Good Night. Good night! A word so often said, The heedless mind forgets its meaning; 'Tis only when some heart lies dead On which our own was leaning.

Good Night. Good night! I tenses that never die, It peaks along the quieting air, And tender faces of memory, Forever with it breathe;

Good Night. Good night! It mokes us from the grave— It calls from out the gloom, and bids us, In our laps that strange world's bound, From which there flows no backward wave; O'er its side, around, above, Good night, good night to life and love.

Good Night. Good night! Ob, wherefore fades away The light that lived in thy dear world? Why follows that good night no day? Oh, rather say, still brain, more Good night! Thy time of toil is o'er.

Good Night. Good night! Ob, wherefore fades away The light that lived in thy dear world? Why follows that good night no day? Oh, rather say, still brain, more Good night! Thy time of toil is o'er.
