort of twaddle means any-thing, it is intended as a fling at the courts martial which have lately been trying and hanging rebe's and assassinators under intention.

The Pittsburg Commercial. in the course of some very funny remarks over the suppression of another newspaper, expresses its belief that strong drink is "a beverage inseparable from Democracy." The New York Tribune says the present interest of one hundred and forty million dollars ($139,262,568 28) on the national debt will be increased to the extent of at least ten millions ($10,000,000) next January. Pleasant prospect, truly, for taxpayers.

The number of Federal office-holders in Pennsylvania, of low and high degree, is estimated at ten thousand. They swarm in every city, county and district, and receive their support from a people taxed in a hundred different ways. And still we have no word from Abolition politicians in favor of a reduction of this enormous number of pap-suckers.

We regret to see, as we do from the official orders taken from the Macon Ida egraph, which we publish below, that indiscretion on the part of the Journal and Messenger, has led to its suppression .- At-

The Iclegraph told some truth that was unpalatable to the military authorities-and which the New Era, while it is of the opinion that nothing incendiary was meant, yet it considers the article in "bad taste." It used to be con-sidered a universal rule that matters of taste were not disputable; but that does not seem to hold good under military rule, neither in Austria nor in the United States. The wearing of a Koisuth hat in Austria is a punishable offense, as is the wearing in the United States of what was once rebel colors. So with publications. In both despotisms the law is the same. In a speech made by Andrew Johnson in the United States Senate, during the last debate upon the great sectional issue which resulted in the retirement of the Southern Senators from their seats, and in the resort to secession, he said : "Had I the power, I would transport to some remote island, in some unknown ses, the leaders and chiefs of the two great ultra factions who have put this Union and the peace of the country in great and constant danger. I refer to such men as the Senators from Massachusetts and Ohio, (Messrs. Wade and Sumner,) on the one hand, and to the Senators from South Carolina and Texas (Rhett and Wigfall) on the other, and I would condemn them to remain there apart from the rest of the world, and leave them to carry on their baneful agitation among themselves, to the great relief of a country, which they manage to keep in per-
