THE WAIL OF SAMBO ON THE DEFEAT OF THE AMENDMENT.

Oh, hab you heard the solemn news,
De 'mendment it am beaten,
Oh dear, it gibs a nig de blues
To see de Rads retreatin.
Dey sed dey lubbed us berry much,
Dat dey could all embrace us,
Now I don't see how eny such
Cud hab de heart to face us.

An ole Ben Wade hisself could not
Do anything to save us,
I don't belieb de 'publicans
Am better dan Jeff. Davis.
Look how de whites to-day step roun,
Dey feel a great deal biggah.
I spects dey tink dat dey am now
As good as enny niggah.

I was so shuah dat I wud vote,
And git de county offis,
I didn't tink our own dear frens
So soon wud scorn and scoff us.
I thought dat all de nigs to-day
Wud shout de loud hossana,
I guess I'll pack my tings and go
Right off to Alabama.

For dah de niggahs rule de day,
And do all ob de votin,
De whites aint got no show down dah,
At least nun dats worf notin.
Den niggahs in de lubly Souf
Stay in de swamps and bye,
Don't cum unto dis heathen State,
De cussed ole Ohio.

MORE ABOUT MRS. LINCOLN.

We this week present a few more extracts from our cotemporaries in continuation of those already presented in connection with the proffered sale of Mrs. Lincoln's wardrobe. As before, the most interesting and damaging of them come from Radical sources. We will not deny that we have an object in keeping this matter before the public, and that object, it is needless to say, is not to damage the character of a woman, even though the severest attacks upon her reputation come from those who, in her better days, could find no words of flattery sufficiently expressive to bestow upon her. In all history there has never been a more complete farce than the saintly character which the Radicals seek to ascribe to Abraham Lincoln, and the time is coming when the humbug will be palpable to the world. It may be that the facts which are now given currency will lead people to inquire how it was that if Mr. Lincoln was the holiest and patriotic man he is claimed to have been, he could, if not actually abet, at least blink at, such things as the Radical press accuses his wife of doing during their stay at the White House? In this view we continue our extracts on the subject, and commend them to the serious attention of the public:

A Lot of Queer Stories.

They tell some queer stories, these gossipping people do, about the lady who has forced herself into such prominence of late, and if you would like to hear them as they are related in society, I will tell you one or two. They are so much on a par with the "little incidents" lately given by Thurlow Weed, that they can hardly be expected to awaken special interest, but such as they are you are welcome to them.

When Lord Lyons represented England at the court of the Republic, his wife had a waiting maid who took the fancy of a certain lady in the White House. By promises of preferment and increased wages this waiting maid was induced to transfer her services from Lady Lyons to another lady whose name had the same initial. She thought, poor thing, that she would have nothing to do but exhibit herself about the White House, but this delusion was very speedily dispelled; for it was only a few days before she was set to making drawers out of the linen sheets of the establishment. This wounded her feelings so much that she soon "gave notice" to her employer, and when she subsequently spoke of her sorrow to her friends, she said that the extraordinary length of the drawers she was employed on left no doubt in her mind as to the person who was to have the comfort of wearing them.

Mrs. Lincoln made several trips to New York in the war times, and made some extensive purchases each time she went. On one occasion, the proprietor of a leading jewelry and furnishing establishment on Broadway received (so the story goes) an order for a beautiful chandelier for the White House. The price of the chandelier was $500; but somebody (as I was not present at the time I will not be positive about names) suggested that the bill should be made out for $1000, and that the difference should be made up in jewelry. But the gentleman to whom the proposition was made respectfully declined to entertain it, and I think his chandelier was not sent to Washington.

On another occasion, a Broadway dealer, well known throughout the country, was favored with an order for some superfine sets of porcelain and China ware for the national establishment. The value of the sets was $800, but other purchases made at the same time brought the bill up to $2200. The storekeeper was requested to made the porcelain and China ware cover the whole amount of the bill, and, to oblige his customer, he did so. The bill went to the Secretary of the Interior, who said to himself, "$2200 is a very high price for those sets; I must look into it." He did look into it by sending an agent to a large furnishing house in Philadelphia, where the same kind of goods were sold, and the agent went back to Washington with the information that the Philadelphia price of the article was $800. The Secretary of the Interior then wrote to the Broadway dealer to know how he came to charge $2200 for goods that were sold for $800 in Philadelphia, and the merchant wrote back that he charged only $800 for them, and that the extra $1400 covered the purchase which had not been specified.

Another incident, illustrative of character, has just occurred to me. One day Mrs. L drove up, in front of Genin's store, under the St. Nicholas, and leaning out of the carriage, she beckoned to one of the clerks, who was speaking to a friend at the door, to go to her. He knew her very well, but took no notice of her motions. She beckoned again and again, but he did not go near her. Finally another lady, who was in the carriage, stepped out, and walked up to him, asked him if he knew who that lady (Mrs. L.) was. He replied somewhat indifferently that he did not care. "Why," said she, bridling up, "that is Mrs. Lincoln, and she wants you to wait on her." "I don't know any difference between Mrs. Lincoln and the wife of a mechanic," said the clerk. "If she will come into the store I will attend to her, but I am not employed to wait on people in the street." A complaint to Mr. Genin followed, as a matter of course, but the clerk did not lose his place.

