AQUA DE MAGNOLIA. A toilet delight—superior to any Cologne—used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and is obtaining a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & CO., New York, wholesale agents. SARATOGA SPRING WATER! Sold by all Druggists.

"Jes so!"—"Exactly!" Solon Shingle said; "they were there every time." If he felt "owley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters, and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

For persons want any better a theirite but as some may, just read the following:

"I owe much to you, for I verily believe Plantation Bitters saved my life."

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

"I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Bitters have cured me."

REV. C. A. HILLWOOD New York City.

"I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. The Plantation Bitters have set me all right"

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo.

"The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORS, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she has given it to "the weak and invalid children under her charge with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement I can effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as possible, and because a good article cannot be sold as cheap as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private mark over the cork. P. H. DRAKE & CO., New York City.

OVER A MILLION DOLLARS SAVED. "Gentlemen: I had a negro man worth $1,200, who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment. It soon effected a permanent cure

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, '65. J. L. DOWNING."

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men have used it for Burns, Bruises Sores, Rheumatism, &c., and all say it acts like magic.

J. W JEWETT, Foreman for American, Wells, Fargo's and Hamden's Express"

"The sprain of my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED STEELEY." Glouchester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men, and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. Stamp of DEMAS BARNES & CO., over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely.

It is a most delightful Hair dressing. It eradicates scurf and dandruff. It keeps the head cool and clear. It makes the hair rich, soft and glossy. It prevents the hair turning gray and falling off. It restores hair upon prematurely bald heads. This is what Lyon's Katharion will do. It is pretty—it is cheap—durable. It is literally sold by the car-load and yet its almost incredible demand is daily increasing until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

E. THOMAS LYON, Chemist, N. Y. SARATOGA SPRING WATER! Sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes Tan, Freckles, Pimples and roughness from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any druggist will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cents per bottle.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful Hair dressing. Sold in two sizes—50 cents and $1—by all dealers. C. HEIMSTREET, Chemist. SARATOGA SPRING WATER! Sold by all druggists.

LYON'S EXTRACT OF PURE JAMAICA GINGER.—For Indigestion, Nausea, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Cholera Morbus, Flatulency, &c., where a warming stimulant is required. Speech of Senator Cowan, at Pittsburgh, Aug. 27th.

MY FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS:—I thank you for the heartiness of this reception. You will accept my sincere thanks for it. We have met this evening for a great and glorious purpose—for the accomplishment of a purpose which I suppose must be and will be dearest and nearest to the American heart—the restoration of a great republic to its former pristine glory. (Applause.) Great Republic, did I say? The greatest republic, unquestionably, the world has ever seen, ancient or modern, kingdom, empire, aristocracy, democracy, or what not. These United States if once back to peace and harmony, and that fraternal affection which formerly characterized the various sections of them, would be unquestionably the greatest power to-day on the earth, or that ever existed. (Loud and continued applause.)

There are two great principles, gentlemen, to which I shall call your attention, perfectly familiar, and which are the keys by which to unlock all the troublesome questions which now stare us in the face. The first great distinguishing characteristic of our government, and all governments, is that they grow out of the people. They are the work of the people proper. I wish you to remember this, because I shall recur to it very frequently in the brief time in which I expect to address you.

The other great characteristic of our form of government consists in the fact that it is a government of law, as contradistinguished from arbitrary power.—that is our pride and our boast. Nothing can be done to the humblest citizen—the very humblest of you—by the mightiest in the land unlawfully, unless by the law, (Applause) not even the President of the United States, the commander-in chief of our armies and navies; not even General Grant, the General, par excellence, of the country, (applause) can injure, or dare injure, the humblest citizen, the weakest woman, or the most delicate child in the country, as against the law. (Tremendous applause.)

Now, in other countries, all over the world, there are arbitrary powers lodged somewhere, or in some particular body—parliament, council, or what you may choose to call it. Take, for instance, the English Parliament. The English Parliament is said to be omnipotent, that is, it can pass any law it pleases, and that law binds the realm. There is no such power in this country. All executive officers, all legislative bodies, are held in by constitutional and legal provisions which prevent anybody from exercising arbitrary power, and it is in that our liberty consists. It is there it is to be found, and nowhere else, and whenever we leave that, and abandon the law, the declared will of the whole people, as our rule and guide for action, then our great republic ceases to be, and turns itself to that extent into a despotism. (Applause.)

