The Democratic party begins the campaign under the most auspicious circumstances with a confidence in success, an enthusiasm for the cause, and a vigorous self reliance that has not been experienced in many years. The late elections show conclusively that a vast majority of the nation are ready to espouse our standard if we only prove faithful to our creed, and continue to stand firmly by the interests of the country.

But to make victory certain something more is necessary than mere dependence upare in perfect health? You never hear such on the truth of our principles. In the flush of self-confidence, we are apt to forget what er afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always politic and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—

One good journal in a family will do more in a strenuous towards moulding its political conviction, than all other influences, and fifty copies circulated in any locality for six months will accomplish more efficient service than a dozen costly mass meetings.

.The Democratic party has never displayed that zeal in supporting its press that it needed, and to that cause, as much 'as anything else, may be attributed its misfortunes during the last ten years. In all sections of the country-even in the midst of the strongest Democratic localities-the Radical press is more liberally sustained than ours, and in many places the contrast is so great as al-

The time has come for these things to be changed, and for the Democratic party to enter upon a new method of warfare. Our papers ought to be spread broadcast over the land, and take the place of those which are now defiling the minds of the young and filling them with wrong ideas of Republican liberty. Our public men should avail themselves of every opportunity that offers to impress the importance of these views, on the attention of the masses. Our local leaders should make a point of devoting whatever spare time they can towards strengthening their county organs by procuring their friends. and neighbors' patronage. The low price of TWO DOLLARS per year at which the Observer is now offered. if paid in advance, ought to ensure the doub-

offer to take six month subscriptions at ONE DOLLAR in advance, with the privilege of ommencing at any period desired, and of ontinuing the paper at the same rate for the balance of the year if desired.

Now is the time to begin the work, before the spring operations set in, and while voters have time to read, and reflect over the facts presented to them. His suc-cesses have been won by a prodigal expendi-ture of his soldiers. In his last and greatest campaign he pitted an enormous army against a small one, and sacrificed twice as many men as General Lee had under his command. It is not justice but adulation, to praise him as if he had conquered an army as large as his own. It is not justice but an affront to humanity to give him as much credit as if he had achieved the same result without such wholesale sacrifices of men.

The following is an authentic statement of the respective torces and losses of General Grant and Lee between the Rapidan and the James: Grant on assuming command May 4, 1864, had of effective men besides the reserve, when he crossed the Rapidan, 125,000, Lee at the same date had an effective force of 52,000.

If the Army of the Potomac. mac met terrible obstacles in its route to Richmond, it was more the fault of Grant than of Lee. It was Grant who allowed that route to be prescribed to his army. And this shows a weakness in his character, a subserviency to politicians, which, now, must not pass unnoticed. A movement on Richmond, by water, was the obvious, easy way to reach it. Grant gave his decided opinion in force is 1821. to reach it. Grant gave his decided opinion in favor of it (Swinton, page 408.) He was turned from it by the politicians. They did not want him to carry out McClellan's plan. He yielded to them, and the result is known. Every step on the overland route proved it a bloody, disastrous blunder. After twelve days, wester of life at Spottsylvania Cront twenty or fifty copies for free distribution day's waste of life at Spottsylvania, Grant wherever there is likely to be a vote gained, marched away from those impenetrable lines; his loss there and in the Wilderness was more than 40,000 men. 13,000 fell in as fruitless an attack at Cold Harbor. 117,000 men was the total loss entailed by Gran's subserviency to the politicians, in taking their route to Richmond. When he at last in greater danger than from Early's march on it in July, 1864. We recur to these things in no spirit of de-that military genius which attains great re sults with small means, or of that "headwork that spares human life." For the necessary effusion of blood in war, the General is not answerable; for the unskillful waste of life the is responsible—at least in the estimate of his claims and his abilities. We rank Grant the is responsible—at least in the estimate of his claims and his abilities. We rank Grant below Scott, in all the essentials of a great commander. If Grant is to be classified with other generals, it must be with the Russian Suwarrow, or the Oriental conquerors who thought any advantage cheaply purchased, if it cost only the blood of their men. His capacity is limited in military affairs; he has no capacity at all for civil affairs. His personal habits are disreputable. There is no man more unfit to be President of the United States. Not only is he "unaccustomed to public speaking;" he is unaccustomed to speaking or thinking of anything serious; he is wholly ignorant and carcless of the principles of free government; he is a mere tool in the hands of the clique of politicians who have him in charge. He let them formally put forth his opinion as "the General of the Army" to influence the High Court to convict the President. "A General of the Army" to influence the High Court to convict the President. "A General of the Administration of civil justice, can know little of the government and laws under which he lives, and is surely not to be trusted with the defense and execution of them as President of the United States.

Wendell Phillips' Letter on his Intem-

date?" Mr. Senator Wilson undertakes to answer that question. His answer is, he although the Consent when Grant crossed the Rapidan, tottering when Grant crossed the Rapidan, tottering and well-nigh spent by three years exertion in a strenuous and unequal struggle. It is certainly just to credit Grant with the capture of Lee; but there is a debit as well as a little of Lee; but there is a little of Lee; but the little of Lee; bu never saw Grant drunk. If any shrewa lawcannot and dares not deny that he has heard from trustworthy sources of this public drunken exposure of his candidate. Mr. Wilson's course on this occasion is precisely the same he pursued a year ago, when, hav-ing originated a report as to the drunken-ness of a Massachusetts Congressman, and afraid to meet the consequences, he equivo when all that Congressman sconstituents admit his intoxication, it is the probable that Mr. Wilson would think it worth while to shuffle. If Grant as Aresident, should show himself, in Mr. Dodge's felicitous language, "fully capable of filling Andy Johnson's place," drunkenness and all; or when Grant is thrown aside, because he had been President, or is not needed for that office, we shall hear the absolute truth about his vice even from Henry Wilson. Now when the temperance body need his knowledge, he obeys that same law of timid self-preservation which shocked his admirers when it carried him selfishly into the Know-nothing party to save his place. We call this letter equivo cation. It is a mild phrase considering the vast peril, and the value the writer professes to set on temperance. We should be amply justified in describing it by a much stronger term. And the constant repetition of this offense by this public servant seems almost to call for such fraud descriptions.

In view of this element in his career, the access of Mr. Wilson is one of the most alarming results of Democratic institutions sad evidence of how often they throw worth and evidence of high.

Wendell Phillips' Letter on his Intemperate Habits.

Wendell Phillips, the avant courier of Radicalism, has printed the accusation of drunkenness against Grant, time after time, whilst Anna Dickinson, the Radical lecturess, has made it before a dozen audiences. We append a letter written by Wendell Phillips, copied from the Anti-Slavery Standard, of April 11, upon this subject:
