

OCEAN LINES.

O' wide the sea before me,
And drear the waste around!
The angry heavens o'er us All day have darkly frown'd.

My Lily-of-the-Valley.

"Peep!" It was a cheery, almost childish voice, well known and loved by me; and yet I started in half fright, for I was not alone.

story opens, and greeted me with her innocent "So," she faintly articulated, "your amusement and 'nonsense' for this summer are falling in love with an unsightly, middle-aged country girl! Quite delightful!"

"I was in the 'jinking country,' some twenty miles or more beyond the little valley where Fred and I had summered before," she said, "and toward that point I turned my face."

Then disaster came and the house suddenly fell, leaving me adrift; and I was preparing to return home when I was offered an advantageous position in a foreign house, a member of which, I was courteously informed, had "subscribed the masterly manner of which I had managed the affairs of the branch which had been entrusted to me."

"I was in the 'jinking country,' some
twenty miles or more beyond the little
valley where Fred and I had summered
before," she said, "and toward that
point I turned my face."

Charles Warren Hodson writes:
There are houses in Florence, many of them, that look as if they were built of the stage scenery of some dismantled theater. They are, however, the work of modern art, as severely simple in their proportions as a packing-box, yet it was so touched up by the brush and sometimes by the hammer, that the balcony, pillars, seemed to start out from the front of it.

Men and women receive in this life much of what they deserve. It is like a looking-glass, this big world; grin and smile at it and it will smile back—scowl and frown at it and it will frown back.

Sham Hodson.
Charles Warren Hodson writes:
There are houses in Florence, many of
them, that look as if they were built of
the stage scenery of some dismantled theater.

Men and women receive in this life
much of what they deserve. It is like
a looking-glass, this big world; grin and
smile at it and it will smile back—scowl
and frown at it and it will frown back.

not conclude that this field, however small it was the field for her.
The well-known brothers, Jacob and William Grimm, were exceedingly attached to each other, and had no desire to be married. But it was arranged proper by their friends that one should become a husband, and Jacob being the elder, it was agreed that he should marry the younger, and so the marriage was consummated, but soon found he was in love, and wanted the lady himself.

Let the Babies Dig in the Dirt.
We once asked an old Winnetquo squaw how it was that she cured her sick family by simply covering them every day with fresh earth, leaving only their eyes open, and she said: "Earth make me, and earth take good care to make me to be healthy. Earth make me to be healthy, and earth take good care to make me to be healthy."

TOUCHY.—Blue-eyed Charley Day had a cousin near his own age, whose name was Harry Knight.
When they were about eight years old, and began to go to the public school, the boys called them "Day and Night."

Curiosities of Wooling.
In olden times it was the fashion for a suitor to go down on his knees to a lady when he asked her to become his wife, which, with very stout gentlemen, was an uncomfortable proceeding.

NEWS IN BRIEF.
The Allentown, Pa., shoe factories are well supplied with operatives.
The estimated value of the last French vine is $400,000,000.
There are 107,057 children between the ages of 8 and 14 in New York.

Many large stories are told about the destructive habits of lions. Some of these are quite exaggerated, but there are some which are not.
The most destructive portions of their range is the country about the Cape of Good Hope, where they are found in the greatest numbers.