a fair one on which to base an estimate of population. In older settled localities the proportion varies from one to six to one in seven, but that rate is admitted by all good judges to be too low for this section of the State owing to causes familiar to most of our readers. Presuming the former ratio to be correct, it gives Erie county the following

WE fully agree with a cotemporary that if a drunken man could, in the midst of his inebriety, be made conscious of what a conemptible fool he makes of himself, it would be apt to at least shame him into moderation if not in a total rejection of the intoxicating cup. THE Meadville Republican is jubilant over the fact that, notwithstanding its scurrilous article on our Irish population, a large portion of them voted the Republican ticket.