[From the Chicago Times, October 16.]

The country has been talking about Mrs. Lincoln's wardrobe for two weeks, and forming various opinions as to the good taste or policy of advertising the same for sale. Few persons are aware that she has for over a year been in the habit of visiting a certain pawnbroker's shop in this city, where she has sold from time to time various articles of wearing apparel and table furniture. In a dingy shop at No. 89 South Wells street, where hanging dresses suggest capital punishment, and empty coat sleeves beat the air to notify passers-by that clothes are for sale there, may be found some of the clothing of Mrs. Lincoln. First, and most prominent, is said to be the dress she wore at Ford's theatre, on the night of Mr. Lincoln's assassination. This is a canary-colored brocade, low-necked, satin dress, trimmed at the bottom with a broad band of canary-colored plain satin. Mrs. Lincoln stated, when she pawned the dress, that it cost $225. She received for it $30. Besides this, there is a common striped chene silk dress, of gray lilac color, which was pawned at the same time, and a small canary-colored plume filled with a cluster of golden grapes, which she wore in her hair on the night of the assassination. These are all that now remain. A large stock of goods, comprising cradle quilts, china sets, dresses and other goods, for which the volatile pawnbroker thinks he paid Mrs. Lincoln the sum of $1,500, have been sold. The dress worn by Mrs. Lincoln at the first inauguration of her husband—a white silk—was sold to a stage actress. A brow satin dress, with a golden crown, made, as Mrs. Lincoln informed the dealer, expressly for a tour to Europe, was pawned some time last winter, and sold by the broker for the sum of $70. A lavender silk dress, with brocade flowers, also pawned at this shop, is now at the dyer's for the restoration of its color, damaged while on exhibition at the shop. Several other dresses were mentioned by the pawnbroker, Mr. Doyle, as having been sold by him, the description of which he could not give. Mrs. Lincoln also, about a year ago, pawned at this shop a set of china which she had brought from Washington. A few pieces were broken but the remaining articles were of the finest porcelain, and were sold to grace a wedding party. Mrs. Lincoln, in making this disposal of a considerable portion of her wardrobe, desired, and for a time succeeded, in transacting the business connected with the sale incog., so far as the dealer was concerned. She always made the bargains herself, and represented that she was a lady stopping at the Clifton house, who from some circumstances unexplained, had a large quantity of clothing that she could never use. At one time she stated that she had intended to go to Europe, but that some unfortunate occurrences had prevented the tour. On her first visit, in connection with some articles of clothing, she brought a pair of old and faded cradle quilts, which, the pawnbroker says, he bought, not because of their value, but to encourage the lady to deal with him more largely. On one of these visits, the colored driver of Mrs. Lincoln's carriage mentioned to the broker, incidentally, that Mrs. Lincoln desired to see him. This was the first intimation Mr. Doyle had of the position and character of his customer. The negro driver called at the shop a few days afterwards and informed the proprietor that his mistress had discharged him for the unfortunate and unpremeditated statement. Mrs. Lincoln used to tell this man to whom she sold her clothes that he was the only one in the city with whom she could deal. None of the others would pay her what she thought she should have for them. On one occasion, calling at the store and finding the proprietor not at home, she inquired where he was, and sent her carriage and driver after him across the bridge into the North division. In February last she brought some dresses to pawn, and not agreeing upon the sum she should get for them, she drove off, saying she should never come again. She kept her word, and the pawnbroker heard no more of her until the late announcement in a New York paper of her more extended and more brilliant financial operations in the same line.

Another Furious Blast from a Radical Source.

[From the Mac-a-cheek Press, edited by Don Piatt, a leading Ohio Radical.]

It is difficult to conceive of anything more humiliating to an American citizen than the late conduct and correspondence of Mrs. Lincoln, which the Democratic press has siezed on and spread before the public with shameless avidity. How this differs from the course pursued by one of their most distinguished leaders. Senator Bayard had at one time given him some accounts from the White House, by a Republican Committee of the Senate, with the understanding that what he determined on the Committee would indorse. A few days after, to the astonishment of the Committee, the eminent Senator returned the accounts marked "approved," and when asked for an explanation, said: "Gentlemen, this woman is the wife of our President. Any assault upon her is an attack upon ourselves. Let us say nothing about it." In the same spirit, the Committee from the House, appointed to investigate the condition of the Executive mansion, immediately subsequent to the death of Mr. Lincoln, suppressed the shameful facts that came to its knowledge. Now, however, the Democratic press, in hopes of damaging their opponents, drags Mrs. Lincoln and her conduct before the world.

