

MORNING.

Day is dawning. Sun and wind. Through the mist that blind it. Tremble on the rippin' tide. What is the world to do?

Light and life about him shed. A transcendent vision. Mailed in gold and fire standards. And with splendours shaken.

Some account of this secret political society, which became so notorious and whose influence was so widely extended in Italy, France and elsewhere some sixty years ago.

But the carbonari, although their unwillingness to bear any foreign yoke had originally given them the character of patriots, leaned more and more toward republicanism.

The trial of the Corsican Garenne, who in accordance with the decree of the ultra republicans had stabbed a fellow member for having given the secret of the Society to the excitement.

In 1821 the Government was officially informed that the Society existed in twenty-five of the eighty-six departments of France.

In 1814, a hungry plot entered a New York porter house on Pearl street, where lunch as well as drink could be obtained.

Larger Telescopes Wanted. When we consider the enormous distances that the stars are from us, it is not surprising that we can only see them as they are.

By far too many people fancy that they are not appreciated according to their merits. "I want to make a name for myself," says an aspiring young man.

Just the thing to be done, in order that astronomical observation may advance as it ought to do.

The Chinese Medical System. The medical treatment of a sick Chinaman in Chinatown, merits the attention of the "Medical World."
