OPERATED FOR THE CAMPAIGN : Miller de the Zine to Beberibe ! PIPTY CENTS FOR THERE SEPARAS!

Press Forward the Column.

The political campaign upon which we are about entering is one of the most important that has ever occurred is the State. It virtually decides the Presidential contest of next year, for "as Pennsylvanis goes, so goes the Union." The indications on every side point to a more encouraging prospect for the success of Democratic principles than we have had in a number of years. Thaddeus Stevens, the great Radical leader, says Pennsylvania is likely to go against the Radicals this fall, and he is the last man who would utter such a prediction unless the signs of the times were so unmistakeably clear as to allow of no other conclusion. clear as to allow of no other conclusion. We can win the victory if we use the rightful exertion, and if Democrats are one-half as earnest in the cause as they profess, they will not allow despondency and inaction again to prevent the supremacy of our principles. Determined to do our share in the work, we have concluded to furnish the Observe at the following low rate:

One copy, three months
Five copies, "
Ten copies, "
" Ten copies,
Twenty copies, 9.00 These prices barely cover the expense to us, and we are only induced to offer them in the hope that by the wider circulation which the paper may secure, we shall be enabled still further to promote the cause which lies so near to the hearts of all true Democrats. Subscribers can commence any time previous to the election, and may rely upon having the paper promptly discontinued at the expiration of the period for which they have paid.

At these moderate figures it ought not to be a difficult task to secure a subscription of

be a difficult task to secure a subscription of two thousand extra copies for the Observer between now and the day of election. We hope our friends in every part of the dis-trict will see the importance of obtaining the widest possible circulation for the paper, and go to work at once to help on the move-ment. The emergencies of the crisis de-mand the individual effort of every man and woman who feels an interest in Democratic principles. See that your neighbors are principles. See that your neighbors are father's death she would be heiress to the supplied with sound doctrines, and let them obtain an funderstanding of the Issues in obtain an funderstanding of the Issues in and though men generally pretend not to be warm Democrat near you, who does not love, it is to be reasonably supposed that this wain reinform near you, who does not now receive his county paper, induce him to subscribe for it three months at least. It will revive his zeal in the cause, and may make of him an earnest and effective worker. Furnish your Republican neighbor with a copy, and let him see what the measures of his next leader have done. his party leaders have done and are doing to damage his interests. There are hosts of Republicans who stand hesitating as to their duty, and who only need to become thoroughly acquainted with Democratic principles and arguments, to become hearty adher-ents of our cause.

Who will be the first to send us a club of ten or twenty campaigners? We intend do-ing our full duty in the campaign, and look to our friends to perform theirs.

And say the thing I saw last night
Was nobody's son—that's all!

COURTING UNDER DIFFICULTIES Katic Blake was the only daughter of Ja-She was more than uncommonly pretty, and her fresh, engaging manners, enhanced the charms of her golden hair, pretty teeth, and eves like the skies of summer. At her most sincere, was Will Dartmouth, with a heart larger than his purse, and very little thought too.

She regarded it as a primary sin for Katie to associate with the young men, and this doctrine was preseveringly drilled into her own ideas on the subject.

One day Mr. Blake and his wife went to Debham to attend a fair, and Miss Peggy being at a friends', Katie was left alone. Will Dartmouth in some way learned the condiwood fire, when there was a sound of voices at the door.

"Good gracious!" cried Katie, turning white with alarm, "that is Aunt Peggy. Oh, Will, what shall we do? She will scold me to death; and father will be furious. Get under the lounge, quick! Oh, Will, do for my sake."

Will could not withstand the pleading in Katic's eyes, and he deposited himself in the Katie put out the light, and darting into an adjacent bed room, in a moment was apparently asleep. Peggy's voice was heard speaking softly in the entry.
"Be careful, Mr. Pike. There's a loose board there. I don't want to disturb my niece. Softly—it may creak."

"Peggy, dear, where are you?" responded the squealing voice of Esquire Pike, a widower of a year. "I can't tell which way vou've gone you've gone."
"There, Daniel, be easy. Good Heavens!
Daniel Pike, well, I never!" and a report burst on the air like uncorking a champagne "Oh, my.!" cried aunt Peggy, "what would brother Jacob say? I declare, I hain't been Missed by a man since—"
"Let Jake mind his own business!" retorted the squire. "You and I can take care of our's without his help;" and there followed a report something similar to the first, only "Do be quiet, Daniel, and let meget a light. Bet right down there afore the fire an, make yourself to home." A light was soon procured, Peggy divest-ed herself of her wrappings, and blushing like a girl in her teens sat down opposite the

"Hark! There is a noise—I—"
"Gracious airth its bells. Its Jake and mann coming back! What shall I do? We are done for !Oh, Squire, 'tain't right for us to be nothing to 'tother. What shall we to be nothing to 'tother. What shall we do?"

