THE INPEACEMENT BUSINESS. - Since the election is passed, the idea of impeaching the President seems to be less the rage than during the canvasy. The grand aim, preceding the election, was to excite the people with the idea that the President had been guilty of some "high crime or misdemeanor" punishable under the Constitution with deposition from office.

But all this was simply a trick-a means by which to arouse the passions of the Radicals and excite their resentment.

It is now known that the next Congress will be strong enough to carry any measure the extremists may desire, by a two thirds vote over the President's veto, and hence there is less urgency to get rid of him. Under existing circumstances,
