There was a large attendance, and the mmediate relatives of the deceased were so overcome by grief that at the burial were left to the care of some friends who volunteered their services in paying the last sad tribute to the dead. Numbers gathered around the grave to see the coffin lowered, but the men having charge were so intoxicated that it was clumsily done. Before the first spadefull of earth was thrown upon the coffin one of the party fell into the grave and could not extricate himself. A companion, no better off than he, attempted to rescue him, but be also fell into the grave, and there both struggled in vain until some of the sober at tendants, who were shocked and justly indignant at the occurence, lifted the drunken pair out, and pushing them
