The July returns to the Department of Agriculture show that the acreage in corn is about eight per cent greater than last year. New England has reduced her acreage about one and a half per cent, and the Pacific States about one per cent. All the great corn growing regions have increased their acreage—the middle States two per cent, the south Atlantic States three per cent, the Gulf States ten per cent, the inland southern States twelve per cent, the States north of the Ohio seven per cent, the States west of the Mississippi fourteen per cent.

The condition of the crop is below the average in the New England, middle and south Atlantic States, the minimum condition (82) being in Rhode Island. Florida and Alabama are also below the average, but the other Gulf States and the inland southern States are above, the maximum (112) being in Mississippi. All the other States except Missouri (103) are below the average, the minimum condition (82) being in Wisconsin.

PEOPLE in the eastern part of this State pronounce the potato bug a complete exterminator of the much dreaded weed called the horse nettle.

A recent writer writes as follows of the bug and that weed: Some people have long used the potato bug and made it an ingredient of blister plaster for the lower animals with good effect. But we learn that the bug is volunteering as a benefactor as well as a destroyer. Among other things, they destroy the horse nettle, which a Chester county farmer calls one of the worst, if not the worst, weed that grows. It is also most difficult to root out. To destroy it in grass fields is utterly impossible, and to clear plowed fields it requires constant and daily cutting for years before it can be all killed and rooted out. It appears to have been first introduced by the late Humphrey Marshall, at his Botanical Garden in Marshall, when it escaped to the surrounding neighborhood. Several large patches are found near West Chester that have for a long time been the source of anxiety to careful farmers in their neighborhood. "On my own property is a small patch, never over ten feet square, that I have constantly watched for some eight years, never suffering a plant to go to seed, but I dug up and destroyed every root that I could find during that time, without yet succeeding in entirely destroying it. The potato bug seems, by its constant and vigorous attack upon this plant, to have destroyed whole fields of it on the Schuylkill. So that to some farmers its appearance will prove a blessing rather than an evil, if it should succeed in destroying this plant, that is so tenacious to life."
