THE Cheap Transportation Convention at Richmond, Va., on the 2d inst. favored a resolution asking government aid to build the Southern Pacific Railroad.

GOVERNOR CHAMBERLAIN, of South Carolina, was inaugurated with great eclat on the 1st inst. He pledged himself to reform in his inaugural address to such a degree that people who complained against him are silent and hopeful.

THE American Cheap Transportation Convention met at Richmond, Va., on the 1st inst. The noteworthy question before the convention was that the "general government should control the through lines of travel and transportation."

THE Democrats who have control of things in Arkansas, have an interesting and beautiful proposition on hand. It is to repudiate $15,000,000 of present indebtedness, sell $2,500,000 in bonds at 50 cents on the dollar, and run the State two years without taxation! In other words the Garland Government is merely organized to rob. The reason given for this is, that the debt is held at the North, and that it refused to pay the Confederate debt.—Pittsburg Gazette.

THE colored men who propose to hold a convention at Washington to memorialize Congress upon the civil rights bill have sent circulars to every State, and the responses already received indicate a large attendance. Besides sending deputations to wait upon Congress and urge the passage of the bill, the convention will appoint a committee to call upon the President and ask him to urge its passage. Those having the management of this convention are in favor of the mixed-school features of the bill.

It appears that the vote cast for the State Temperance ticket in some of the counties was not included in the table which we published last week. The whole vote has not yet been received, but it is estimated that the aggregate will foot up somewhere between six and eight thousand, which would have triumphantly elected all the Republican candidates. The men who voted this ticket, and thus indirectly supported the Democratic nominees, will soon be beseeching Republican Senators and Representatives to prevent the repeal of the Local Option Law. The public will await the issue with interest.—West Chester Republican.

YESTERDAY was the time designated for the transit of "Venus." At this writing no despatches have been received from the California coast, the nearest point from here where observations have been made relative to the passage of the planet "Venus" between the earth and the sun. The last time that the amorously named planet passed between the "King of day" and our own mother earth was in the year 1769, more than one hundred years ago. Astronomers estimate that in eight years from this date another transit will take place. After that there will be a lapse of one hundred and twenty-two years before the next transit. The objects of the civilized governments in fitting out expeditions to observe the transit is to get an accurate measurement of the distance to the sun, and other distances, such as to fixed stars, &c., all very important to civilized people.

TEMPERANCE people have already commenced to realize the fact that the Local Option Law will be repealed by the incoming Legislature this winter. Republicans in that body are under no political obligation whatever to oppose its repeal. Whatever legislation has been extended to the temperance cause has been extended by Republican legislators. They did not view the temperance question in a political aspect; they viewed it as a moral question, and as such they gave it all the aid they could consistent with the spirit of the times. Temperance people have seen proper to drag the question from its moral plain, and make it a political question. They have gone after false goals; they have placed the drum in the secondary place, and officers of State and Legislature in the first place. Having set up their standard as a political party, as against all other parties, they have no claim whatever on the Republican or any other party. It is true that in an indirect way they gave aid to the Democratic party. If that party chooses to give them aid and comfort, it is their business. If the Local Option Law is repealed temperance people may appeal to Governor Hartranft to veto the repealing bill. But what will they say if Governor Hartranft refers to the vote of the late election and states the fact that here are six to eight thousand votes that were drawn away from the Republican party when it was doing what it could to further the temperance cause outside of politics? Temperance people have no political claims on Governor Hartranft. They cannot appeal to him consistently on moral grounds, for they ignored the moral phase of the question and turned it into a political question.

A DESPATCH reports Charley Ross in Chester, Illinois.

A Federal Union of all the churches or sects of Presbyterianism is being attempted under auspices that seem to warrant the belief in its success. A convention for the purpose has assembled at New York, in which all the various denominations are represented by delegates, and the feeling seems to be harmonious and fraternal. It is not proposed to assume authority or jurisdiction, but to organize what may gradually develop into an associative feeling and action among these churches, and to facilitate connection and communication between them. This is part of the general movement looking to a Pan-Presbyterian Convention, but it may be regarded in a larger sense as drifting toward fraternity and evangelization among Protestants of all denominations. Many of the ablest minds in all these churches look to such union as a necessity of the age.—North American.

A GREAT land and emigration scheme will be before Congress the ensuing session, asking for a charter, with a nominal capital of ten millions, to provide for the establishment of distant colonies and to make regulations for their government, under the supervision of an agent, the company to pay the government a bonus of one per cent. of its net income. It is not stated whether the colonies are to be foreign or domestic, but the idea appears to be derived from the grand career of the British East India Company, and would probably be found to relate to some distant territory not belonging to the Republic.—North American.