"Tell me where to go Peggy! say the word, I'll go any where for your sake, if it's up the chimney."

"Under the lounge quick! It's wide and will hold you well enough. Quick! don't delay a minute."

The Squire obeyed, but the space was already so well filled that it was with difficulty he could squeeze himself into so small a compass. And just as he had succeeded, Mr. Blake and his wife entered the room, floundering along in the dark, for Peggy had dering along in the dark for Peggy had dering along will hold you well enough. Quick: don't de-lay a minute."

The Squire obeyed, but the space was al-ready so well filled that it was with difficulty he could squeeze himself into so small a compass. And just as he had succeeded, Mr. Blake and his wife entered the room, flour-dering along in the dark, for Peggy had deemed it best to extinguish the light. Jake made for the fire, which still glowed red with coals, stumbled over a cricket, and fell headlong against Peggy, who was standing bolt upright; trying to collect her scattered "The deuce," cried Jake. Looking, there, old woman, or you'll be down over me. It's old woman, or you'll be down over me. It's dark as a pocket here, and I've fell over the rocking chair, or the churn, I can't tell which. Hullo! what's this !" reaching out his hand to feel his situation, and coming in contact with the bearded face of the Squire. "By George! it's got whiskers! Peg! where are you? and where is Kate? and what's all this mean?" you r and where is nate r and what s at this mean?"

The Squire did not relish the assault made on his hirsnte appendages, and by way of retaliation, he gave a series of vigorous kicks, which hit Will Darmouth in the region of coals, stumbled over a cricket, and fell head-the stomach, and stirred his bile.

"Look here, old chap?" exclaimed he, "I am perfectly willing to share my quarters with you, seeing we're both in for it; but you had better not undertake to play that again."
"Heavens!" ejaculated Peggy; "whose voice is that?"

"Who in the deuce is here? that's what I want to know!" cried Jake, struggling for an upright position. "Hellow! who's fell over my legs?"

"I'll let you know who's down and who's up!" said Mrs. Blake; and the old lady scrambled up, only to go instantly down again over a chair.

"Jake where are you?" "Jake, where are you? get up this instant of a chist!"
and get a light, or I'll shake your breath out, when I get my feet again."

Jake started to obey, and just then Tiger like whe the watch dog, who, hearing the uproar, had

The Squire had a mortal horror of dogs and neither fear nor love was strong enough the countries and a mortal marror of cogs, the neither fear not love was strong enough to keep him quiescent now. He arrang to his feet with a yell; Will followed. Not Bad. About forty years ago, there lived in West-tern Pennsylvania two farmers, named Wood and Osborne respectively. They were near neighbors but inveterate enemies; and it is said they lived almost in sight of each other for fourteen years without speaking to each other. Wood went out one day with a mattock, to dig up half a dozen stumps that had never been removed from his meadow; but finding it pretty hard work, and moreover, not being very fond of work, he gave it up and returned to the house. On the way it occurred to him that, by a cunning device, he might induce his unfriendly neighbor to uproot the little annoyances. Acting on a bright idea that occurred to him he proved him he most sincere, was Will Dartmouth, with a heart larger than his purse, and very little thought or care for consequences.

Fortunately, old Jacob never suspected the partiality of his daughter for Will; he would have put her on bread and water before he would have consented to the slightest degree of intimacy with Will Dartmouth.

Jacob Blake was not in favor of marriage.
Those who knew his circumstances were not sirprised at this, for to use a phrase more expressive than elegant, Mrs. Blake was a regular Tartar, with temper enough for two tartars.

Old Jacob had to "walk Spanish" for the most part, or suffer the consequences, which usually descended on his head in the shape of any domestic utensils which happened to be lying around handy.

A maiden sister of Mr. Blake resided in the family, whose principal business seemed to be to be to act as a sort of echo to her brother ark.

"A REFENTANT CRIMINAL."

Mr. Wood sealed this bit of fiction, addressed it to himself, and, when night came, crept stealthily to Osborne's door, opened it a little way, tossed it in, and ran away as if a little way, tossed it in, and ran away as if a little way, tossed it in, and ran away as if a little way to rest, and reposed sweetly till morning. When he arose he cast a glance towards his meadow, and to his satisfaction discovered that every stump in his meadow had been dug up during the night and pulled out by the roots. After breakfast he went coolly to work and rolled them together in a pile, in order to burn them. And imagine of the family, whose principal business seemed to be to be to act as a sort of echo to her brother and the work and rolled them together in a pile, in order to burn them.