Now, I propose to examine very briefly and as plainly as I can, some of the questions which now agitate the people, and I think I can satisfy you, if you will be kind enough to give me your attention, that there really is no difficulty in the questions themselves, but that the difficulties are purely imaginary, have no real existence, and are not such as to make bold and brave men hesitate. There are difficulties everywhere; there are difficulties in every phase of human life; but those difficulties men encounter, and bold men face them, as bold men ought, so as to wield them to a bold man's purposes. In this battle of life we get nothing for nothing. In this great struggle for the maintainance of free government, we must expect difficulties, and the compensation we have for that struggle is Liberty, Independence and Union. (Great applause.)

Gentlemen, we have just emerged from a great and terrible war; a war which shook the earth; a war which astounded the nations of the old world; a war which manifested a power and capacity on the part of our people as that the nations stood aghast; a war in which the armed men sprang from the dragon's teeth. This war grew up in the midst of a civilized, peaceful people, out of nothing, as it were. In 1861 we had no army, no army, I mean, that would at this day be called an army—we had no navy that might be called a navy; we had no treasury—no exchequer which might be supposed able to meet the demands of a great and sudden emergency, such as then came upon the people. It was doubted before that whether the whole Union constituted a first-rate power in European parlance. That war came on, and was waged between the two sections with such force, such energy, such skill, and such an amount of resources as satisfied the world that we were not only one first-rate power, but that we were really two. And, gentlemen, whatever may be said of that war, so far as it was an effort of military force, so far as it was governed by military genius, I say the American people have nothing to be ashamed of it on either side. (Great applause.)

The war arose on the part of a portion of the people of these United States, and was inaugurated by the general government against them, because they refused obedience to the Constitution and laws, and the principle upon which it was conducted on our part—upon the part of the legitimate government—was precisely as the force exercised by your police when they go out upon the streets to suppress a riot or arrest a felon; and if we had not the right to suppress the rebellion by virtue of the authority derived from the Constitution and laws, we had no right to do it at all. (Applause.) That, I suppose, no man will or can deny. You and I have no authority over our fellow-men, except as we derive it from the law. Pennsylvania has no authority in the Union except as she has it by the law. The Union itself is the creature of law, and the United States in compelling obedience to the Constitution and laws, does so by virtue of the Constitution and those laws. (Applause.)

In that terrible conflict, State governments were crushed, shattered and broken, and when the general government succeeded in establishing its supremacy over them, they were lying in that disturbed, distracted and useless condition.

The question arises, how are they to be reconstructed? It was not the Union that was to be reconstructed, (applause,) but State governments that had been torn to pieces by the violence of war. That is the question of reconstruction. Take, if you please, Louisiana. How is that government to be reconstructed? That was the question which was presented to Mr. Lincoln while he was President. How did he receive it? Why, gentlemen, he decided it in the spirit of your Constitution and in the spirit of your laws. (Great applause.)

If the State government of Pennsylvania were by some sudden accident to be destroyed, where would you get another one—who would reconstruct it? It is only necessary to ask the question to have it answered. The people of Pennsylvania and no other. (Long continued applause.) It is their birthright, descended from heroic ancestors, transmitted to them as their proudest inheritance. The government belongs to the people, and if it is destroyed, it is referred to the people to make a new one. (Long continued applause.)

Mr. Lincoln referred the question of reconstruction to the people—the people of the States, whose governments had been overthrown. Was that right, or was it wrong? ('Right,' 'right.') That was his scheme of reconstruction. But there was a party who set up another scheme of reconstruction, who had a different theory and who proposed a different mode of getting the State governments upon their legs again, getting them back into practical relations with the Union. That was the radical party in Congress. They contended that Congress was to do it—not exactly that Congress was to make the State governments, but that Congress was to make the States to make such State governments as would please them. I suppose if they had said that to you, as Pennsylvanians, you would have said: 'If we are to adopt a government to suit your whims and your tastes, perhaps you had better make it yourselves.' [Laughter and applause.] That would be perfectly natural. As Pennsylvanians, you would have answered: 'We have the right to make our own government; you have no right to interfere, and nobody has any right to interfere; and you guarantee that we shall have this right, because the Constitution of the United States guarantees to the people of every State a republican form of government.' Now, the Radicals say, 'If we are to guarantee a republican form of government, we must make that form of government, in order to be sure that it is republican;' and they just turn it upside down, and reverse what was meant by the framers of the Constitution.

By that particular phrase, 'Republican form of government,' the framers of the Constitution meant to guarantee such form of government as the people of each State were pleased to make for themselves; and Mr. Madison says that is a republican form of government. [Applause.] That is what they meant by it, and that is common sense and common reason.