At Newcastle, Del., on the morning of the 2nd inst., the jury in the case of Aaron K. Woodward charged with the murder of the boy Lukens, who was stealing chestnuts, rendered a verdict of not guilty. The killing was not deemed.

The State Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry will meet in Williamsport in January next. Over 1,300 delegates will be present.

A Troy, N. Y., despatch, under date of Nov. 29, says: A most horrible story is current here of a singular and barbarous murder. Recently a carpenter named Elias Williams began the erection of a wooden frame house in the midst of a forest, in a wild and unrequented district, about sixteen miles north of Welltown, Hamilton county. He hired George Smith to assist him in the work of construction. One day, after they had drunk many times from a jug of liquor, the two men began despatched to quarrel, and finally were involved in a deadly fight. Williams, in the course of the struggle, threw Smith over a wooden saw-horse, and with a hand saw, which he held in the hand, sawed off the head of his antagonist, severing it entirely from the body. His rage cooled, remorse came after it, and he followed his victim into the dim land of retribution by cutting the great vein of his own throat with the saw, falling a corpse beside the remains of Smith. A lad named Grant witnessed the awful tragedy, and conveyed the news two miles to the people who reside nearest the scene of the crime. Williams was a married man, and Smith a bachelor. They were both buried the next day.

The case of the Rev. John S. Glendon, before the Presbytery of Jersey City, was concluded on the 2nd inst., and resulted in a verdict of acquittal on all charges.

Seventy-five buildings were destroyed by fire at Karns City, Butler county, Pa., on the 2nd inst., including the post-office and two hotels. Estimated loss, $100,000.

On noon on the 3d inst., a whole family were found poisoned in bed at Carbondale. The victims are a man named Ludwig, his wife, and a child about a year old. Some of the neighbors shortly before noon, seeing that none of the family were astir, forced open the door, and on going up stairs beheld a horrible spectacle. The features of the man and wife were distorted by the throes of death, while the infant was at its mother's breast unconscious of the awful fate of its parents. Medical aid was promptly called, and after the application of restoratives the husband and wife rallied a little, but the latter died within an hour. The husband struggled until this evening, when he also died. The infant still lingers in pain. When the husband was partially restored to consciousness, he said that somebody gave himself and wife a draught from a bottle and they both drank it. He could not be induced to say any more. Up to a late hour this evening no clue to the mystery could be obtained.

The trial of Alexander C. Goss, indicted for perjury in the case of Eliza W. Goss against the Mutual Life Inurance Company of New York, tried in May, 1873, was commenced in the United States District Court at Baltimore, before Judge Giles, on the 3rd inst. Mrs. Goss was to recover an insurance policy on the life of her husband, Winfield S. Goss, for whose subsequent murder Udderzook was recently executed at West Chester, Pa.

Hiram Smith was executed at Watertown, N. Y., on the 4th inst., for complicity in the murder of Charles Wrenham, who was killed January 6, 1873. He protested his innocence to the last in a long speech, calling upon God to witness the truth, and died without flinching.

On Tuesday evening of last week, as Joseph Chambers, of New Garden, Chester county, was endeavoring to put a fresh cow in the stable, the animal attacked him and gored him in the lower part of the abdomen, tearing the flesh sufficiently to expose to view the bowels, making a wound about ten inches in length across the abdomen and loins.

A large force of men, under the immediate supervision of Superintendent Creighton, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, appeared at Powers Run, this State, on the 4th inst., and cut the pipe of the Columbia Conduit Company where it was laid under the track of the West Pennsylvania Railroad, thus putting a stop to the present operations on the part of the pipe company.

A special despatch to the Louisville Courier Journal says that three negroes were taken from the jail at Morgantown, Ky., on the night of the 1st inst., by a band of masked men and hanged to a tree near the town. Uniontown, in the same county, was visited by a destructive conflagration some weeks since, and these three negroes had been arrested, charged with having caused the fire. They subsequently confessed their crime, giving as an excuse that the proprietor of the distillery in which the fire was started had turned the mother of one of the negroes out of the house in which she was living. The "Regulars" were mounted and it is thought that they came from Uniontown.

Mrs. Daniel Logan, wife of a wealthy farmer of Montgomery, Hamilton county, Ohio, weighing 250 pounds, was instantly killed on the night of the 3rd inst., by accidentally falling out of bed, breaking her neck in the fall.

