PROSPECT IN THE STATE.

The Philadelphia Age, published at the centre of political information in the Commonwealth, is very confident of Mr. Clymer's election. It says the State is being fully and thoroughly canvassed, and from cheering reports of changes in our faror. amounting in the aggregate to such a failure at the polls. In some counties whole families, formerly active and influential in the ranks of the opposition, are now zealously co-operating, with the anti Radical party, while in all the additions to the Democratic and Conservative clubs are challenging the wonder and chagrin of the leaders of the "Torch-and-Turpentine" faction. Of this fact the managing men of the opposition are not and cannot be ignorant; and if they have any hopes of success, those hopes must be founded upon the supposed effectiveness of side issues, and extraneous and perhaps, dishonest means. If so, they will be mis-State in which the Democrats are not fully prepared against fraud.