Well, it is shameful enough, God knows, but in what way it is to attach to the Republican organization we are at a loss to discover. That the advertisement, so widely made at this woman's request, exhibits not only her greed, but the corrupt condition of the government in which she took so prominent a part, we are prepared to admit, and in this view it is damaging to the late administration. But the cry of ingratitude is too silly for refutation. It was known to the wide circle that business or social life brought in contact with the Executive mansion, that its interior was as gross, vulgar and corrupt as it was possible for any house to be and retain even a semblance of respectability. The startled public now reads its history in a forty thousand dollar wardrobe, made up of shawls, laces and diamonds, the gifts of "dear friends" —how "dear," the poor public is now realizing in the millions that shameless thieves have stolen and are yet stealing. The saddest part of all this is the tarnish it casts upon the tainted memory of the martyr President. How was it possible that these gifts from "dear friends" were paid for in wartime offices, given under the signature of Abraham Lincoln, without that shrewd man being aware of the infamous character of the official and the nature of the bargain that brought him into office? This is a surmise only, but Thurlow Weed seems determined to bring the business home to the late President.

Mr. Weed might have added the fact that this refusal to approve of a bare-faced swindle, cost Mr. Smith his seat in the Cabinet, Mr. Lincoln so far sympathizing with his wife in this extraordinary transaction. Mrs. Lincoln was not only as unprincipled and avaricious as the late sale indicates, but she was and is exceedingly stupid and ignorant; and yet, how are we to account for the power she exercised over the domestic life and public affairs of the lamented President. We remember how pained the loyal hearts of the Union were to learn that in the darkest hour of our national pride, when our armies were paralyzed by imbecility, and our treasury was being robbed by dishonest agents, while the artillery of the enemy echoed through the very halls of the capitol, a dancing, drinking entertainment, or ball, was given at the White House. This was shocking, but it became horrible when the fact leaked out that, while the noise of revelry shook the time-honored mansion, in one of the upper chambers a child of the host and hostess lay dying of a fever, that had set in and alarmed the family physician, when the cards of invitation were being issued. We turn away from the inner life of this White House, that was indeed a whitened sepulchre; in sorrowing disgust, and feel ashamed through all our being that the curtain was ever lifted to let light in on its loathsome contents.

THE DIAMOND DICKENS.—THE OLD CURIOSITY SHOP AND REPRINTED PIECES.—The beauty, concise form, and all the other attractions of this exquisite edition add new delights to one of Dickens' best stories. Eytinge's portraits of favorable characters give fresh interest to Little Nell, Mrs. Jarley, Dick Swiveller, Quilp, Sampson Brass, the Marchioness, etc., and will tend to increase the number of their admirers. The reprinted Pieces are some of the choicest papers ever contributed to English periodicals; many of them have already won wide favor in this country. The convenience and clear type of the Diamond Dickens, we are glad to know, are duly appreciated. This is the seventh number of this issue. The remaining six or seven volumes will be published in rapid succession. The set, consisting of thirteen or fourteen elegant little volumes, will be a choice library in itself. Besides being so very attractive, it is really the cheapest edition of Dickens' Complete Works issued in this country. The illustrated edition is only $1.50 a volume; plain, $1.25. All the booksellers have it, or it will be sent postpaid by the publishers, Ticknor & Fields, Boston.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—The number for November contains the following embellishments: A magnificent steel plate, entitled "The Woeful Heart;" the usual colored fashion plate; "Sports in Childhood," a picture for the juveniles; and still another of those beautiful tinted plates—"Scene in Venice." The wood-cut fashions consist of a dinner dress, a morning robe, a walking suit, bonnets, aprons and children's sacks. In the department devoted to fancy work will be found designs for ornamenting braid for the trimming of wraps; crochet pattern; the buckle pattern; new style of girdle; design for a handkerchief corner; card alphabet; emery cushion; traveling shoe-bag; watch-pocket in bead-work; glove sachet; letters for marking pillow-cases; embroidery, etc., etc. Drawing Lessons will also be found in this number. A Suburban Residence, with the plans. In fact, this number contains everything necessary to make it a first-class ladies' magazine. Now is the time to commence making up clubs for Godey. The earlier the orders are received the sooner they can be supplied.

The editor of the New York Times has discovered the reason the Radicals were not successful in the late elections. He says: "The result is not due to any increase of the Democratic strength, but simply to a falling off in the Republican vote." Now let Bunyby sir his wisdom a little more by informing the public what caused "the falling off in the Republican vote."

COLORADO.

Special Correspondence of the Press.]

CANON CITY, C. T., Sept. 4, 1867.

A trip of over one thousand miles through Colorado, extending from the New Mexico line to Gilpin's Pillars, in the North, and from Kansas to the Uncompagre Mountains in the West, has given the writer opportunities for observation of which he has tried to avail himself, and the result may tend to throw another ray of light on a section of our country destined to occupy no minor position in the future success of the nation.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

Through Colorado Territory runs the grand continental water-shed, and in it we find the greatest altitude of arable plateau. A curious feature of the Territory is its chain, of