ONE Wednesday night, a few weeks ago, a female fashionably attired entered the store of Mr. John Koons, in Cherryville, Northampton county, after he had closed up, and representing herself as the wife of a gentleman in New York with whom he did business, requested to be allowed to remain all night at Mr. Koons' house, she having a great dislike to staying at the hotel. Her husband, she said, had intended to meet her there, but had been detained in Easton. Mr. Koons readily granted the request of the lady. He lives with his family over the store. A colored man in the employ of Mr. Koons, who had heard the woman's story, but was suspicious of her, and went up stairs and secreted himself under the bed where he knew she must sleep.—When she entered the room and had locked the door she took out of a satchel she carried two revolvers, a large knife, and a long piece of rope, and laid them on the stand. The negro also made the discovery that the supposed woman was a man disguised in female apparel. The negro was badly frightened, but was obliged to remain quiet where he had hidden.

About midnight a peculiar whistle was sounded outside. The man on the bed sprang to the floor and went to the window and cautiously raised it. He leaned out of the window, and was evidently giving directions to some one below. The colored man thought it was now time for him to act. He crept noiselessly from under the bed, and creeping up to the man unheeded, he seized him by the feet, and rising up with him, threw him headlong to the ground below, a distance of twenty feet. He then shouted for Mr. Koons, and peering out of the window saw two men pick up the apparently lifeless body of their companion and carry it into the road, where a wagon was in waiting guarded by another man. They placed the body in the wagon, and then all rode swiftly away. Nothing has been seen or heard of them up to this time. But for the sagacity and courage of the negro, a heavy robbery would have resulted.—Ex.

A MR. FRANK POTTS, of Warwick, Chester county, called an evening or two ago on a physician at near Pughtown, and said: "Doctor, should any one call upon you this evening to have his arm dressed and a ball extracted from it, you can take it for granted that I put that ball there. The fellow attempted to rob me on the highway." Mr. Potts drove off, and was scarcely out of sight, when the highwayman came to get his arm dressed, and to the surprise of the doctor he found him to be a neighbor.

ONE of the most extraordinary elopements lately recorded is the main topic of gossip among the people of the city for a sewing-machine company, placed his wife and two children—one three years and the other ten months old—in a boarding-house in Caldwell, suburb of Newark, and, in order to be nearer to his place of business, procured accommodations for himself in the house of a Mrs. Smith, who keeps a boarding-house on Snyder street, in Orange proper. While residing there he became acquainted with the handsome wife of a well-to-do carpenter named George Roach, who resided in the neighborhood. His attentions to her finally became so marked as to elicit unfavorable comment, and Roach forbade him to see her. Tuesday afternoon last Haines visited his wife in her Caldwell home. He told her that he desired her to live in the same house with himself, and had made arrangements for her accommodation in the house of Mrs. Smith. He wished her to move down on the following day, and in order that the labor of moving might be as light as possible for her, he would take their two children with him to the house that afternoon. Mrs. Haines gathered and packed up the clothing of the little ones, and with them and their baggage he went away. When Mrs. Haines went to Mrs. Smith's house on the following day she was astonished to learn that neither her husband nor the children had been at the house since his visit to Caldwell, and that no preparations had been made for her entertainment. Bewildered and unable to understand what this meant, she wandered back to the Orange Railroad depot and met Mr. Roach, who was in a high state of excitement. He informed her that her husband and the children, accompanied by Mrs. Roach and a woman named Rose Merrill, had gone to New York on a Morris and Essex train on Tuesday night. Neither Mrs. Roach nor Mr. Haines has been since seen in Orange. Roach armed himself with a six-shooter and started out in search of his wife. He declared that he will shoot Haines on sight.

The fact that Rose Merrill accompanied the flying party indicates another elopement. A man named Herndon, living in East Orange, some time ago disappeared from his home. His wife had been previously afflicted with heart disease, and the shock produced by her husband's flight had brought her to the point of death. Rose Merrill and Herndon are said to have been very intimate, and it is supposed that she is on her way with Haines to join him in Canada, whither, it is said, all the parties have fled. The affair has created a great sensation in the two Oranges, where all the parties are well known.

