Republican State Convention.
HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE COMMITTEE.
HARRISBURG, February 1, 1876.
In pursuance of a resolution of the Republican State Convention, adopted at a meeting held in Harrisburg this day, a Republican State Convention, to be composed of delegates from each Senatorial and Representative district, to the number to which such district is entitled in the Legislature, is hereby called to meet in the city of Harrisburg, at 12 o'clock, noon, on WEDNESDAY, MARCH 29, 1876, for the purpose of nominating an Electoral ticket and of electing Senatorial and Representative delegates to represent the State in the Republican National Convention, to be held at Cincinnati, Ohio, on the 14th day of June, 1876. By order of the Committee,
HENRY M. HOTT, Chairman.
A. WILSON NORRIS, Secretary.

The Centennial bill has passed the United States Senate. The vote stood 41 for and 15 against.

AND now the report circulates that General Sherman has friends who will urge him as a Republican candidate for the Presidency.

The Board of Trade of New York City have asked Congress to repeal the law that provides for the resumption of specie payment by January 1, 1879.

One hundred and seventy-two churches were invited to participate in the Beecher advisory council. One hundred and twenty-five have accepted the invitation.

The Lower House of the Legislature of this State has passed a resolution asking Congress to enact a law to pay citizens of the border for losses sustained by the invasion of 1863.

Germany and China will have a war. A German schooner was plundered while lying by the coast of China. Bismarck says pay the damages. If China does not do it, the world knows what the result will be.

Beecher's answer to Bowen is, "As for myself, I pronounce the allegation of Mr. Bowen—false, and with Almighty God before me, and the Judgment day, I arraign him as a slanderer and a liar."

In this the centennial year of the American Republic, it is said the world will come to an end. The prophet, however, puts off the "crash of matter and the wreck of worlds" until after the 4th of July.

THE second sensational Canadian elopement case proves to be no elopement case at all. The young lady who came to New York with the Irish Aristocrat did so by the consent of her father. He acted as the young lady's escort and protector.

THE trial of General Babcock, President Grant's private Secretary, for complicity in the whisky frauds of the West is progressing at St. Louis, Missouri. President Grant gave evidence in the case before the Chief Justice of the United States, at Washington, and the evidence was sent to St. Louis, where it will be used in the case. The President testifies to his belief in the innocence of Babcock, and it is said his testimony sheds considerable light on the case.

THERE is good reason to believe that the ballot boxes of the borough of Mifflintown and Fernmeath townships were broken open and their contents examined, at a date somewhere between the time they were removed from the custody of the respective Election Boards last fall and the time of their return to the Election Boards on Tuesday morning. To break the seal of a ballot box after it has gone from the custody of an Election Board is a grave offense, and the man or men who were guilty of the act should be punished as the law requires. A number of years of imprisonment and a fine of a thousand dollars would act as a wholesome restraint on the parties who thus violated the law. What is the use of denouncing such work in cities, if it is to be allowed in our midst.

Cumulative Voting in the South.
An exchange put it in this way: The cumulative voting, which enables a minority to steal a corporation in Pennsylvania, is nothing to the same kind of voting which enables the minority in Mississippi to steal a State. They have reduced the matter to a science, down there, and when any one of the majority quietly claims that he has some right to be heard, they shoot him and lay him out of the way. The 30,000 Democratic votes in that State have been cumulated into 120,000 by judicious counting and the aid of powder and ball.

The Philadelphia Times is in court on a charge of libel. The plaintiff is named J. M. Roberts. The trouble grew out of a Spiritualistic performance after the Katie King fashion, which Roberts attended, and at which he made himself conspicuous, thereby falling under the censure of a Times reporter.

Hon. Beverdy Johnson, was found dead at 8.15 on the evening of the 10th, in the grounds surrounding the Executive Mansion of Annapolis, Md. He had dined with the Governor that evening at 5 o'clock and was in fine spirits. It was believed that he had withdrawn from the other guests to take a nap, and his absence was not considered strange.