At the outstart of the war, there were different opinions entertained, and, as you well know, honestly entertained; and we may as well come to it first as last, as this is a country of free opinion, [applause] and every man is entitled to entertain his opinion. Whether that opinion squares with the majority or not, is a very different thing. Every man is entitled to his opinion, whether it be popular or unpopular, and that is the beauty of our government. The most mischievous men, who promulgated the most mischievous opinions during the war, I said bring them to me with the converts they have made, and I will pay the highest price for them. I offered to buy all the converts Vallandigham would make at the highest price. Why not? For they are opinions that our people do not entertain, and to suppose that our people cannot listen to opinions of all sorts and descriptions, is to decide that it is very dangerous to give them an opportunity to settle those opinions. [Applause.]

I remember that we have a very foolish set of fellows, who imagined that they would exclude newspapers of a certain class from the army. I stood up against it and I said the soldier had patriotism, and when he went to the field you might be sure he was in earnest, and you might give him whatever newspaper you pleased without danger of leading him astray.—[Applause.] I was never afraid to trust our people with the truth at all times. If we cannot reason together, and if we are to be the slaves of prejudice and passion, and tyranny, and outrage, and terrorism, we are not a free people. There will be always, in every community, a considerable number of bad men, but I say that the virtue and intelligence of the American people was triumphant over all their difficulties, and will enable them to maintain that government notwithstanding.

Mr. Lincoln had faith in the people North—faith in the people South—faith in the people everywhere—because the people in the South are your brothers, with the same history, the same ancestry, the same legends of national glory, the same proud recollection of former battles fought in common, and there is hardly a man here present who will not find one of his own name in the South—they are the same kind of people we are.

Ah! but it was said they are such bad people, they got up a rebellion—a most terrible rebellion—a bad war—in which thousands and hundreds of thousands of people were killed. That is true. It was a foul, heaven-daring, wicked rebellion.—but such is the law of humanity. Wars have occurred so since old Agamemnon laid siege to Troy. This is not the first rebellion that has ever been in the world. There have been thousands everywhere, and of course it was our lot to have one. It is now our duty to profit by the lessons of the past, to show that we now mean to cure and heal the wounds of the body politic, and get back to our former condition and be greater, more powerful and glorious than before. [Tremendous applause.]

It was said by some that the people of the South who had engaged in the rebellion, had become so criminal and so far out of a common humanity, that they were not competent to make their own State governments. I presume we are all sinners, at least I know I am, and if perchance some of us should be criminal there is a place of penitence—there is a place even upon earth where we are to be forgiven, and we are commanded to pray that we may be forgiven as we forgive others.

The people who go into rebellion, who are led away by bad and seditious men, should be forgiven when they show penitence, and, by the bye, our fathers in the 'Whisky Insurrection' of Western Pennsylvania, were very nearly getting into rebellion. I believe that eight thousand men met at Braddock's Field to inaugurate their rebellion but the people halted, they repented, and nobody thought the people, as such, were guilty, but the whole crime was laid upon a few leaders. But I was going to say that when the people had rebelled, when they were led away as the people of the South were, into such a war as that, the calamities which such a war brings, the punishment which it inflicts, the sorrows with which it covers the whole land are their punishments. Go to the South to-day, travel over their ruined cities, over wasted and desolated fields; witness the number of widows and orphans, see the graves of their children, and ask if she has not been punished.—There has never come upon any people in the world such a terrible and condign punishment as has come upon that people. They are purged, they have paid the penalty, and they are chastened with many sorrows.

I am not prepared to say, under the heavy inflictions they have suffered, they are not wiser than you.

Under these circumstances, Mr. Lincoln feeling that the people had been purged by their sufferings, entrusted to them the making of their own State governments, and that was his plan of reconstruction:—[Great applause.] As I said before, that was opposed by precisely the same party and same men who now oppose President Johnson in carrying out that same plan of reconstruction.

You very well remember that the Radicals, to a man, in Congress, were opposed to Mr. Lincoln; opposed his renomination in favor of Chase, and they got up an Executive Committee for the purpose of making Chief Justice Chase President of the United States. They tried at times to get up Fremont by way of diversion.—[Laughter.] At Baltimore it was the people who nominated Mr. Lincoln in opposition to the Congressional clique, and when he was canvassing before the people for re-election, in the very thick of the fight, there was a protest signed on the part of a reconstruction committee—not the one that has become so famous, the immortal fifteen [laughter]—but there was a reconstruction committee, at the head of which appeared the names of Benjamin F. Wade and Henry Winter Davis, and they published that protest to Mr. Lincoln's nomination, and they charged him with being a usurper and a tyrant, and they called him all the names which the vocabulary of such people generally furnishes. That is the same party which to day opposes Mr. Johnson and his reconstruction of State governments. [Applause.]

After the death of Mr. Lincoln President Johnson succeeded to him and succeeded to his policy. He has purs
