A Funny Story-Based on Truth.

Here is a funny story, which Judge Scofield must have overlooked, or he would by this time have added it to his humorous collection : "Once up-on a time there was a nice man, who lived in a town by the side of a riv-cr, at the foot of a great hill. He was a Messrs. Hornish and Wilson stumped the sharp sort of a chap, with a cheek like brass,

Now, this man was elected to go to a place called Washing-ton, where the big-bugs of the na-tion' met to make laws and steal the peo-ple's Mr. Hornish was not elected, but he won a mo-ney. While there, these law-ma-kers thought it would be a good thing to vote them-selves two thous-and dollars a year more pay-than they had be-fore. Now the peo-ple's purses had been bled very much, they were load ed down with taxes, and this nice man knew they would not like to pay him and the others two thous-and dol-lars a year more for work which they knew there were plen-ty will-ing to do much cheap-cr. So he be-thought him-self it would be a snug trick to stay away when the vote was ta-ken, so that he could get the pay, and es-cape all the blame of the peo-ple. Now, when he went back home, the peo-ple ask-ed him a bout this far tra pay, and the tears came into his eyes originally invested.