Andersonville.
The following communication was written for and published in Forney's Press of the 10th inst. It is the testimony of one who suffered in Andersonville. Jeff Davis and his confederates have not had justice meted out to them in this world. If it were possible they would deny away the cruelties of the South, in the interest of human degradation. Hundreds of thousands will render stronger testimony than this communication contains, under the light of the judgment day. But to the letter—
Sir: As I was a prisoner of the war for eighteen months, my experience and observation may have some weight in determining the following questions, which have been raised by the recent speech of Mr. Blaine:—
First. Were Union prisoners cruelly treated in Southern prisons?
Second. If cruelly treated, was it the necessary result of circumstances or of hatred?
To take up the first proposition, I say that we were cruelly and inhumanly treated. Men were shot down by the rebel guards repeatedly, three cases of which I was eye-witness to, and many more came under my notice. One poor fellow I was watching, while on his way to the doctor, entirely worn out by hunger and starvation, and so debilitated that he used the "dead-line" as a means of support while on his way, was shot by the guard because he touched the rail forming or designating the "dead-line." Another, thinking to air an old army blanket of which he was the fortunate possessor, was shot down by the guard, the blanket falling on him in such a way as to cover the upper part of his chest and face, but although covered in this manner, the rising and falling of the chest in the throes of death was plainly seen by us, but we dare not go to his assistance, the guards on each side of the one who had discharged his rifle, leveling their rifles at us and threatening to shoot any one who would go near the dying man. The other case was that of a man lifting some water out of the swampy creek or marsh running through the center of the prison at Andersonville. At the headwater of this creek the rebel guard had located their cook-house, and as a consequence the water which passed to us for drinking, cooking, and all other purposes, was covered by a scum of grease. Now there was a rock jutting out of the water and on a line with the dead-line. The scum floating on the surface of the water would break at the head of the rock, making the water appear cleaner there than anywhere else, and our men would naturally try to lift it at that spot; and it was while doing so I saw the third man shot. Many were shot here for the same reason; but I speak of what I was eye-witness to only. To enumerate the different acts of cruelty, or even the different kinds of cruelty practiced on us, would make this article too long for a newspaper paragraph, so I will confine myself to one more. One day our usual rations were not sent into the stockade. The men, although starved, bravely awaited the time until the rebels should see fit to send us victuals. The second day passed as the first—no victuals yet—not a morsel of anything to break our fast with during two entire days. Nor was the end yet; it was not until the evening of the third day that our inhuman jailors sent us food.

The London World describes a new device for burying the dead, as follows: "The body is placed in a glass box, the top of which is affixed a metal rod. As soon as the earth is filled in, a battery is connected with the rod, and an electric shock shatters the coffin into a thousand pieces, thus allowing the earth to press upon the dear departed, and allowing him to return to dust in a speedy way."
In the town of Roxborough, near the line that separates the county of Philadelphia and Montgomery county, about one o'clock on the morning of the 9th inst., four burglars attempted to enter a private residence by the back entrance. A policeman heard them enter the yard, and demanded to know their business. They answered by firing on him. He stepped behind a cherry tree and returned the fire until his revolver was exhausted of its charges, with good result, having wounded two of the thieves. The policeman then hurried off for more ammunition and reinforcements. Meanwhile the burglars took up the one that was so badly wounded in the hip that he could not walk, and also left. The policeman reinforced returned, took up the bloody trail the thieves left, and pursued them so closely that they were compelled to submit to capture or drop their companion thief, which they did. The police got him. The others escaped.

Samuel Clark, of Mercer county, had a painful adventure recently. He dreamed eight men were in his room, four of whom he ejected. The remainder were too much for him, and he actually sprang out of the window head foremost and ran to the house of a neighbor, to whom he related his thrilling experience. The two went back to Clark's residence and found no intruders and his wife sound asleep. In the fall Clark was badly cut in the head and had a six inch gash in the thigh.

A short time since Daniel Knoebel, of Shamokin township, Northumberland county, lost three head of cattle. They licked the paint off a newly-painted wagon one evening and died the next day.

A mad dog passed through Georgetown, about sixteen miles below Sunbury, on the 10th inst., and bit every thing of life it met. One of the residents of the town, whose name we did not learn, was bitten in the arm, and a colt three years old, a cow and dog belonging to the man were also bitten by the savage brute. Last Wednesday, the ninth day after the visit of the rabid animal the colt showed signs of hydrophobia, and for three succeeding days, until Friday, when he died, raved most piteously. He tore his flesh and bit himself and everything he could reach. The people for miles around came to see the poor animal and the sight he presented was pitiful in the extreme. Death stopped his suffering on Friday last and grave apprehensions have since been entertained about the man. Dr. Kershner has expressed the opinion that unless something is done to counteract it, the terrible disease will make the bitten man a victim as well as his cow and dog. The doctor wanted to cauterize the wound, but the man had no faith in the treatment and says he will take the chances. His case will be anxiously watched by his neighbors and friends.—Sunbury Democrat, Jan 27.

Notwithstanding Governmental and other drawbacks, miners and others have obtained a lodgement in "The Black Hills" as may be learned from a dispatch as follows from Omaha, under date of the 7th inst.: A letter from Custer City, in the Black Hills, of January 25th says over forty houses are now up and sixty in process of erection. Water was found twenty feet from the surface. A steam sawmill has been in operation eight days. Flour is twelve dollars per hundred pounds and shoulder bacon thirty cents per pound.—New parties arrived here this winter, and made new lawns. Old pioneers find mining claims jumped. Miners from the North, this side of the Big Horn, report new discoveries far surpassing any yet made. Thirty men left here to-day to prospect them. Red Cloud and several hundred warriors have gone North. They are reported to have said they would die on the war path rather than stay on the reservation and starve. Sitting Bull will co-operate with him. Everybody is well.

A son of Cyrus Border, aged about eleven years, residing in Cornwall township, Lebanon county, Pa., fell from a tree on Monday a week, and died instantly.
Senator Christianity, of Michigan, was married in Washington, on the morning of the 8th inst., to Miss Lillie Leubegeel, lately clerk in the Treasury Department. Senator Ferry, his colleague, officiated as groomsmen. Senator Christianity is nearly sixty-four years of age, and his bride is represented to be nineteen. His former wife died only nine months ago.
