THE SAME SWEET STORY CON-Lovely Picture for Freemen to Contemplate.

Negro Voting in Alabama. A correspondent of the Herald, writing from Eufalila, Alabama, October 7th, shows up the manner in which the election was conducted in that part of the country on the issue of "for a convention" or "against a convention," as provided in Sherman's bills for

He says:
"The loyal lengues, which are composed and a few white men most mostly of negroes and a few white men most generally known as "imported Radicals," controlled the polls in the following manner: controlled the polls in the following manner: On Monday night preceding the election the freedmen collected near the town and camped alongside the three roads above described, where they kept up during night boisterous and rotous proceedings, discharging fire arms and otherwise disturbing and distressing those citizens whose houses were near those highways.

"About eight o'clock on Tuesday morning they formed a military procession, severa hundred strong, with loaded guns and mus hundred strong, with loaded guns and muskets, and a great many with pistols and knives strapped to their bodies, fully exposed to view, marched into the town from the three roads horetofore described, beating drums and blowing in hollow canes and reeds. So complete and perfect were their plans of operation that the head of each colunn moved simultaneously into the square from each one of the three road approaches.
Here, without any seemingly pre-arranged plan, they broke ranks and spread out generally all around the court house and filled the square all over. Their numbers were estimated at three thousand. Those who had In a short time after they came into the town they took possession of the court house and they took possession of the court house and they took possession of the court house and the whole area surrounding. A wagon containing a great bulk of regular army muskets —I don't know how many—drawn by four mules, was driven into the center of the square and halted in front of the court house, the freedmen pressing and making way, for its entrance, and quickly again filling in the open space just behind it. When I saw this wagon and muskets in it, I enquired of a freedman near me what it meant, and was informed in reply "that the colored folks was gwine to hab de ekel rights," the English of which was to control the election in their

The President or "King bee" in each hive, by common consent seems to have supreme control of the liberties and persons of its members. As a proof of this, one colored man, who had violated some order of the captain, was tird up by the thumbs and severely punished; another bucked and whipped. This did not come under my own observation, but is spoken of unreservedly and frequently by many of the freedmen in the presence of the whites, and there can be no doubt of its truth. The head-quarters of the league in Barbour county are understood to be in Clayton. The tickets to be voted for were sent out on these roads by couriers from head-quarters and placed in lead-quarters and placed in couriers from head-quarters and placed in the hands of all "the captains," who distribu-ted them to their men. Every man as he marched into the town, came with his ticket in his hand. The officers maintained their thority, and not a voter was permitted to authority, and not a voter was permitted to leave the ranks until they occupied the square. The voting soon commenced, and a curious spectacle it was to behold this assembled mass of ignorance and brutality casting their first vote. Their stupidity at times excited the risibilities of the registers and clerks, Under the election order the voter's name was to be found on the registry and checked off when he voted. Occasionally one whose turn had brought him up to the polls to vote, not understanding the modus would stand gazing upon the registers and clerks until one would ask him his name. "Jake, sir," "Jake who?" "Jake King, sir," and clerks until one would ask him his name.

"Jake, sir," "Jake who?" "Jake King, sir."
"What beat do you live in Jake?" "Dun neighborhood do you live in?" "I libs by Captain Johnson's mill." The clerk examines he registry of the beat in which he happens o know Johnson's mill is situated, and Jake King's name is not to be found among the King's name is not to be found among the registered voters; whereupon he patiently requires of Jake the name of his old master. "I used to belong to Mr. Williamson's 'state, sir." The clerk now looks among the W's and finds the name of John Williamson, colored, who forthwith votes the league ticket, already in his hand, and is informed his name is not Jake King, but John Williamson. The announcement strikes Jake as funny, when he opens his monstrous black jaws, lifts up his thundering voice and laughs convulsively till the whole court house trembles.

Take out Messrs. Southall, of Albemarle; Lewis, of Stafford; Mauzey, of Culpepper; Marye, Gravatt; and Hunter of Spotsyl-vania district, and two or three from other districts, there is hardly a decent man elecdistricts, there is hardly a decent man elec-ted to the convention from that part of Virginia east of the Blue Ridge. Merit and capability seemed to be the things that were to be shunned by the newly-enfranchised in making their elections. Learning, experience, integrity, and good standing in society were in their eyes disreputable, and altogether unsuitable for a member of the convention; so they hunted tor men who had none of these, and they found them. A NEGRO Row .- On the evening of the election in Amherst County a large crowd of Radical negroes attacked a colored man named Elisha Smith, who had voted the Conservative ticket, near Cunningham's gro bery, and were beating him very severely when Mr. Cunningham, who witnessed the assault, endeavored to put a stop to it. The negroes turned upon him and, to protect himself, he drew a knife and stabbed the one who was pressing most closely upon him, several times in the face, inflicting severe wounds. This frightened the rest of the ne-

IN FREDERICKSBURG.—On election day one Harris, a colored surgeon attached to the Freedmen's Bureau in this place, posted himself close to where the colored people deposited their ballots, and as each one approached he held out his hand, receiving and looking over the ticket, and tore up tickets taken from the hands of colored voters and ubstituted others! Five colored men in Fredericksburg voted the Conservative tick-et, and are honorably mentioned in the Fredericksburg papers, with the assurance that their independence, courage, and sense will be fully appreciated by the white citizens.

They were denounced at the meeting of the Loyal League and one of them threatened with being refused the rites of burial when he died. Holmes, negro, goes about eleven hundred ahead of Mr. Bouldin. Nelson got the whole negro vote with a few honorable exceptions. A tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon all who were inclined to vote the Conservative ticket. They came very near mobbing Henry Smith.

"The loyal league has chapters or councils all over the country, one in every neighbormation I cannot doubt, informed, me that nearly every colored man in the county was a member of it. The President or "King bee" in each hive, by common consent seems to have supreme control of the liberties and persons of its members. As a proof of this, one colored man, who had violated some orader of the captain, was tied up by the thumbs and severely punished; another bucked and many pretending not even to know the name is an ex-minister of the cospel, (but still continues to preach,) and was in the employment of John Morris as whisky rectifier before his distillery was seized by the govern-ment for swindling, and himself lodged in

I deem it the duty of some one in every county and election district, where such men are elected, to hold up their characters to the public, that the people of the North may be warned what kind of men will take their seats beside them in the Coleans of a points in the characters and place. of the North may be warned what kind of men will take their seats beside them in the councils of this great nation, should this diabolical scheme of reconstruction be consummated.—Richmond Enquirer.

NEGRO SUPREMACY THE RESULT.-The Negro Supremacy the Result.—The Radicals have carried the State. A Convention is called by $9,000 majority, perhaps more. The negroes have turned out as a general thing, while at least 25 per cent. of the registered white voters have declined to vote. In the county of Albemarle, out of about 2,500 white voters, about six hundred have not voted. Judge Alexander Rives, a gentleman known throughout the country. Judge Alexander Rives, a gentleman known throughout the country, a consistent Unionist in 1860-61, throughout the war, and since the war—a man who held out for the Union when Unionism made his name odious in all decent assists, a gentleman who odious in all decent society, a gentleman who odious in all decent society, a gentleman who has sacrificed his social ties to a political sentiment—this man is beaten in this county for the Convention by the united negro vote against him. They preferred an ignorant negro, James Taylor, and an ignorant and obscure white man, C. L. Thompson, who has gone over to the negroes, to Rives. The Federal officers here expostulated, made speeches, in vain in behalf of Judge Rives, who was also a regular nominee of a negro who was also a regular nominee of a negro

Very many of them, I learn, had forgotten their names, or the names by which they had registered—all of which caused much delay. I have heard and believe it true, that one boy, sixteen years old, voted for his "daddy," who was sick and could not go to the polls. I met a boy seventeen, years old, who was once my slave, and asked him if he had voted. He replied he had." Well, how's that? You are seventeen years old, for I raised you and know your age," "Can't help it, sir dun voted now, and I counts myself a man anyhow."

"I went twenty-one miles to Clayton to vote for a convention, found I could not reach the polls, and came away not voting. I believe as many as one hundred white men did not get a chance to vote, as the negroes so completely disgusted them and so generally surrounded the polls.

"It would have been well for the white race every where in the United States to have witnessed the proceedings of the negroes on the election day. It would have been an era from which they could have dated their independence of all future political alliances with ignorance, vice, stupidity and malignity."

It frequently happened, however, during the election, that the "substitute" would forget either the "tenger" or the "beneth and frequently the occupation, and then the commissioners would "smell a mice" and drive the substitute away from the polls.—

NEGRO VOTING.—The incidents of the late NEGRO VOTING.—The incidents of the late election farce in this city will afford for a long time to come subjects of conversation and discussion. They are at once anusing, and ludicrous, and alarming. One negro in the crowd around the court house held up an independent ticket, (printed on blue paper), and cried out in a loud voice: "No land! no and cried out in a loud voice: "No land! no

A crowd of negroes from the southern part of the count were met at the river by an agent of the Hadicals here, who put in their hands the red tickets, and told them they must not let anybody take them away from them, as each ticket was good for a piece of land. The poor devils concluded if that was the fact they had better hold on to their tickets, and speedily returned home to see where their lots were located and enter upon possession. One fellow, when his ticket was given him, asked what he was to do with it. One fellow, when his ticket was given min, asked what he was to do with it. He was told to put it in the box. "Is dat all?" he queried. "Yes," "Nuthin more, marster?" "No." "Is dat votin?" "Yes," "I thought weit-known respectable colored blacksmith, residing in that neighborhood, had voted for Col. A Good Love Story.—An Ohlo paper tells the following novel story: A young couple planned an elopement, the girl descended from her room on the traditional ladder, but at the gate they were met by the father of the girl and a minister, by whom the young couple were escorted to the parlor where, to their surprise they found all their relatives collected for the marriage ceremonies, which took place at once. It was a neat paternal freak, but not near as neat as that of a "fond parient" we know of. He heard his daughter and her fellow plan an elope-ment. The next day the old man waited upon the young one, and addressed him in this manner: "You're a fine, brave youth, and I don't object to you as a son-in-law. Here's a hundred dellars to aid in the clope nent. May you live happily in the same house, and may no accident occur to throw the least shade on the sunshine of your life. All I request is, that you clope with my daughter—she's a mighty nice girl, you know, but somehow her mother and I could never travel smoothly with her, we don't know her good points— elope with her to such a distance that she won't return to her loving father and mother

There was an elopement that evening of one. The young man was unaccompanied. He thought everything couldn't be right when the old cock was so anxious to get rid of the girl. The father looks upon this act
