Farm for Sale.

THE UNDERSIGNED offers for sale his valuable farm, on the Kuli road, in Harbor Creek township, one mile south of the Colt Statton road, and eight miles from Erle. It contains fifty-five acres and eighty perches, all improved and in the highest state of cultivation. The land is equal to the very best in that section of the courty. The buildings comprise a 2 story frame house with 1½ story kitchen and good cellar under the whole; wood house and work house; 2 barns, each 30x5 feet; a shed 70 feet long with stable at the end; and all the necessary outbuildings. A first class well of soft water, which never fails, is at the kitchen door. There is no rectard with 10 apple trees, all grafted, and bearing; and an abundance of almost every other kind of fruit grown in this neighborhood. The only reason why I wish to sell is that I am going West to embark in another occupation. Terms made known by applying to me on the premises, or to Hon. Elijah labbitt, Attorney at-Law, Erle, Pa.

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases bac Now, reader, seit-acuse, venereal diseases bad-ly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs, of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defily cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs, of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the facenone of your downess tooks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflamed by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitutions, but also will not only ruin their constitutions, but also hose they do busines with or for.

We were sitting on one of those round, little, pretty, green hills, in a beautiful triangular nook of the sunny side; no one nor nothing stirring about us; the sun making a network of gold and silver upon the breasts of the daisy, the primrose and many other flowers of various hues, which nature seems to bestow on the hills and valleys of that re-markable island. There was the sky-lark soaring high as it was singing its beautiful airs to the wild comets in their course, and chanting his notes to the breeze as he ascends until completely lost in the clear blue sky. There also might have been seen the thrush and blackbird warbling, each in their turn their bold notes as if prompted by some feas-able agency, to attract the attention of the listener; there was the robin, the linnet, the goldfinch, and many others darting to and from the thickly set branches of the lily blossomed white thorn joining in chorus, and Kilkee is a bathing place of fashionable resort—it is the Newport of the British Islands. The season opens in June and closes in October. The first families of Europe have their bathing-boxes, cyster, stews, private colleges pricepies and placeting grounds there. their bathing-boxes, oyster stows, private cottages, pic-nics and pleasure grounds there. Viewing it from the pretty balcony into which we were shown by an amiable, slim boy belonging to the hotel, it appeared to be a compact little city, cross-barred with nice streets, roofed with bluish slate. There were church steeples and belfries, too, and tufts of shining green follage breaking through those blue slates, breaking through them here and there, and everywhere, and beyond and above them, but close to us it seemed were some flash about them as silvery as themselves, utterly regardless of the noise and buffetings of the boat. As we neared the landings all along the banks, a little back from the river, along the banks, a little back from the river, grandly overlooking and with precipitous bold cliffs of gray granite serving as an uplifted shield to everything, the high mountain in the distance towers and spreads its ample wall, the face of which is deeply furrowed, and the upper line is broken, or pointed, or rounded into tablets, suggestive of gigantic gates or monstrous headstones in them, but close to us it seemed were some mountains or hillocks, brown steeps cloven into valleys, and throwing out their heights, abrupt; and gray, in the deep shadow of which the smoke of the town rolled up slowof gigantic gates or monstrous headstones in a grave-yard of some ancient age. In the full blaze of the sinking sun we head up against the landing, and making our way up we found ourselves in the bustling town of Kilrush, a town of about six thousand inhabitants, and consisting of some fine churches, and large stores, well filled with goods, dry, soft, and liquid; some well proportioned hotels, and many residences of "charming beauty. After taking a full view of the town we proceeded to the hotel where we partook of a hearty supper. In this place, in the society of the hospitable gentlemen who have made it their home, we spent the evening most agreeably; notwithstanding that one of the citizens, a convivial old English politician of imperfect articulations, was distressingly importunate in his entracties that James O'Donnell should favor the company

"Do you smoke Senorita?" said a gentle-man, who discovered M'me —, of the Ital-ian Opera, refreshing herself in that way, on her travels from Boston to New York. The answer had a good deal of Tuscan naivete, "Yes," responded the lady, "I smokes, and I drinks, and I does everything yot is wick-ed!" A SLANDER.—There is a story of a celebrated French clergyman, who, on delivering a sermon on the duty of wives, said: "I see opposite me in this congregation a woman who has been guilty of the sin of disobedience to her husband; and in order to point her out to universal condemnation, I will fling my breviary at her head." He lifted the book, as if in the act of throwing it, and every female head was instantly ducked.

After partaking freely of a hearty meal, consisting of bread, butter, tea and eggs, (the latter to which we showed no mercy.) we took our seats on a neatly trimmed side-car and proceeded to Pella, the residence of Admiral Studdert, a short distance outside the town. The long and gallant career of this man is intimately connected with some of the most brilliant and difficult operations of the British navy, to which he was attached, and with which he was connected for many years. He must keep indelibly fixed in his mind that honesty is the best and only policy that will gain the confidence of the commu-nity. Sharp practice is a species of dishonesty which can never bring more than temporary success. There are many who at all times are ready to applaud it as something smart; yet they would refrain from having business relations with him who practices it, for fear that advantages might be taken of them. Morality is the true basis upon which to rest the foundation of a good character. It is solid, substantial—imperishable.

AN OLD LADY IN A BAD FIX.-A very good widow, who was looked up to by the congregation to which she belonged as an example of piety, contrived to bring her conscience to terms for one little indulgence. She loved porter; and one day, just as she had received half a dozen bottles from the man who usually brought her the comfortable beverage, she—oh, horror!—discovered two of the grave elders of the church approaching her door. She ran the man out of the road we were greatly struck with the quick intelligence, activity, hardihood and bright looks of the Irish boys. Another bottle popped off, and the porter came stealing out from under the bed curtain. "Oh, dear me!" said she, "I had forgot; it is my yeast! Here, Prudence, come and take these bottles of yeast away!"

The Randolph (Mo.) Citizen, publishes some interesting reminiscences of Gen. Grant, one of which we copy below:

The scene was an imposing one, to see those children, attired in rags, with sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks, offering fervent supplications to the Most High for the deliverance of their father from the dangers—who was then working in the field for their scanty support—would penetrate most keenly through the feelings of the hardest heart, while reflecting on the miseries of those little ones, who might have comfortable and happy homes were it.
