The late 4th of July celebrations throughout the country have demonstrated that there is a general feeling in favor of the Centennial celebration. Almost every one talks in a vein of the highest anticipation of that event.

Miss Lizzie De Haes, while playing on a piano in her father's house, at Howard, Centre county, had a visit from a blacksnake. Not liking the snake's company, she called her father, who killed the reptile. It was seven feet two inches long.

A. J. Green, formerly of the Sixty-ninth, was in town last week, accompanied by his son and daughter, visiting friends. He was in the enjoyment of health, and to our eyes appeared a finer-looking man than when we knew him during our boyhood days.

Lutiana county Democrats, through their convention, nominated Wm. Bigler for Governor, and notified that gentleman of the nomination. Mr. Bigler sent a reply, which in substance is, he is no candidate unless his party make him one; he is entirely in the hands of his party.

The theatrical professors Robinson and Craig, are the greatest public comedians known in the county. Their latest play of soliciting, along the streets, in the costume that combined the dress of the "Continental," brother Jonathan, and the present every-day fashion, were highly humorous.

A few days ago a horse owned by Judge Tyson frightened at the explosion of a squib on Main street, upset the wagon to which he was hitched, and cantered through several streets before he was caught. The man who drove the team was uninjured, the wagon was wrecked, the horse was unharmed and the harness was entire.

Tilton is born a combat. He failed to make a case. If Becker refuses to stand the result, and should strike back, New York juries will receive a parcel of injured people who expected to land anywhere else than in jail when they connected the suit. There is some hope for New York yet.—False witnesses will not always help one through.

Last week Emanuel Meyer, of Fernanagh township, cut 31 acres of good wheat, adjacent to town, in two and a half days, with four binders only. It was a feat worth talking about—one that would have rejoiced the hearts of the fathers of bygone generations. The names of the binders are worth publishing. They are: A. A. Stoner, of Fernanagh township, Daniel Landis, of Harrisburg, John Hackenberger, of Fernanagh township, and J. M. McIlwain, of Millintown. The reaper used is a "Kirby," and has been in service under Mr. Meyer's management, every year, in harvest during the past fourteen years.

Some days ago a man and a woman came to town with scores of balloons, of some crimson colored material. The children soon became interested, because they floated so nicely in the air at the end of a string, or, when left go, floated to a great height and out of sight. By evening the streets presented the queerest of sights. Dozens of little round balloons, about the size of a man's head, were to be seen floating at one time. If the little people had been clothed in Chinese costume it would have required no vivid imagination to imagine the location in China. A number of balloons escaped, and what is the most singular thing about the escaped spheres, is the one that they nearly all chanced or happened, or by regular work of the currents of air landed or came down on the farm of Mr. Wm. Banks in Fernanagh township. His children, it is said, captured nearly a dozen.

This is the season of the year for fish and snake stories. It is rarely, however, that fish and snakes combine in one and the same tale. As there are exceptions to all things, so, too, one may be found to fish and snake stories. This summer it has been reserved to Moore, of the Independents, to combine the snake and fish in one common story. He relates that while fishing in the vicinity of the Lewistown dam, he was informed by an aged and respectable inhabitant of that vicinity, that some time since a man fishing, not for any particular kind of fish, but for all kinds that chose to bite at his bait, caught on a hook and line a large snake, "alive and a kicking," with as much vitality as fish of his kind have, and that he was much delighted with its size, and rejoiced over the prospect of a rich and savory meal on it when prepared for the table. But, alas! his stomach was nauseated, and his whole body quivered with disgust at the sight of a water snake ten inches long crawling out of the fish's belly when he opened it. Tom says the inhabitant acknowledges to a strong appetite for snake, but reptile and fish mixed, he could not endure. Next.

An exchange gives the experience of a man in Northampton county as an illustration of how a man may be poisoned by a potato bug, as follows: Edward Anthony, of Freemansburg, Northampton county, was destroying potato bugs, and one of the bugs was accidentally crushed in his fingers. He was at the time perspiring in his face and forehead, and took his hand in which the bug was crushed for the purpose of wiping the perspiration off, and from this cause his face became very much poisoned, and his body likewise, wherever the perspiration reached. Mr. Anthony is suffering intensely from the effects of the poison.

On Saturday afternoon, as Mr. John W. Kell, residing on the farm of Mr. John Dam, in Spring township, was mowing, a ball on the machine seat broke and threw him off. Mr. Kell, seeing he was falling on the cutter-bar, tried to throw himself back, and succeeded in clearing the knives, except with his left hand, which was caught and cut off close to the wrist. In cutting it off, the knives shattered the bones somewhat, so that a further amputation was necessary. This was successfully done, and at last accounts Mr. Kell was doing as well as could be expected.—Bloomfield Times, last week.