ABOUT ten days ago a young man of prepossessing appearance made the acquaintance of a lady in Camden, who is the mother of several children, and who, until the advent of the modern Don Juan, lived very happily with a devoted husband. The personal attractions of the young Philadelphia proved stronger than her fidelity to her spouse, and at last, yielding to his solicitations, she left husband and children, and came to this city, where her paramour found a quiet boarding house, in which she would, as he fondly hoped, be safe from pursuit. Had he taken equal pains to conceal himself the result might have been different. He, however, engaged a room at the Merchants' Hotel, on Fourth street, only seeing his innamorata at rare intervals. Last evening two young, well-dressed, and evidently cultured ladies, who afterwards proved to be the sisters of the frail wife and mother, entered the Merchants' Hotel and inquired for the young gentleman alluded to. They were informed by the clerk that he was in his room and that they could see him in the parlor. Thither they bent their steps, and soon after their unsuspecting victim appeared. The scene suddenly changed. Two pretty faces which to the clerk had been all smiles suddenly became darkened with frowns. Two little right hands which a few moments before calmly reposed in their muffs unexpectedly drew from some dark recess two Colt's revolvers. The young man was abruptly collared. The revolvers suddenly came into unpleasant contact with his head, and he was ordered in cool, determined tones, to lead the way to the house in which the Camden lady was concealed. For a moment he hesitated, but the cold chambers of two revolvers stared him in the face, and he reluctantly left the hotel with his fair captors, and went with them to the house in which he had placed his victim. When the brave little women found themselves face to face with their fallen sister, they let go their hold and allowed a sadder and wiser man to return to his hotel. The Camden lady returned to her home last evening.—Phila. Press, Dec. 2.

On Wednesday night of last week, Mr. Elias Danner, who resides on the Walnut Bottom road, about four miles west of Carlisle, in Dickinson township, heard a noise among his ducks in the yard. On looking out, he observed a man in the act of "bunching" several ducks in a fence corner. Mr. D. challenged the man, whereupon he shot the fence and took to his heels. A shot fired after him by Mr. D. failed to cut off his retreat. Mr. D. then procured the assistance of his brother, and followed the thief on horseback, who ran down the road, jumped into a wagon, and drove off. He attempted to elude pursuit by turning into all the by-roads and lanes he could find; but his pursuers were not to be thus baffled, who kept following, and finally cornered him in a lane, near the farm of Mr. Evans, about two miles southwest of Carlisle, and captured him. The man and wagon were brought to Carlisle about 1 o'clock on Thursday morning, and he was lodged in jail until morning, when he was taken to the office of Justice Shryock, where he gave the name of A. H. Menzer. After hearing of the case, and in default of the required bail, Menzer was again committed for his appearance at court. In the afternoon, however, some of his relatives appeared on the scene of trouble, who promptly entered the required bail, and Menzer was allowed his liberty again. The wagon which he drove at the time of his capture contained forty-two head of geese and two ducks. It was at first supposed that this, too, was purloined property, but there being no evidence to support this supposition, Menzer was allowed to take his property and dispose of it as he saw fit.—Carlisle Volunteer, 28th ult.

MRS. F. H. TAYLOR, of Beaver, while perusing the letters in her husband's pocket the other day—the husband being asleep—discovered a letter in which were given the details of a proposed elopement with a young Miss of twenty years, daughter of a boarding-house keeper. The elopement did not come off, but Mr. Taylor's hair did.

JOHN C. WRIGHT. Mifflintown, September 9, 1874-4f

TO THE PUBLIC. I have just opened out, in my store-room on Main street, in the borough of Patterson, a new stock of Men's and Boys' Clothing, Overcoats, Shirts, Drawers, Wauases, Hats, Caps, Gloves, Stockings, &c. AMERICAN WATCHES AT CITY PRICES, JEWELRY, &c. The best lot of BOOTS & SHOES ever brought to this county: Men's Boots $3.00 to $4.50, best heavy top sole—warranted; Gait Boots, boys $5.00, men's $4.00; also full line of Ladies' and Children's Gait Ladies' Shoes $1.50 to $2.50—best Morocco. I am selling Goods 20 per cent. less than the credit prices. I am selling for cash, country produce, or note at 50 to 60 days' discount.

I have lost in eight years' business over $5,000 by keeping books and credit, and made money besides; and now I am determined that those who pay shall not be compelled to pay such prices that the loss sustained in consequence of those who fail to pay may be covered; and consequently I can sell 20 per cent. less than goods in my line have ever been sold for in the county. Call and see for yourselves.

WANTED—500 bushels good potatoes, 100 bushels onions, also, two tons of dry wheat straw, for which I will pay $10 per ton, delivered. J. B. M. TODD, Patterson, Oct. 7, 1874.

JUNIATA VALLEY BANK. CAPITAL, $50,000. GEORGE JACOBS, President. T. VAN IRVIN, Cashier. DIRECTORS: Jerome N. Thompson, John Balsbach, John J. Patterson, H. H. Boehlert, George Jacobs, J. W. Frank, Amos G. Bousall.

United States Securities, Bonds, &c., bought and sold. Gold and Silver bought at highest rates. Deposits received, collections made, drafts on the principal cities, and a
