CONKEY & SHANNON,

gola, N. Y. The express train from this city, which generally leaves about 10 o'clock, had been delayed some two hours, and did not start until after 12.) An attempt was being made to retrieve the lost time, and the train most of the way was run at a more rapid rate than customary. On leaving Angola, the last truck of the rear car was thrown off the track, it is said, by a defective frog, and passed along the road in this condition a considerable distance. An attempt was made to stop the train, but it had attained such momentum as to render the brakes of slight avail. At one of the most dangerous'points on the road, where there is a bridge and embankment fifty feet high, the rear car suddenly leaped into the air, turned a complete somersault, then rolling over on its side landed at the bottom of the ravine. The jolt of the car caused the one just ahead to jump from the track, and it rolled down the em bankment on the opposite side, a few rods cast The rest of the train was undamaged, and ran along quite a distance before it could be mass into the end which first struck the ground. In falling, the stoves scattered their burning material over the car, and almost in an instant the whole car was enveloped in flames. Only five persons, out of thirty-five EGANT SLEEPING CARS or forty in the car, escaped, the rest being mostly burned to ashes in the fire. The groans, and shricks, and supplications for help are described by eye-witnesses to have been tearful, beyond any power of the imaginstion. The other car was more fortunate, in that it did not take on fire, but the damage to life and limb was terrible. At least a dozen persons were killed, and nearly all the rest of the inmates were more or less injured. several having since died of their wounds.

At the time of writing it is impossible to give the exact number lost, if, indeed it shal ever be ascertained. There were probably not less than fifty in all, and the list o younded was nearly the same. Among-the killed were Messrs. W. H. Ross and J. B. Haywood, of North East ; J. P. Hayward, of State Line ; S. Stewart, of Corry ; and Jaspar Fuller and wife, of Spartansburg. These are believed to be all from this immediate section, though other names-may yet be re ported. The train contained probably fifty passengers from Eric city and county, but most of them being in the front cars, escaped uniniured. As soon as the portion of the train that was not thrown from the track could be stopped, the passengers hastened back and cussing it in favor of one side or the other did everything in their power to rescue the sufferers and relieve their misery. Whole Tickets, $12; Haives, $6; and Gar-ters, $3.

No more acceptable and appropriate pres-an be mule to a mother, wire, husband or fa-r than a ticket in the Kentucky State Lott. Now that the holidays are so near at hand-eason when it seems almost a duty impo Now that the billdys are so near at hand-the senson when it seems almost a duty imposed by the custom of our forefathers for many gen-erations, as well us a pleasure, to confer gifts from loving hands-it seems peculiarly fitting to give presents that possess some actual value. It has long been acknowledged by all who are informed that the Kentucky State Lottery of-fers greater inducements to purchasers of tick-ets than any other legalized lottery in the world. A magnificent single number drawing will take place on the 31st of December, which offers un-rivalled inducements to purchasers holding tickets. Parties who are willing, by the invest-ment of a few dollars, to compete for some one of the splendid prizes offered should lose no time in applying for tickets, $20,650 will be dis-tributed. The capital prize is $50,600, insuring a handsome fortune to the lucky holder of the corresponding ticket. aul-Sm.