THE West Chester Republican says: One of the most despicable attempts at robbery of which we have heard was made at the Coventryville M. E. church the other night. The old edifice is being torn down to make way for a new one, and some one attempted to rob the corner-stone. Happily, however, the wrong corner was struck and the thief got nothing for his pains.

The same paper also relates the experience of a Chester county man in the grasshopper region of the West, as follows: Mr. George W. Hawley returned a few days since from an extended visit to Missouri, Illinois and Ohio, and has given us his views and experiences regarding the Kansas grasshopper which he met in Cass county, Mo. Like many others, he was formerly incredulous and thought the stories about the numbers and destructiveness of the scourge were greatly exaggerated, but contact compelled him to believe. Not a spear of anything green is to be seen in the wake of the grasshopper. The corn and grass is eaten down to the roots, young trees and currants, gooseberries and other shrubbery totally destroyed, the leaves, tender twigs and even the bark being stripped off. In the forests the underbrush is entirely eaten and the leaves stripped from the tallest trees except the topmost branches. The wool is even eaten off the sheeps' backs, the fatty substance it contains making it palatable to the insatiable and hungry hopper. They penetrate into dwellings and devour even clothing. Mr. Hawley said he pared an apple and threw the parings out of the window. In an instant they were surrounded by a hundred grasshoppers, and in less than three minutes not a vestige of the parings remained. The only field plant they do not seem to relish is what is known among farmers as the iron weed, but they will eat this when very hungry. Of the hopper, he says it is not quite so large as the Chester county breed, but is more active. It is of a different color, and sheds its shell like a locust. It will run along the ground for quite a long distance and then make a tremendous hop. They have eaten everything up in that region and are leaving the country, compelled to go to carry kinsapsacks. Like Sherman in his march to the sea, they have "foraged liberally on the country," so liberally that to return over the same route would be starvation. They have therefore removed to the North ca masse.—This scourge seems to make its appearance every twenty years, this being the third time it has come with that period intervening. Speaking of the grasshopper, Mr. Hawley says that in 1838 they were afflicted with them. They came in swarms and destroyed much of the grain. They even ate the fences, the rails, after they had been foraged on, looking as though they had been dressed with a drawing knife. Forks left standing in the harvest field over night had the handles eaten full of holes before morning.

MALAKIA—The decayed and decaying vegetation of newly settled lands, when damp, exhale a miasmatic poison which, absorbed through the lungs into the blood, causes the intermittent fevers and kindred diseases, which prevail in our Western States and Territories. But this great scourge of our rich alluvial bottoms in the West, is now robbed of its sting. Doctor Ayer has discovered an antidote which effectually neutralizes its venom; has combined it in a remedy—"Ayer's Sarsaparilla"—which rarely, or, as some of our neighbors say, never fails. It is reliable both for prevention and cure. With it, men may live with complete immunity from the malignant effluvia which has hitherto rendered many localities almost uninhabitable. Those suffering from Chills and Fever may find in it immediate relief, and those exposed will find sure protection from attack, by taking it in small quantities as a preventive.—Illinois Democrat.

Card of Thanks. July 12, 1875. Mr. Editor: Dear Sir, Be kind enough to permit me through your valuable paper to return many thanks to my kind neighbors and friends for hauling lumber and helping to raise a new barn on the spot where the one stood. As the barn is nearly completed, I will return to my new home in the borough of Millintown, where I will seek for a new field of labor, leaving my best wishes with my neighbors and friends, hoping that they may ever prosper in this life, and reach a place in the world to come of happiness and peace, and that their kindness to me may be as broad cast upon the waters, though unknown and unseen to them, return after many days. Respectfully, G. W. SMITH.

SHINGLES.—The choice shingles received by Mr. Smith, of Thompsonstown, mentioned by Mr. Evans in the Sentinel and Republican of June 30, were shipped by one of our dealers in an adjoining town, from S. P. Swartz & Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., who have sold about a million of these shingles in this State during the past eight months, much below the price ranging for State shingles of similar quality, and find them giving the best of satisfaction. They deal in every variety of Michigan lumber, especially dressed lumber, and offer special inducements to the trade. A dealer in another town says: "Our shingles give perfect satisfaction. Give me your card please for another load of the same kind, and also for a car load of your select lumber."

This is not a local, but it will do to read in any locality in these days when boys and girls are men and women before they are out of their teens. "A fourteen-year-old girl in Sandy Hill, N. Y., eloped with a school boy, got married, and returned home with him to be forgiven. She was soundly spanked by her mother, and the husband kicked eighteen times by her father. They had never read anything like that in novels." It was an autonomic infatuation.
