For the Sentinel and Republican.

Morning, Noon and Night.

When the long, long night is past, And rust's sweet sleep is o'er, When the sun his shadows casts Over the earth once more,

Then comes morning, day's fair bloom, Chasing darkness all away, Changing that which was all gloom Into brightest beaming day.

Now she comes, arrayed in jewels, Bright her smiling face appears, With the sunbeams dancing round her, And the dew drops nestling near.

Swiftly now the hours fly, And the dew is kissed away; Softly, gently, sweetly by, This same beaming orb of day.

Thus the day wears on and onward, Until high above we see Noontide's bright and glorious sunbeams Smiling down on you and me.

Now the shady places are sought, Where the placid waters flow, Where the hard of God hath wrought A place for weanymen to go.

See that sun is now declining, Toward the far off western hills; See that brightest silver living Decking every cloud and rill.

When the golden sun is setting, Draping valleys o'er and o'er, When old "Mother Earth" is letting All her children rest once more.

When the toils of day are over, And the weary ones at rest; When we see a spirit hover O'er us, round us, whispering east.

When the twinkling stars are gleaming, One by one they all appear, And the moon is mildly beaming, Thus we know that night is here.

Views. "An old farm house, with meadows wide, And sweet with clover on each side; A bright-eyed boy, who looks from out The door with woodpile wreathed about, And wishes his one thought all day, 'Oh, if I could but fly away, From this dull spot to the world to see, How happy, happy, happy, How happy I should be!'"

REED'S GAP, Nov. 28, 1875. Mr. Editor: On the night of the 24th inst., the store house of Dobbs Bros. & Co., with all its contents was entirely consumed by fire. About half past 11 o'clock the alarm of fire was sounded. When I arrived at the scene the roof of the building was partially enveloped in flames—the fire bursting down the stairway in all its fury. The heat at this stage of the burning was so intense that it was not possible for any one to enter the building.

Messrs. Irwin and Dobbs, the proprietors, were both absent when the fire broke out. Mr. Irwin had gone from home the afternoon previous, some twenty miles on business. Mr. Dobbs had closed the store about half-past seven o'clock in the evening, at least an hour earlier than usual, and had gone to the house of a neighbor on some business. When about a quarter of a mile from home on his return he saw the building on fire, and immediately sounded the alarm.

The store house was lightly insured in the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Clover Creek, Blair Co., Pa. The goods were partially covered by insurance in the Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa. Various opinions prevail as to the origin of the fire. Some are of the belief that the store was first robbed and then set on fire. From indications observable by the writer, the fire was not accidental.

A Great Book. Every Family Should Have It. A collection of upwards of Thirty Thousand Names of German, Swiss, Dutch, French and other immigrants in Pennsylvania, from 1727 to 1776, with a statement of names of ships, whence they sailed, and date of their arrival at Philadelphia, chronologically arranged, together with the necessary historical and other notes. Also, an Appendix, containing list of more than One Thousand German and French name in New York prior to 1712, by Prof. I. DANIEL RUPP. Second Revised and Enlarged Edition, with German Translation. There are hundreds of people in Juniata county who by the aid of this book, and little trouble, may trace their descent to European homes. Published by I. KOHLER, 202 North Fourth Street, Philadelphia, at the low price of $2.50, gilt edged $3.00.
