Her story, which is corroborated by other testimony, is as follows: "She is a widow, her husband having died in Buffalo. She went to Petroleum Centre in search of employment, and worked in a hotel there. She fell a victim to the persistent arts of the landlord, and was then heartlessly turned away. About four weeks ago she was received into the poorhouse at Young-ville, and about ten days since her child, a fine looking boy, was born. She came from Youngsville to Corry and laid the child in a conspicuous place, and hid herself to watch it, until a passer by seeing it took it up, and then she hastened away, going to Tidionte. She was, however immediately arrested, on a telegram to Corry, was taken back and had a hearing, with the result above stated. The poor woman was sick and suffering, and the kind hearted constable appealed to District Attorney Lynch, who immediately accompanied him to Judge Vincent, and laid the case before him. BRICK MAKING.-Modern inventive genius is constantly making some improvement in even the most difficult features of industry. For a long period it has been striving hard to produce a machine which could manufacture brick as well as it can be done by hand, and with a rapidity sufficient to commensurate for the inevitable increase in the original expense. From some cause, most of the experiments have been a failure but success seems to have been attained at last. We had the pleasure on Tuesday of witnessing the operations of the Continental brick machine, at Jordan & Loomis' kilu, near the land light house, and should judge it to be exactly what brick makers have so long been seeking. The clay is taken directly from the bank, dampened somewhat, thrown into the hopper, thoroughly ground, and turned out into smooth, well shaped bricks at the rate of fifteen thousand a day. Parties who claim to be good judges, say the bricks are equal to any made by hand. The Continental machine is manufactured at Meadville, by our former townsman, Goo. B. Sennett, Esq., and we are glad to learn that it is becoming a great favorite throughout
